London, July 12.—It was strongly rumored in service and parliamentary clubs yesterday afternoon that the British Government was preparing to send 100,000 Indian troops to China in the autumn. A Foreign Office official said that no such number of men could possibly be spared from India, nor was it possible for Great Britain to add to her present responsibilities by sending out such a force. Wherever secured, however, he added, it may safely be asserted that strong British reinforcements will be on their way to the far east before the end of September.

CHINESE NEWS VIA BERLIN.

2,000 Boxes Attacked French Settlement—Routed by Russians.

Berlin, July 12.—The German Consul at Tien Tsin cables that foreign settlements were continually bombarded by the Chinese from July 5 to July 8. On July 6 the 2,000 Boxers attacked the French settlements and were routed by the Russians. The British and Japanese forces on July 7 bombarded the Chinese batteries. Towards evening Chinese shells penetrated the roof of the German Consulate and caused an outbreak of fire which was extinguished after slight damage had been done. Nearly all the families of foreigners left Tien Tsin for Taku July 4. Von Schwartzenstein, envoy-extraordinary of Germany to the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, has been appointed German Minister to China in succession to the late Baron Von Ketteler. He starts for the far east in a few days accompanied by Baron Von der Goltz.

IN IMMINENT DANGER.

Gen. Mahas Said to Have Defeated the Allied Troops at Tien Tsin.

London, July 12.—The Express this morning publishes a despatch from Tien Tsin dated Friday last via Che Foo, saying:

"Gen. Mahas defeated the allied troops and re-occupied the Chinese arsenal after inflicting great loss upon its defenders.

"The engagement lasted six hours and was fought with great determination on both sides. The Chinese were eventually able to utilise the effective guns of the fort abutting on the city walls near the Tsotai's Yamen, the allied troops suffering severely from lack of heavy guns and cavalry.

"The Japanese commander sent an urgent appeal to hurry reinforcements as the allies were in imminent danger of a general defeat."

procure meals at the comfortable hotels in the village.

A perusal of the folders and time cards issued by the Company show that the trips may be conveniently made, either in part or over the whole route. Burleigh is left at 2 p.m., Bobcaygeon reached at 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. on alternate days. From Chemong the boat departs at 9.45 a.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday for Burleigh Falls, which is reached in time to connect with the steamers leaving for Lakefield. From Bobcaygeon for Lindsay one can sail at 6.45 a.m. and 3.10 p.m., or from Lindsay for Bobcaygeon at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. To cover the upper reach, by steamer Manita, the sailing hours is, from Lindsay, at 3.30 p.m., calling at Sturgeon Point, and passing Fenlon Falls on to Coboconk, returning the following morning.

From the hour one leaves Peterborough the route of the Trent Valley Canal is follows, from the river, along the banks of which the train rolls, is now a series of reaches of still water, made by the several dams recently built. Through the lake and on up to the head of Balsam lake is a continuation of the Canal route, not by winding streams, but over the surface of the noble lakes, and connecting waters. At Lovesick lock is seen one of the finest views of typical Canadian scenery. To the left is the entrance to Deer Bay, famed for its fishing possibilities. Further up is Victoria Heights, a rocky bluff, from the base of which flows a spring of ice cold water, so impregnated with lime from the rock that, in low water, the shore is snow white for some distance up and down. Drink of this spring and in a minute one thirsts as bad as ever. Buckhorn is a place where fishermen do most congregate. The rapids here have been drowned out by the dam at Lovesick. Through Buckhorn lake is a lovely sail, past the Three Sisters Islands into Chemong, or keeping to the right, along the narrow channel known as Gannon's Narrows, into Pigeon Lake, and up to Bobcaygeon. Sturgeon Lake is an inland sea for extent, broken into by the long peninsula of Sturgeon Point, a popular watering place and summer resort. Above Fenlon Falls Cameron Lake claims attention. It is a beautiful stretch of water, fed by the Gull and Burnt Rivers. The lock at Rosedale brings the steamer into Balsam lake, the finest and last of the chain. Away off to the left, as one one voyages to Coboconk, is the opening of the section of the Trent Canal, and a short distance inland are seen the works of the Peat Company, that is making the effort to convert the contents of a deep bog into marketable fuel.

Taken altogether, the trip is one that may well be taken and thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Bunton, the Company's agent at Peterborough, will give all information, and folders, time cards and rate cards may be had for the asking from any railway agent, or from the Company's offices at Bobcaygeon.

ABOUT A WHEELING TRIP IN EUROPE

REV. F. D. ROXBURGH'S LAST LETTER FROM THE CONTINENT

A Visit to Switzerland—A Journey Along the Rhine—Pro-Boer Feeling in Germany.

The following letter from F. D. Roxburgh, son of Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood, who is in Europe travelling and studying, is interesting reading. This letter is one of a series sent by him to the Norwood Register during a wheeling trip on the continent. It was published some days ago by the Register. It will be read with interest, the Review having published his former letters:—

Berlin, Germany, June 8, 1900.

Dear Register,—Every tourist on the continent goes into ecstasies over the Italian and Swiss lake districts. This was the feast that was spread before my American friend and me at the time I left off in my last letter. From Milan we pedalled northward into the arms of the Alps, to be wrapped up for a week among the folds and fissures of the grandest natural garment which any part of the earth is clothed. At one time we were wheeling along the lake side, glorying in the whiteness of the mountain peaks and the blueness of the water, spinning through stone tunnels and around delightful bays; at another we were on board the steamer enjoying with scores of others the wild beauty of the untouched nature by which we were surrounded.

As we left the Italian Lake district and journeyed further northward the mountains closed upon us. Mile after mile we went, onward and upward, the walls of our pathway coming nearer and nearer until we arrived at the mouth of the St. Gotthard tunnel. We were enclosed and unable to go independently, any further. We longed to go over the top of the greatest mountain pass, perhaps in the travelled world, but the Swiss soldiers told us of banks of untrodden snow, of 13 miles without any human helper, of how the St. Bernard dogs would search for us, until we were persuaded to take the train, and proceed to the world of northern Europe on the other side by means of the 10 mile tunnel. We were satisfied with our decision, when we came out into daylight and found on looking backward far over the dark passage through which we had travelled, nothing but snow and mist, a vast mountain in the clouds.

Our first discovery when we began our intercourse, with the people was to find that they had the language of Germany, and we must learn to speak Deutch. Switzerland is unique in its physical features, but in reference to language the people have none of their own. Those on the southern slope of the Alps speak Italian, those on the northern, German, and we have heard that those on the eastern speak French.

Then there were the peculiar Swiss houses which greatly interested us with their long inclining thatched roofs, and their finely shingled sides. Another feature was the appearance of spruce and hemlock trees. We had been so long in Italy under its clear and unclouded sky, that we found it a pleasant luxury to enjoy some forest shade.

Then came the Swiss lake district, beautiful and interesting and full of association, in connection with the country's hero, Wm. Tell. There is a monument in Altorf indicating the spot where the patriot stood when he shot his bow, and another, a little distance away, over the place where the son was stationed while he held the apple-target on his head.

But we were near the borders of Switzerland all too soon and in sight of the Rhine, Germany's great water-way, which was to be our almost constant companion for the next 350 miles. It was at Basel that we first gazed upon the great Deutch river. We were surprised to find it so broad and grand, a stream of which any country might be proud. A few miles out of Basel we crossed the German boundary and then began our association with another people, a people more like ourselves than any with whom we had come in contact. I need not go into details of our journey along the Rhine. I might simply say that on the whole it was somewhat disappointing. After having crossed the Alps three times, the highlands of the Rhine could not be supposed to present to us anything grander than what we had seen in Switzerland. The castles and fortresses were, however, wild and formidable looking, and the cities were much more business-like and thriving than those of dreamy Italy. We found the country everywhere, clean and well cared for; elegant roads, beautiful farms, good horses, everything in first-class condition. It was evident to us that the Germans are not a careless, indolent race, but rather, a people who must have everything in order and in first-class shape.

There are many memorial monuments to be seen along the Rhine, and in fact throughout Germany. Luther and his fellow Reformers receive a large share of the people's affections. But Frederick the Great, Queen Louise, William the First, and Bismark are almost idolized by every true German. Even a Britisher in spite of all his prejudices cannot fail to admit and admire the strength and beauty of the characters which belong to these four great German names.

One outstanding feature of the German Empire is that the nation is harnessed and ready for action any time. One would almost conclude that here is a land under military despotism. Every able-bodied German man must put in his time in the army, from one to three years of the best part of his life. The country is fairly alive with soldiers. In Alsace-Lorraine, where it is necessary to watch the French, the military element seems to predominate. Stand on any street corner and you can count a dozen soldiers or officers, and it is very evident from their bearing that they are under a severe discipline, and that they are at no child's play.

It is to be earnestly hoped that Britain will never come in conflict with this great armed nation. It is hardly likely that she will, since her interests and concerns are so different, but should such a horrible issue ever eventuate, the thought of what would happen almost makes the heart sicken.

As far as the diplomats are concerned there seems to be nothing but a desire for harmony between England and Germany. The Emperor has on a number of occasions gone out of his way, one might say, to intimate friendliness towards Great Britain. He has subscribed to the British war Relief Fund and to the Indian Famine Fund. He was off to shake hands with the Prince of Wales in a few hours after the latter's narrow escape from the pistol shot of the Belgian anarchist. He wished the English regiment of which he is colonel, as much good as any English officer could say, when they left for South Africa, and he sent his congratulations to London, on hearing of the relief of Ladysmith. The Queen is the Kaiser's grandmother, and this may in some measure account for his personal attitude, but the German statesmen are also in their wisdom leaning in a friendly way towards Great Britain.

I am sorry to report, however, that the German people are not of the same inclination. They are almost unanimously pro-Boer in their sympathy. It grieves them when the British have a triumph and it delights them when they have a reverse. They actually cannot conceal their animosity in many cases, but show British visitors to their town and cities uncalled for discourtesy.

This Anglo-phobia is so unreasonable that a Britisher becomes indignant and then his independence is looked upon as pride and arrogance. It is to be hoped that all this is only a passing humor due to the fact that a Dutch speaking people are feeling the strong hand of our Empire. We may believe that this is so when we learn that Americans were treated in a similar way during the Spanish-American war, perhaps because it hurts the Germans to see an old continental power crumbling beneath the onward-moving Anglo Saxon.

We wound up our cycling tour at Cologne, not very far from the mouth of the Rhine, the cyclometer registering 1,428 miles. From there we came by train to Berlin, and here we intend to stay until we learn sufficient of the German language to be able to understand the lectures at the University. Space will not permit of a description of this most beautiful city, with so many monuments, bridges, and palatial buildings, that it might fairly represent the glory of ancient Rome. I must thank you for your patience and come to an abrupt close.

Your faithful reader,
FRANK D. ROXBURGH.

Do you read what people say about Hood's Sarsaparilla? It is curing all forms of disease caused or promoted by impure blood.

CEBRATING THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH

John Hetherington, Master.

A number of prominent Orangemen rode in carriages in the procession. Among these were R. H. Holland, Port Hope, Grand Master Ontario East; T. B. Collins, Millbrook, Past Grand Master Ontario East; James Evans, Port Hope, Past Grand Lecturer, Ontario East; H. A. Ward, ex-M.P., Port Hope; W. A. Fallis, ex-M.P.P., Cavan; Robert Weir, Past Grand Master Black Knights; Sidney B. Weir, County Secretary, and Thomas Brown, of No. 30, the oldest Orangeman in town.

On return to Central Park speeches were proceeded with.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

Nothing brings in a crowd like the twelfth of July.

Millbrook and vicinity sent a large and fine looking delegation.

Col. Sanderson Lodge and Nassau Lodge were to the fore as usual.

Grand Master Holland, of Eastern Ontario, was the leader of the contingent from the front.

The man with two drum sticks at one drum was not so much in evidence as in years past.

The paving done on George-st. last month made that the best part of the route for walking.

Omemee had a smart looking band in white coats and caps. They headed the Omemee and Emily contingents.

A big delegation came up from Rice lake and river points to swell the gathering and enjoy the day.

The 57th Regimental band looked really nobby in their white coats, white ties and the natty caps. And their music was as nobby as their looks.

A bugle and drum corps in rough rider style was one of the best marching accompaniments in the parade. They headed the juveniles.

The mottoes included "Welcome," "God Save the Queen," "Prosperity to the British Empire," "Long May She Reign Over Us," "Inniskillen," etc.

All kinds of booths and stands did business to-day. The places along Charlotte and George-sts. seemed to have the call.

Many places for meals and refreshments were opened for the day, but the cool day was not conducive to large sales of iced drinks or the popular lemonade.

One of the fife and drum bands played "There'll be a hot time in the old town To-night, ma Baby," with great vigor coming up the street this morning.

A George-st. temporary restaurant stuck out a signboard with a bill-of-fare which included pickled elephant, whale on toast, canary birds' tongues, hens' teeth in sauce, chicken in the egg and other delicacies.

The train from Port Hope started out with nine coaches, but these were overloaded before Millbrook was reached and a special had to be run up to bring in the Millbrook and Fraserville contingents.

The Orangemen of Peterborough placed the order for decorating the town for the day with the great decorators, J. J. Turner & Sons, and we must say that the work has been completed in a very artistic manner, and it reflects great credit on the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons.

The district included in to-day's celebration here was well represented. Of course the Belmont, Havelock, Norwood, Asphodel and other lodges in the east riding were at Norwood. Campbellford lodges went to the celebration at Trenton.

One of the oldest men in the line of march was Mr. Brown, a member of No. 30, who rode in one of the carriages. He has seen and participated in scores of similar demonstrations, and years do not prevent him getting out on the twelfth.

The Grand Trunk depot was the busiest scene of life during the morning hours. The early trains brough in large numbers of visitors. Among the special trains were one from Lindsay and Reaboro, which arrived at 9.30, one from Omemee and Best's at 10.46, Port Hope and Garden Hill at 10.50, Franklin, Bethany and Millbrook at 11. Most of the lodges from the Lindsay and Port Hope districts came on these specials. The regular trains from Lakefield and Lindsay also brought in large contingents shortly before noon.

A Dog for the Queen.

The first contingent of Australian Bushmen have with them a collie who has been christened Bushie. The dog's portrait has been taken and a framed enlargement sent to the Queen, who is to be asked to accept Bushie, should he survive the perils of the war, as a living memento of Australian novelty. The dog is under the special care of Trooper Battye, a member of a family illustrious in British military history, and probably he will be entrusted with the duty of taking Bushie to England.

A Great Truth.

"I wouldn't do your kind of work even if I could," said Rubberfoot Bill, the sandbagger. "This here thing of gettin a man's confidence an then throwin him down is too low for me."

"It ain't me they have the confidence in," explained Greengoods George. "It is theirselves they are so sure of. See?"—Indianapolis Journal.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE CHINESE TROUBLE

FOREIGNERS WERE MURDERED

London, July 13—The Central News asserts that an official message was received in London to-day announcing that all the foreigners in Pekin were murdered on July 6th.

SAID THE GOVERNMENT HAS RECEIVED THE NEWS

London, July 13—A member or the Japanese Legation says it was reported in diplomatic circles this morning that the Pekin Government had just received a telegram saying the entire British Legation at Pekin had been destroyed and the foreigners murdered. Government officials refuse to talk.

HERE'S ANOTHER STORY

London, July 13—A despatch from Shanghai says the Viceroy of Fulikien has received a despatch from Pekin dated July 7th, announcing that General Nieh with 9,000 men has reached there from Laitna by making a tour of the north. He met and defeated Prince Tuan's army and rescued Prince Chang, but lost 25,000 men in the operation. He is now trying to rescue General Yung Lu and thus save what may be left of the Legations in Pekin. Nieh is favorable to the foreigners. The Japanese Embassy here learns positively that Prince Chung instead of protecting the foreigners is merely the tool of Prince Tuan and used his troops to harass them.

THE WORST INDICATED

Washington, July 13—The State Department at 10:15 o'clock received a bulletin from Consul Goodnow at Shanghai indicating that the worst has happened at Pekin. His information is indefinite and comes through the Government of Shang Tung.

SEND IMPERIAL TROOPS TO HELP

Berlin, July 13—According to a semi-official telegram from Canton, dated Thursday, July 13, Li Hung Chang on July 6 received a written imperial edict, dated June 12 and sent overland, in which all the Governors were urged to despatch troops with the utmost speed to help against the rebels among whom Prince Tuan was clearly indicated. Acting on this edict, which is said to be undoubtedly genuine, Li Hung Chang is sending some thousands of troops to Pekin and the other Governors are probably doing the same.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER

Shanghai, Tnursday, July 12.—The foreign consuls are offering large sums for the production of the letter which a Chinese merchant is said to have received from Pekin, dated June 30th, and saying the Legations had been demolished and the foreigners killed. The merchant however declines to show it; alleging that he fears punishment from the Chinese officials. Rioting is reported to have occurred at Ning Po but no confirmation of the reports have been received.

BOER POSITIONS CAPTURED! WEDNESDAY'S REVERSE!

POSITIONS CAPTURED

Pretoria, July 12—Colonel Mahon, reinforced by General French's brigade, yesterday took all the positions held by the Boers in the neighborhood of Rietfontein. A number of Boer dead were found. The British casualties were trifling.

WEDNESDAY'S DISASTER

Pretoria, July 12—Details are not at hand regarding the disaster to the Licolnshire Regiment on Wednesday. It appears that five companies were ordered on Tuesday to seize and to hold the pass through Magalesburg, in the neighborhood of Dashport. They arrived in the afternoon at the Pass, where three companies with two guns took up a position and camped for the night, leaving two companies in a place south of the pass. The eastern hill was rugged, rocky and inaccessible but further east apparently approachable from the main ridge. At daybreak yesterday the Boers appeared on the eastern kopje and opened a heavy fire. Confusion ensued. The Colonel ordered the men to take up a position on a kopje west of the gap. From this point a hot fight was kept up during the entire day. Nearly every man was killed or wounded. A maxim was brought into action early in the day. The fight was too hot and the men were forced to retire. A sergeant, aided by seven volunteers, saved the gun. There was a continuous fire all along the line, the Lincolnshire regiment vigorously replying. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Boers appeared to the left of the position occupied by the British An officer and 15 men attempted to charge them and fourteen men were killed or wounded as the result. Three companies were practically surrounded but they kept up a steady fire unwaveringly until towards nightfall when their ammunition gave out. The latest arrival from the scene states that at the time this was done the men were taking a good position under cover and with fixed bayonets were awaiting the approach of the Boers. It is feared the losses of the British were numerous. About 30 of the British soldiers straggled back to camp to-day. According to all accounts a great force is being assembled to prevent further progress of the Boers.

LIBERAL WHITEWASH.

The Commissioners Bring Down Their Report About West Elgin.

Toronto, July 13.—The report of the commission appointed to look into the West Elgin irregularities has been handed to the Government. It is very lengthy and exhaustively deals with all the evidence taken at the many sittings of the court. According to the finding, which is unanimous, there was no irregularities in thirty of the polling subdivisions, while in the other eight there were two attempts at personation, one of the latter being arrested. The returning officers in the six other polling subdivisions were not properly appointed, although they acted in good faith, but were imposed upon.

Donald Macnish is cleared, for the report says he was in no way associated or cognizant of any of the fraudulent practices. Neither was the result of the election affected by them nor trace of participation in them was taken by W. T. R. Preston, Alex. Smith, D. F. Macdonald, J. J. Bell, Sullivan or Hopkins.

The evidence satisfied the judges that the West Elgin ballot box was burned with other ballot boxes and there was no design in its destruction. They thought more care could be taken.

SILENCEE ENSHROUDS PEKIN

Everybody, Though. Now Believes Worst Has Happened.

All Efforts of the Powers to Get Direct News From Their Legations—Europeans Said to Be Directing the Chinese Military Operations—European Official Charged With Plotting to Secure the Escape of Gen. Chang.

London, July 12.—(4.10 a.m.)—A terrible veil of silence enshrouds Pekin, and there is nobody but believes the worst has happened. It is taken for granted that all the powers have exhausted every means to get direct news from the legations, and the fact that their efforts have been vain leaves but one interpretation.

The Chinese representative in Berlin denies the statement that Li Hung Chang has sent to him a hopeful telegram. He says that, on the contrary, no direct telegraph message has been received by him from Li Hung Chang for some time past.

Are Europeans Directing Chinese?

The day's news is again restricted to the usual crop of untrustworthy Shanghai rumors, the most serious of which, reported by the correspondent of The Express, is to the effect that Europeans are directing the Chinese operations.

The correspondent asserts that Captain Bailey of H. M. S. Aurora distinctly saw a man in European garb directing the Chinese military operations outside of Tien Tsin. Foreign refugees from Tien Tsin openly accuse a European official, whose name The Express correspondent suppresses and Col. Von Henneken, who was formerly employed to drill the Chinese troops, of being parties to a plot to procure the escape of Gen. Chang and themselves from Tien Tsin before the bombardment, leaving the other foreigners to their fate.

Slaughter By Russians.

Statements are in circulation in Shanghai accusing the Russians of indiscriminate slaughter of friendly Chinese non-combatants, without regard to age or sex.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Express gives the Tien Tsin advices to July 8, when the superior range of the Japanese artillery enabled them to rescue Russians who were hard pressed at the railway station.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Overend have taken a cottage at Chemong for the summer.

ADMIRAL SEYMOUR'S MESSAGE.

Says Chinese Continue to Fire, But He Was Getting More Guns.

London, July 13.—The British Admiralty has received the following despatch from Vice Admiral Seymour:

"Tien Tsin, Saturday, July 7.—The Chinese continue fighting, often extending their lines along the Lutaian Canal to the northeast, and are appearing in great force west of the city.

"Yesterday we bombarded the city and immediate suburbs, which stopped the Chinese gun fire for some time. The French settlement and station are most subject to attack. To-day there was another bombardment.

"Am steadily getting up more guns. Ten thousand troops are now here. More are required, but both the Russian and Japanese are expected."

All the Foreigners Killed.

Shanghai, July 12.—It is reported that a Chinese merchant here has received a letter from Pekin, dated June 30, saying the legations were demolished, and the foreigners killed. It is announced from a good source that 60,000 Russians are marching on Pekin from the north.

Allies Have No Leader.

Tien Tsin, July 4, via Che Foo, July 8, and Shanghai, July 11.—A homeogenous army of half the strength of the allied forces could do better work than is being done by the allies. The operations are dangerously handicapped, and the safety of the city is imperilled by lack of organization and the want of one commander to control all the forces.

Near the End.

New York, July 13.—The Journal and Advertiser prints a cable from Che Foo, July 8, via Shanghai, July 12, which says a courier had just arrived from Sir Robert Hart, director of the Chinese Customs at Pekin. The courier is said to have brought the following message from Sir Robert Hart: "Close to good-bye. Near the end."

Says Prince Ching Was Killed.

London, July 13.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail says the following story regarding the position in Pekin emanates from Chinese official sources: "The two remaining legations, the British and Russian, were attacked in force on the evening of July 6, Prince Tuan being in command. The attackers were divided. Prince Tuan com-

Tokyo Fire Walkers.

A Yokohama correspondent of the Indianapolis Press, who witnessed the religious ceremony of fire walking in Tokyo, says: "There were present diplomats and professors from the Imperial college and an Episcopal bishop, and we think there is sufficient evidence to prove that several Japanese women did walk through the fire. A doubting Thomas gathered up some of the salt in which they rubbed their feet, both before and after their hot walk, to take away and analyze. Another suggested that the bamboo pole that was used to make the path was hollow and may have contained a substance that sifted out as it was drawn backward and forward that destroyed the heat. The little 'amah' of my friend, when asked why the feet were not burned, replied, 'Much pray, much pray.' We have stated facts. The interpretation must come from those versed in the occult sciences."

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, JULY 13, 1900.

Tarte is still master.

Sifton is discredited, but instead of arranging for his retirement, Sir Wilfrid has to keep him in his Cabinet and the Globe attempts to square him with his own party by special pleading.

The decision of Hon. Dr. Borden to amend the Militia Act so as to allow the granting of the title of hon.-colonel only to militia men who have served in this country will be generally endorsed. The appointment of civilians to such positions might be all right in some cases, but in many cases demands would be made by political campaigners and much injury done the service. Canada does not want a great crop of so-called colonels who hardly know a rifle from a pitch fork. Such honors should belong to soldiers alone, and not be available to party hacks or organized wire-pullers or politicians.

Mr. John Ransford, a well-known salt man and having large interests in West Huron, writes to the Clinton News-Record, and gives this result of his observations during a recent tour in the East :—

"All through the maritime provinces the feeling is everywhere in favor of a change of government at the next election. It's in the air; it's all around. Grit and Tory alike look for it and welcome it. I need not say that the old school of respectable Liberals deplore and refuse to countenance as vehemently as the most rabid Tory the utter supreme indifference of the Laurier Government to its ante-election pledges. Dishonesty may endure for a night, but retuributon cometh in the morning."

The Toronto World calls attention to the fact that from evidence produced the new Minister, Mr. Bernier, who succeeds Sir Henri Joly, is a Tartelte. The World says :—

Mr. Bernier, the new Ottawa minister, has publicly apologised for the sending of the contingents to South Africa.

In a speech at Rigaud he said:

"Personally, I should have preferred that the Government had sent no troops to Africa. But circumstances obliged Sir Wilfrid Laurier to act so.

"Nobody was obliged to go to Africa. Those only enlisted who wished to go.

"England asked us if anyone would like to enlist for South African war.

"All that the Government did was to to pay the cost of sending the troops."

It is made clear by Mr. Bernier that he is a Tartelte.

He is opposed to the defence of the British Empire; he declares that Laurier is of the same way of thinking, he adds that Laurier was forced to do something, and that that something consisted merely of permitting our boys to enlist and of paying the cost of transportation.

Laurier volunteers nothing for the empire; what he does he does grudgingly and of necessity; he is not the cheerful giver.

Commenting on the vote in the House of Commons on the Devlin emergency rations report, the Montreal Gazette says that it has caused a confusion of view in the Liberal press that gives an amusing phase to what for the Government is a very serious situation. The cutting down of the Government's majority from forty to fourteen in what is likely to be the last session of this Parliament is in itself bad. The cause of the reduction makes it worse. The party's press is aggravating the situation. One paper takes three or four out of the ten and says they are not good Liberals anyway. Another fixes up a little batch, which it accuses of having sore heads. Another finds some selfish motive for another knot. The effect is the same. It cannot but hurt the party to have it go abroad that it has so many reckless soreheads or dissatisfied members in its parliamentary representation that the Government is not secure in its majority. If on the eve of an appeal to the people men who were elected on the Liberal platform vote against the majority of their colleagues in batches of eight and ten, the people can only conclude that the organization has lost its cohesion and that its dissolution is coming fast. They are really serving their party (and the country) best who recognise the fact that the report of the Liberal members of the committee did not represent the facts aright nor draw the proper conclusions from them; that, in fact, the advisers of the Government overestimated the amount of jobbery the supporters would swallow. These have nothing to explain or apologize for and alone can face the situation with courage and a sense of right.

SIXTEEN TO ONE

The Democratic Silver Plank Discussed—Montreal Gazette.

The ratio of 16 to 1, which the Democrats of the United States have adopted as their idea of the respective values of silver and gold, is a survival of a past state of affairs. There was a time when it represented the actual relative prices of the metals, and sixteen ounces of silver were equivalent in value to one ounce of gold. Then a silver dollar of the standard coinage was as good in every sense as one of gold. It contained a dollar's worth of metal, and the stamp upon it was only a guarantee of its weight and fineness. Indeed, for a time a ratio of 15 to 1 represented the true values, and the 16 to 1 ratio was adopted by the United States in 1834 for the purpose of bringing gold into circulation. It somewhat exaggerated the value of the yellow metal, however, with the result that silver began to be scarce, just as in Mexico and some other countries to-day, where the coinage laws approach the Democratic ideal, gold ceases to be a factor in the currency. To ensure a supply of money for small transactions Congress reduced the amount of silver in all coins under a dollar, so that, while it paid to melt silver dollars into bullion, in which shape they were worth more gold dollars than when they passed as coin, the small silver coins were in another class, had a face value greater than their intrinsic worth, and remained in circulation. The discovery and working of silver deposits, however, in time brought about a different state of affairs. Silver lost its value as compared with gold, and to protect their people from loss France and other European countries ceased to coin it, except, as in the case of Great Britain, in minor denominations. This, by shutting off a large demand, further reduces the value of the metal, and India, one of the great silver money countries, was forced to suspend the coinage of it for individuals. To-day the ratio in value between silver and gold is about 30 to 1—that is an ounce of gold is worth 30 ounces of silver. When the 16 to 1 ratio was adopted it was worth something over 15 ounces. Free coinage of silver at a 16 to 1 ratio, therefore, would mean that a dollar in gold would purchase enough silver to make two dollar coins. The United States silver dollar would, when values became adjusted to the new conditions, purchase just fifty cents worth of merchandise. In international transactions it would be on the same footing as the Mexican silver dollar, which is regularly quoted at between 48 and 49 cents. Gold and currency that represented gold would become as scarce as in the greenback days after the war, would be dealt in by brokers and speculators as they were between 1864 and 1878, and a new element of uncertainty and disturbance would have to be taken into account in every transaction with a foreign country. In Great Britain the idea behind the United States Democratic financial plank was exploded two hundred years ago, when King James' brass shillings had taught the people a lesson. It is not to believed that in the United States in 1900 a majority of the people will vote for a return to conditions as antiquated as they are dangerous to commerce. This 16 to 1 plank should defeat Mr. Bryan were he many times as popular as he is.

Pneumonia is the result of neglected chest colds, colds that hang on and inflame and irritate the bronchial tubes and lungs. Its sale is simply enormous. 25 cents a bottle. Family size 60 cents.

Seven years ago a farmer hung his vest in the barn yard; a calf chewed the pocket in the garment, in which was a gold watch. One day the animal, a staid old cow, was butchered for beef, and the watch was found in such a position between the lungs of the cow that the process of respiration—the closing in and filling of the lungs—kept the stemwinder wound up and the watch had just but four minutes in the seven years. Skeptics are shown the watch in evidence of the truth of the story! How can they get over that?

BOERS CAPTURE NITRAL'S NEK

Attacked in Superior Numbers and Overpowered Garrison.

They Took a Squadron of Scots Greys, Two Guns of Royal Artillery and Five Companies of Infantry—Reinforcements Were Sent Out But Too Late—Casualties Are Heavy—Durdepoort North Was Also Attacked.

London, July 13.—Lord Roberts reports to the War Office, under date of Pretoria, July 12, as follows:

"The enemy having failed in their attack upon our right rear, as mentioned in my telegram of July 9, made a determined attack upon our right flank yesterday, and, I regret to say, succeeded in capturing Nitral's Nek, which was garrisoned by a squadron of the Scots Greys with two guns of a battery of the Royal Artillery and five companies of the Lincolnshire Regiment. The enemy attacked in superior numbers at dawn, and seizing the hill commanding the Nek brought a heavy gun fire to bear upon the small garrison. Nitral's Nek is about 18 miles from here, near where the road crosses the Crocodile River. It was held by us in order to maintain road and telegraphic communication with Rustenburg.

Reinforcements Sent.

"The fighting lasted more or less throughout the day, and immediately on receiving information early this morning of the enemy's strength, I despatched reinforcements from here under Col. Godfrey of the King's Own Scottish Borderers. Before, however, they reached the spot, the garrison had been overpowered and the guns and a greater portion of the squadron of Greys had been captured, owing to the horses being shot; also about 90 men of the Lincoln regiment.

"A list of the casualties has not been received, but I fear they are heavy. Simultaneously an attack was made on our outposts, near Durdepoort, north of the town in which the 7th Dragoons were engaged. The regiment was handled with considerable skill by Lieut.-Col. Low and kept the enemy in check until they retired on their supports and would probably have suffered but slight loss had not our troops mistaken some Boers in the bushes for our men.

"Smith-Dorrien had a successful engagement with the enemy yesterday, near Krugersdorp, and inflicted heavy loss on them.

"Buller reports that the Boers who were destroying his line of railway near Paardekraal were driven off yesterday after a short action.

"Hart reports from Heidelberg that the surrendering of Boer arms and ammunition continues in that district."

Lord Roberts Was Ill.

London, July 13.—News has reached London that Lord Roberts has been suffering from a serious bowel complaint, and that Lady Roberts was hurriedly summoned from Bloemfontein. Lord Roberts, though now better, is still weak.

STRATHCONAS MISSING.

They Are Supposed to Have Been Captured By the Boer Guerilla Raiders.

Ottawa, July 13.—Another cable was received yesterday morning, under date of Wednesday, from the general officer commanding at Standerton, containing the information that the following are reported missing: No. 11, Acting Corporal J. Mills; No. 144, Shoeingsmith J. J. Griffiths; No. 159, Private A. Simpson; No. 143, Private N. Gilroy; No. 140, Private R. Bourne; No. 157, Private J. Norris.

A cable from Sir Alfred Milner yesterday morning repeats the list of casualties at Rietfontein among the First Battalion Canadian Mounted Rifles on the 7th July, already officially reported. In the former list, however, Private Henry B. White was reported as mortally wounded, while this time the name is given as H B. White, who is merely mentioned as wounded. In the list of yesterday there appears too the name of 413, Private C. S. Strong, but reference to the nominal roll shows that there is no C. S. Strong in either battalion.

Corporal Thomas Mills' next of kin is given as Mrs. H. Mills of Newmarket, Ont.

Private J. J. Griffiths' next of kin is given as Mr. J. Griffiths of Hagersville, Ont.

Had Piles For 9 Years

Dominion Inspector of Steamboats Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

False modesty and fear of the surgeon's knife prevent most people from appealing to their physicians for a cure for piles.

Many people suffer on year after year, robbed of their rest and sleep by the terrible itching, when they could be entirely cured by a single box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. O. P. St. John, Dominion inspector of steamboats, living at 246 Shaw street, Toronto, states:—"I suffered for nine years from itching piles, at times being unable to rest on account of the annoyance caused by them. After trying almost all remedies in vain I began the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which entirely cured me. I cannot speak too highly of it. I have recommended it to several friends, all of whom have been cured by its use."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized by physicians, druggists, and the public in general as the only absolute cure for piles; 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

CROP PROSPECTS IN CANADA.

According to F. W. Hodson They Are Not Wholly Favorable.

Ottawa, July 13.—F. W. Hodson, director of experimental farms, has handed in his crop reports for Canada. They are not favorable in the whole. The reports on their special relations to Ontario are as follows:

Hay—Generally light in Eastern and Western Ontario, unusually light. Hay promises to be scarce and dear over a large part of Canada.

Wheat—Fall wheat in Western Ontario is ripening very irregularly. The crop will only equal 15 bushels to the acre.

Spring wheat promises a fair return. On the whole the total wheat crop of the Dominion is likely to fall much below the average.

Oats—In Ontario the grain is healthy and promising, though the straw will be light.

Barley is well headed in Ontario, but the straw is short.

Peas will give an excellent return in Ontario.

Indian corn will give a heavy yield of fodder.

Roots and potatoes are backward everywhere, but will do well.

Pastures in Ontario are looking more dried than ever before.

Fruits—In Ontario peach trees will give an abundant crop. Apples promise well.

There never was a case in which the old proverb about the ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure was more strictly applicable than in dealing with the bubonic plague.—Chicago Record.

The action taken by the health authorities, who are supported by the police, indicates the gravity of the situation. San Francisco as a center of trade with Asia stands in great danger of a visitation of the plague.—Philadelphia Record.

There is no good reason for great alarm over the danger. Modern science has shown its ability to combat the disease successfully. The bacillus has been identified and inoculation against it has been practiced with some success.—Chicago Journal.

There is no further room for doubt that the bubonic plague has broken out in Chinatown, San Francisco. It is to be noted that the business classes of the city are endeavoring to have as much of the truth as possible suppressed. This may suggest that the plague has gained a firmer hold than the reports would indicate.

RAILWAY SUBSIDY SYSTEM.

Liberal Idea Has Been Changed Since They Took Power.

Hon. Mr. Blair Defends the Sliding Scale, and Hon. Mr. Foster Entered a General Objection—Mr. Puttee Says They Are Simply Given Power to the Grafters—Mr. Richardson Asked For a Halt That People Might Ultimately Control.

Ottawa, July 13.—Yesterday morning Mr. Blair moved the House into committee upon the railway subsidy resolution. He said the Government had seen no reason to depart from the principle which they had adopted in 1897. Although objections had been taken by the members of the Opposition and the Opposition press against the sliding scale system of fixing bonuses according to the cost of construction, and a desperate attempt has been made to mislead the public upon it, no good arguments had been offered to the system under which the subsidy might be increased to $6,400 per mile upon railways costing upwards of $15,000 per mile.

Those $6,400 Per Mile Subsidies.

He quoted from the Mail and Empire of yesterday an article which implied that subsidies ought never to have been granted. Mr. Blair stated with emphasis there was not the slightest justification for the statement in that article that in every case the full subsidy of $6,400 would be paid. It was absolutely without foundation and was a deliberate misrepresentation of facts. Mr. Blair produced a schedule of railways with which the Government have entered into contracts to grant subsidies since coming into power, forty-seven in number. In respect of these forty-seven contracts, only sixteen of these companies had been paid subsidies, and these had not, as had been stated by the Mail and Empire, so broadly, all been paid the full subsidy of $6,400, but only three of the sixteen received a subsidy in excess of $3,200 per mile, and out of these three there was only one of them that received $6,400 and that was the St. Lawrence & Adirondack. The other two railways which received additional subsidies were the Restigouche & Western Railway, which received $4,693 per mile, and the Tilsonburg, Lake Erie & Pacific Railway, which received $4,909 per mile.

In reply to Mr. Foster he said he believed that the figures he had given included the full amounts of the subsidies to the railways in question.

Steel Rail Industry.

There was one other thing which he desired to refer to, and that was that the Government had considered the advisability of giving the subsidies in the future in such a way as to stimulate the manufacture of steel rails in this country, an industry which might, with encouragement and every probability of success, be established in Canada. He proposed, therefore, when the House was in committee to move a resolution giving the Governor-in-Council power to make it a condition in all subsidy contracts made in the future, that Canadian steel rails shall be used when procurable and that the Minister of Railways shall be the judge as to the possibility of procuring them. In conclusion Mr. Blair said the amount of the subsidies proposed by the resolution was $3,493,000, a sum which was very moderate and reasonable and much below the figures named in the exaggerated statements made by the Opposition press in advance of the subsidies being brought down.

Mr. Foster.

Mr. Foster regretted that the Minister of Railways had not given the House some definite information with respect to the railways which it was proposed to subsidize. He called attention to the fact that Sir Richard Cartwright, who had for many years objected to the granting of railway subsidies, had left the chamber as soon as Mr. Blair commenced his explanation. He also noticed that Mr. Mulock and Mr. McMullen had also retired from the chamber. Mr. Foster went back to 1882, when the principle of subsidizing railways was first accepted, and a definite fixed rate of subsidy adopted except in case of extremely expensive work. Since that date the Liberal party had, he said, denounced the granting of railway subsidies. They had also denounced the practice of throwing millions of railway subsidies upon the table a few days before prorogation, when it was impossible to discuss the merits of the individual subsidies, but the Minister of Railways had not departed from the practice which they then denounced.

Mr. Foster said that this was the growing time, and the Liberal party had grown out of any semblance of respect for its pledges and principles, if he could go to the length of saying they ever had any principles. His object in quoting the speeches of the Liberals while in Opposition was to show the utter and absolutely polar contradiction of their work in office. The Conservatives were not opposed to railway subsidies as a whole, not opposed to necessary works in this new country, but he thought the time had come, or had nearly come, when we could afford to let the capital of the country do its own work in reference to railways, unless in some large railways of a national character that should be helped by the nation itself, but they were in favor of some kind of judicious aid.

Mr. McMullen said that if the present Government had brought down their subsidies in the same way as the late Government he would vote against them. This Government had imposed a condition that the railways should pay three per cent. on the subsidy to the Government. He congratulated the Government on the inauguration of that principle.

Mr. Edwards, as a free trader, objected to the clause requiring the purchase of steel rails in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told Mr. Edwards that if the proposal was to force a man to buy on a market in which he did not want to buy, he would be with Mr. Edwards. But the Government were not forcing a man to buy. It was quite optional with the railway builder whether he would accept the bonus, and the Government simply imposed a condition that if he could get steel rails in Canada as satisfactorily as anywhere else he should buy them here.

Power For the Grafters.

After recess, Mr. Puttee, the Labor M. P. from Winnipeg, protested against granting railway subsidies on the ground that it was policy fraught with power not to benefit the provinces, but to benefit grafters in the shape of politicians, railway promoters and charter-mongers. He considered the time was ripe for a change of railway policy. He favored Government ownership, or in default of that more Government control over railways.

Wanted a Halt Called.

Mr. Richardson of Lisgar wanted a halt called to the granting of subsidies. Already Canada had spent $198,000,000 to aid railways and given 40,000,000 acres of the best lands into the bargain. Canada had practically contributed enough to build the railways, and it was high time they owned them. The scheme had been tried elsewhere. The Australian colonies had spent £130,000,000 in building railways, and now owned them, and was not owned by them. The result of such a system was to give better rates and better service. He believed Canadians were rapidly coming to the conclusion that it was time the old policy was shelved. He was opposed to the system of subsidizing railways in its entirety.

Patron David Rogers of Frontenac vigorously protested against railway subsidies. The Government had gone too far with the system, and had been negligent in not exacting conditions from the railways. He favored Government ownership. In default of this he believed that when aid was given a railway it should be paid back some time.

Mr. Sifton denied that the people of the west had not asked for the subsidies. Branch railways would be the making of the west, and the people knew it.

The House then went into committee.

Each item was scrutinized and explanations were given by Mr. Blair. Items to the amount of $3,000,000 were passed by 12 o'clock.

By 12.30 o'clock the whole of the items were passed, and the House afterwards engaged in discussion on Mr. Blair's resolution that the subsidy should be paid by order-in-council and that preference should be given to Canadian rails if they could be obtained on equal terms with foreign rails.

The resolutions were passed.

The House adjourned at 12.50.

DAMAGE BY THE STORM.

Particulars of the Tornado Which Swept Prince Edward County.

Picton, Ont., July 13.—Particulars are to hand regarding the tornado which swept over the southern portion of Prince Edward County Wednesday afternoon. The losses will amount to thousands of dollars. At Milford several buildings were demolished; at Black Creek at least six barns were wrecked, and the large timbers were carried over several acres. A large maple grove, owned by C. A. McDonald, was completely destroyed. A rig driven by a lady was overturned and several narrow escapes are reported from different parts of the county. At Waupoose, buildings were unroofed, apple, pear trees, etc., uprooted, and considerable damage done to grain. A young man out rowing at Waupoose had a narrow escape, the gale struck and turned the boat upside down.

Distruction on Amherst Island.

Kingston, Ont., July 13. — A despatch from Stella, Amherst Island, says: "A terrible storm struck this place about 4 o'clock Wednesday evening, blowing trees in all directions and unroofing barns everywhere. Mr. Polley's 'silo' was blown to pieces, Mr. Childs' barn was struck by lightning and burned. A cow was also killed. A group of children were thrown down by the effects of a thunderbolt. Fences are lying flat. The farmers had to stable their cattle in order to save their grain. Old people say they never experienced such a storm before. The amount of damage cannot be estimated.

Freezing Weather in July

Would cause great discomfort and loss, but fortunately it is seldom known. A vast amount of misery is caused at this season, however, by impoverished blood, poor appetite and general debility. These conditions may be remedied by enriching the blood and toning the stomach with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine seems to put new life into the whole physical system, simply because of its wonderful power to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood, create an appetite and invigorate the digestive functions. CELEBRATION OF THE TWELFTH

ADDRESSES AT THE GATHERING OF ORANGEMEN IN CENTRAL PARK

Felicitations Extended by Local Clergymen—King William's Memory Honored—Close of the Festivities—Notes of the Day.

Like all other days, the 12th of July came to an end, and by eleven o'clock last night the crowds of visitors had deserted the town for their homes, the sight-seeing citizens had retired after their day of hustle and pleasure and the city had sunk to slumber to awaken this morning to the ordinary routine of life. The decorations were pulled down and the temporary booths and eating houses disappeared. Memory of the demonstration was kept alive chiefly by discussions as to how many visitors were in town, and how much money was separated from them while here, questions to which the conclusions arrived at were as widely varied as the attempts at calculation were numerous.

Everybody agreed that the celebration had been a success, except, perhaps, the lemonade vendors, to whom the weather was a little unkind, and all were likewise unanimous that the memory of King William would be kept green for another year. The Orangemen dispersed well satisfied with the hospitality shown them, satisfied that the demonstration had been an impressive one, the day will take a place in their memories, only to be eclipsed by a bigger celebration, and it is safe to say that their recollections of the event will be of a pleasant nature.

The townspeople likewise were pleased with the successful and orderly nature of the demonstration. It was both profitable and entertaining to see such a large gathering in the old town. They were a respectable, orderly crowd. The day passed off without any incident to mar the festivities; it was quite a fraternal occasion, in which all men were brothers "for a' that." The people of Peterborough will be glad to welcome them again.

After the meeting in Central park, at which the addresses were given, the visitors scattered in all directions to amuse themselves during the short time left until their trains should bear them homeward. Almost all the excursion trains left between 5.30 and 8 o'clock, the lodges following the custom established during late years of returning home early. The different contingents were played to the depots by the bands and were escorted by many followers. As one by one they departed the noise of the fife and drums lessened, to be renewed doubtless when the various villages were reached, and by dark only a few enthusiastic pipers and a bugle and drum band, which displayed marvellous energy and staying power, were left to prolong the festivities. The streets were crowded at night by townspeople, who came out to enjoy the finish of the fun.

The gathering in Central Park yesterday afternoon to hear the addresses was an immense one. The covered platform on which the speakers and prominent Orangemen were seated, and on which Mr. Jos. Jones, County Master, presided as chairman, was crowded on three sides by the assembled people. Bands played from the corners of the park and between the speeches, which were nearly all short, and the 57th Regimental band, which occupied a position near the stand, rendered selections. Grand Master Holland, of Ontario East, was the chief speaker.

County Master Jones opened the meeting with a few remarks and called upon Mayor Kendrey, M. P.

MAYOR KENDREY.

Mayor Kendrey said:—I have the greatest pleasure to be here to-day as Mayor of Peterborough to welcome you to our good town. I hope you will all have a good time. I have been a long time in the town and have never seen it as well decorated as it is in your honor. Orangemen hold some of the highest positions in our country. No less than three Premiers have been Orangemen and many other Orangemen have held prominent positions in public life. I welcome you heartily to the town and hope to see you here again at some future date.

REV. MR. POTTER.

Rev. Mr. Potter spoke next. He stated that he felt like congratulating the Orangemen on the success of their demonstration. We rejoice in the interest that is manifested in the affairs of our country. We feel that the defence they made for the rights we now enjoy was a glorious one. We should ever seek to extend these principles of freedom which we now enjoy to all others. Our soldiers in South Africa stand for these same principles of freedom. As Orangemen and Protestants we ought to always maintain the principles of liberty and manifest the true Christian spirit of equal rights to all men. He hoped that the Order would always be strong in its defence of what is true and righteous.

REV. MR. BASTOW.

Rev. J. H. Bastow, of Murray-st. Baptist church, stated that it was the first Orange demonstration he had ever seen. He congratulated them on their splendid appearance. They were the very brawn and brain of the country. It is an excellent thing once a year to gather for such a grand patriotic demonstration. The citizens were gathered for personal, civil and religious liberty, and by teaching that spirit of freedom we develop the highest type of civilization. He again congratulated them on their splendid appearance.

REV. MR. THOMPSON.

Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Mark-st. church, characterized the Orange congregation which he faced on Sunday night as the flower of the land. He referred to the principles of Orangemen as worthy of honor, and hoped and believed that its growth would be sure and steady. He was pleased with the success of the demonstration.

REV. MR. WAGG.

Rev. Mr. Wagg, of Charlotte-st. church, spoke briefly. He congratulated his hearers on the grand success of the demonstration. As he saw the big procession passing down the street the thought had come to him that here were men that were ready to stand and die for the principles of Christian liberty.

REV. MR. ELLIOTT.

Rev. Mr. Elliott added his congratulations. He had never seen a better one outside of Toronto. He expressed his sympathy with the principles of Orangeism, the principle of liberty of conscience.

GRAND MASTER HOLLAND.

Grand Master Holland of Ontario East was received with applause. On behalf of the visiting brethren he expressed supreme gratification at the display the town and the Orangemen of the town had made. This great success was due in one respect to the bashful County Master of West Peterborough, Mr. Jos. Jones, who had labored most earnestly for the day. Another source of the success was the liberality and generosity of the Mayor and corporation of the town, backed by the hospitality of the people. It was the most beautiful ornamentation of the handsomest town that the Orangemen had visited for many years.

Why is it that the Orange demonstrations are so successful and that such universal sympathy is displayed? It is because we are members of the great British Empire and because the Order stands for the principles taught by the great prince, William of Orange. Close to the heart of all English-speaking people lies the love of liberty, not mere personal freedom, but the principle of equal rights to all. This principle is in the hearts of all the people and they come out on the 12th of July to show it.

The day is the anniversary of the battle which put an end to the days of absolute monarchy and gave us constitutional government. It may be said that the 12th of July, 1688, was the birthday of the British nation.

William III was a man who took the Bible as a guide through his whole life, a man of great intellectual ability, of great will and determination, which made him successful in the struggle against him. He was a man of great force, used to build up a nation in freedom and liberty, and it can be no wonder that the Order has adopted his name, for in him they recognized the greatest exponent of constitutional liberty the world has ever known.

Our Roman Catholic fellow citizens have more freedom under Protestantism than they would have had under a James II.

In closing Grand Master Holland urged the Orangemen to be true followers of King William, lovers of his principles and students of that Bible which he followed all through life. All should be his true followers, and by being so they could best build the society called after him. Each should be a living exponent of the principles of Orangeism. People will judge Orangemen not by their constitution, but by their lives, and if these lives do not commend Orangeism all sermons on it will be wasted. He urged the establishment of lodges for ladies. At every 12th of July gathering they are in the majority, and by uniting in lodges they have a means of showing their enthusiasm. It would help the men to know that their mothers and sisters were taking an active part in the work.

WELL PLEASED.

In closing, Mr. Jones, County Master, stated that the Orangemen were well pleased with the 57th regimental band in their new dress. Their work during the day had been more than satisfactory.

The band played "God Save the Queen," and the people wended their way down town.

NOTES.

The next anniversary will be the 211th.

Swagger sticks and badges found a ready sale.

The Grand Lodge officers were entertained at dinner at the Oriental yesterday.

The man with the monkey and the alleged bagpipes was in town to connect with the crowd and their money.

Most of the hotels served dinner from 10.30 o'clock till 3. It was a big day for them.

There was but little if any evidence of hilarity or boisterousness on the streets last night.

Grand Master Holland was presented with a handsome bouquet as he drove down street in the procession. The lady commanded the officers not to divulge her name.

Mr. Wm. Moncrief stated that it was his seventy-eighth 12th of July parade. His first was when he was 18 years of age. He belonged to Lodge No. 47, Otonabee.

The Central park made a capital gathering place for the day.

The chief musical organizations in the parade were the 57th Regimental band, the Sons of England band, the Welcome brass band, the Omemee brass band and the piccolo band from Lindsay.

The 57th Regimental band was conspicuous yesterday. Its selections at the afternoon meeting in Central park were much appreciated.

Marshal J. B. McWilliams made a fast trip from Michipicoten the day before in order to fulfil his duties of the day. It included a walk of twenty miles, which he found necessary to make connections.

A band from Rice lake arrived on the grounds while the speech making was going on. It did not miss all the fun.

Many of the specialties which in former days went to make a 12th of July procession so picturesque, have vanished. The young drummers do not wield their sticks in the original and somewhat fantastic style of the old ones. The step dancers are also disappearing.

The clergymen occupying seats on the platform yesterday were Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Potter, Elliott, Bastow, Thompson and Wagg.

The old-time cedar bushes figured as decorations in front of a number of the stores. The green arches seem to require more labor than a day's celebration justifies.

The Eclipse ran up from Stevenson's Landing and other points with about 100 passengers yesterday. The Beaver

Brevities

—All the outgoing trains this morning were crowded with visitors returning to their homes.

—The 57th Battalion Band will give a popular concert in Victoria park this evening.

—Mr. John Staples, of Ida, has purchased another Clydesdale, a two-year-old, from the same stables that Ashdale came from.

—A couple of fishermen from town had their nets seized at Pigeon Creek a few days ago. The same two got into trouble at Chemong some time ago.

—A couple of men from the country were gathered in by the police yesterday afternoon for fighting on Simcoe-st. They were afterwards allowed to go.

—Andrew Ralph was this morning sentenced by Magistrate Dumble to six months in the Central Prison as a vag. Ralph served a term in gaol here for vagrancy and was liberated on July 1st.

—Yesterday afternoon six of the razors stolen from Morgan's barber shop on the preceding night were discovered in the creek near the Sherbrooke-st. bridge. The robbery was evidently the outcome of a spite on some person's part.

—In County Magistrate Edmison's Court this morning William Jordan was charged by an old man who lives on the boundary between north and south Monaghan with stealing old iron. The case was discharged. This afternoon the case of a man named Coons, from Bridgeworth, and two men named Davis, Ennismore, who had a big scrap back in a berry patch at Buckhorn, will be heard.

—The pavement on Park-st. between Simcoe and Hunter-sts. which cracked so bad during the winter has been repaired. When opened up it was found that a quick sand which is present at this point had worked the water under the pavement and honey-combed or burrowed the foundation of the walk. This caused the trouble, which has now been remedied, and extra precautions have been taken to prevent a reoccurrence of the quicksand's fine work.

PRAISE FOR COL. SAM.

A Writer who Says Col. Sam Has Done Good Work in South Africa.

Surgeon-Major Worthington, with General Warren's column, writing from Fabersprult, Cape Colony, on May 27 and 31, to a friend at Sherbrooke, Que., says:—

"We came on here after the relief of Douglas yesterday without much opposition, captured a few rebels, arms, ammunition, waggons, etc. Douglas had been in the hands of the rebels for seven months. They acknowledge six killed by our guns; there may be more.

"Colonel Sam Hughes is second in command, and is really a capital man for this sort of work—a hard worker, lots of dash, pushes right along with his scouts and regards every man as a rebel. Any opinion I may have had of him previously was only from hearing others decry his ability. For this work it would be hard to beat him, and the loyalists regard him very highly for the work he has done.

"Had a hard time yesterday morning (May 30.) The Boers endeavored to rush the camp at 5 a.m., and capture the guns. Our men drove them off, but lost heavily. I had 30 cases to look after, besides what the other medical officers had. I had several amputations, head cases, abdominal cases, etc., and am going to trephine two men this afternoon.

"General Warren, I heard, had said it was the closest call he had during the war, and the tightest hole he was ever in. If the beggars had had any gumption they could have cleaned us out. One of our Maxims killed 18 in one spot in a garden. All our horses stampeded, but some have been recovered. I did not have a bite to eat until 6 p.m., and have been up all night.

"There is a lot of fighting before us yet. This surprise was due to treachery."

A RUN OF HARD LUCK

Havelock Man Who Had His Throat Cut With an Axe.

Mr. Fred Hilton, of Havelock, who arrived at the Toronto General hospital yesterday, has been the victim of a run of hard luck. On May 11th, while chopping wood, he accidentally cut his throat with an axe, the wind pipe being almost severed. The wound was dressed by the local doctor, and the patient was doing nicely until he caught a bad cold on June 9th, which developed into bronchitis. He recovered from this, but a few days ago he visited a dentist, and while in the chair received a wrench, which re-opened the wound. He was taken to the General hospital in Toronto, and is in a somewhat critical condition. Food is being administered to Hilton with a silver tube.

ANOTHER VICTIM REJOICES.

Dr. Hall's Pamphlet on Rheumatism free Send for it.

IT is not an uncommon thing by any means for a sufferer from Sciatic Rheumatism to become completely helpless from the disease, in fact more helpless than a child. And what havoc such pain creates in the entire system! The effects of a long siege of rheumatism is apt to be very severe on the constitution, so that the patient should be prompt in obtaining relief the moment the opportunity presents itself. The restoration to health of a rheumatic sufferer is like unto the freedom from a prison cell of an innocent man. In either case the bondage is unnatural and uncalled for. Mr. John Hunter, 321 Brock Street, Kingston, Ont., was laid up for six weeks with rheumatism. He was so helpless he could not leave his room or dress himself. A friend advised him to try Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. After taking the contents of the first bottle he was able to move around the house. The second bottle cured him completely, and he was able to return to his work. Mr. Hunter says he would strongly recommend Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure to all who suffer with rheumatism.

Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is put up in 50 cent bottles, containing ten days' treatment. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine. The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE IVORY QUEEN

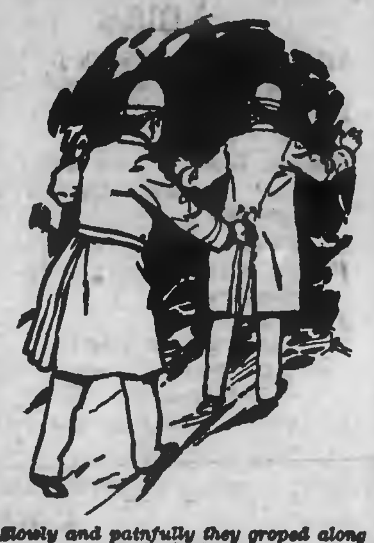
BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

Just what he had expected would be the explanation from the moment the story was related to him by the driver of the dogcart had proved to be correct—footsteps leading into the house and no return—so that it seemed to Darrent there was but one solution or rather two—either the murderer was still in the building, which was far from probable, or had escaped by a secret passage, and the latter had proved to be the case. And yet, after all, he mused, as he made his way across the grounds back to the front of the house, it had proved his theory that the murderer of old Marsden was well acquainted with The Grange. Who should know the ins and outs of the premises better than the dead man's son or ward, whichever he was, the one whose name the dying man had endeavored to write—Astray Marsden? Again all the circumstances against Astray forced themselves upon his mind. What if it should prove to be no mystery at all? Young Marsden had returned, gone perhaps straight to The Grange, quarreled openly with the old man and in a paroxysm of rage struck the blow which killed him.



Slowly and painfully they groped along in the darkness.

Darrent took the paper from his pocket again and closely scrutinized it.

"I am dying, murdered by Astra"—

Astray had gone. Perhaps for fear of blackmail, perhaps because he was guilty, but, whatever the reason, Darrent decided he must be stopped, and, scribbling a few lines upon a form, he dispatched Thompson to the telegraph office, and again entered the library.

So far he had acted simply as a man of caution, but without conviction. He intended to stop Astray's flight not because he was assured of his guilt, but because he might be guilty.

As a detective who had earned fame he suspected everybody but condemned none until link by link he had forged the chain that was unbreakable.

As it was, so many incidents seemed to point to Astray, and yet one thing destroyed the whole theory—the stolen chessmen.

Boiled Down Facts

ABOUT . . .

Dr. Ward's Blood and Nerve Pills

No remedy ever introduced in Canada has gained so many words of praise from sufferers all over the country as these thoroughly effective pills.

WHY?

Because they positively cure all diseases brought on by impoverished blood, such as heart trouble, nervousness, rheumatism, dyspepsia, etc.

ALSO

Because they induce sound, healthy sleep, and restore VIM, VIGOUR, and VITALITY to the body.

ALSO

Because their use enables the system to successfully resist attacks of colds and the inseparable results, viz., lung and kidney troubles, a fact of especial importance at this season of the year.

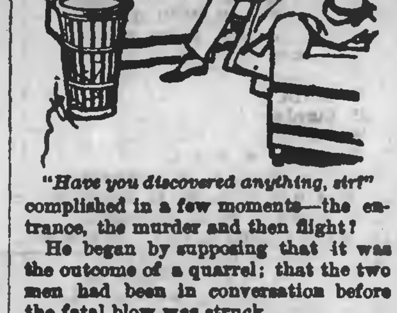
If he could trace them, he felt he would be a step nearer discovering the murderer and with them the motive. That was the great difficulty in this case, the apparent absence of motive.

He was glad to be alone while from a few fragments he endeavored to make out what kind of man the murderer was and to fix in his mind the style of individual he had to look for.

Did the murder arise out of a sudden quarrel, or was it premeditated and accomplished in a few moments—the entrance, the murder and then flight?



"Have you discovered anything, sir?"

He began by supposing that it was the outcome of a quarrel; that the two men had been in conversation before the fatal blow was struck.

The old man probably sat in his chair on the right hand side of the fire. Darrent took that chair himself, and the visitor—where? He had the assurance of the officer that nothing had been moved. There was no chair conveniently placed for a visitor. It might have been moved, or the stranger might have stood during the interview. That being so, he would have stood opposite Marsden, so Darrent rose and took the place of the supposed visitor and, as human nature is so prone to loll, felt an inclination to rest his arm upon the high mantelshelf.

He smiled a quiet smile of self satisfaction as he glanced at the shelf and noticed the impression left in the dust where an arm had recently rested. It was a high shelf, too, and the impression in the dust was that of an elbow only. The man had stood with his chin in his hand and his elbow on the shelf.

Darrent was a well proportioned man and tried the position. It was not one of comfort. For ease he would have laid his whole arm full length upon the shelf and rested his shoulder against it. The man who had stood there was taller than he and close upon if not over six feet in height. So far, he thought, so good. The search was narrowing.

Surely to trace a man of six feet in that little town would not be difficult. He wondered how tall young Marsden was; then, setting to work again, dropped on his knees and carefully examined the fireplace.

No papers had been burned. Only the dead ashes remained on the hearth and something he had almost overlooked, but now caught up with an excited exclamation and carried to the window—a plug of half burned tobacco that had been cut out of a pipe, because it had been rammed in too tightly, and discarded, dug out with the blade of a knife, it was obvious, for a dainty shred of meerschaum adhered to the side.

Another step—another clew! The murderer was not a tramp who had beguiled the old man to let him stay the night. Tramps were not so wasteful of their tobacco and did not smoke meerschaums.

Six feet high—smoked a meerschaum pipe! Darrent felt he was moving.

A quarter of an hour afterward, when Policeman Thompson returned to The Grange, he found Herbert Darrent sitting in the library writing at topmost speed in his notebook, with a fragment of thread, a plug of tobacco, a scrap of ivory, a carved ivory chessman and a few matches spread out on a sheet of paper before him.

"Have you discovered anything, sir?" he ventured to ask as Darrent continued to fill sheet after sheet as if unaware of his presence.

Darrent quietly nodded his head and closed the book.

"Listen to me," he said, "and tell me if you know any one who answers to this description: Appearance, very tall—say a good six feet—and broad in proportion, bronzed and bearded, strong as an ox; temper very passionate; dress of homespun cloth; soft hat; smokes a meerschaum pipe; lately returned from somewhere abroad, probably South Africa."

Thompson, with his eyes wide open, gazed in astonishment at the detective and shifted uneasily from foot to foot.

"He wears a heavy gold signet ring on the little finger of the left hand and has recently cut the forefinger of the right. Do you know him?"

"No, indeed, sir! You've made a mistake. He wouldn't do it. He could not."

"Ah! Then my description fits some one!"

"It is Astray Marsden to the life, sir, but he didn't commit the murder."

"That is to be proved. He was at this house on the night of the murder. You met him on that night."

"I, sir?"

"Yes, you, Thompson. You've got to do your duty, whether it is palatable to you or not. Astray Marsden left the town nearly two years ago, came back here the night of the murder and left next morning. If you did not meet him that night, you would not know he answered to my description. A man does not look the same and certainly does not dress the same after an absence abroad of two years. Where did you meet him?"

"Near the Palace hotel."

"What time?"

"A little after 2 o'clock in the morning."

"Was it snowing?"

"No, sir; it had stopped."

"What did he say? Did he seem excited?"

"He did seem rather rattled. He said that he'd come back to try and be friends with old Marsden, but no one could be, and he was off again."

"Very well; then one thing is certain, and that is that Astray Marsden was in this room on the night of the murder. It will rest for him to clear himself or for the law to bring the charge home to him. Marsden himself opened the door, and the two men entered this room. Marsden sat in his chair there, the chessboard was on that small table beside him, and he was undoubtedly working out a problem when he was interrupted. It needs only a glance at the bookcase to show his hobby. Old Mardsen sat there, the board beside him. The young man stood here"—Darrent took up his position by the fender again—"his elbow upon the mantelpiece—so. You can see where the elbow rested. He must be a tall man who stands so, Thompson. That gave me an idea as to his height; this thread of wool, the texture of his clothes. He smoked as he talked—smoked a coarse cut ship's tobacco, not the sort that a man of his breeding would smoke unless he had been down in the world, knocking about from one country to another, and therefore bronzed, and, as a man does not take particular care of his appearance at such times and certainly does not give ten minutes every day to shaving, bearded. You see, Thompson, things are very clear when we look carefully."

"Yes, sir," the officer mechanically replied, gazing at Darrent, bewildered.

"The young man stood here, and they talked. Perhaps young Marsden wanted money—they generally do—and the old man refused, taunted him. You know old men can taunt, Thompson. The words got higher and higher, the young man's temper hotter and hotter, and then he launched into a furious outburst, emphasizing each point by bringing his fist down upon the oak mantelshelf. Three times he did that, Thompson. You see three marks made by the concussion as his ring struck the wood. The strength in that blow would kill a man, so be careful if you ever have to deal with young Marsden. The old man was frightened and faint and overturned the board with the pieces upon it as he started to his feet, and Astray gave him some brandy in that little glass from the decanter on the sideboard. As he handed it to him he placed his hand upon the mantelshelf, this time the right hand. You see by the impression the forefinger was bound up. Dust is a very valuable thing, Thompson; don't forget that. Then young Marsden collected the chessmen and placed them in the box again."

"The old man might have done that," Thompson exclaimed, anxious to test the skill with which the puzzle was being put together.

"The young man did it, Thompson. One had rolled under the sideboard. Old Marsden would never have shut up the box and put it away with one missing. The chessmen are put away, the old man becomes more amiable, and they sit down again. He goes so far as to offer young Marsden a cigar. You see one has been taken from this box, a new box, which young Marsden opened with his clasp knife—you know the ugly kind of knife, Thompson. The murder was committed with the same weapon. He opens the box, takes out a cigar and lights it, then puts the knife here by his side and sits on the edge of the table.

"Again they talk, again the old man taunts, and again the young man loses his temper and crashes his hand down upon the table. His fingers touch that awful knife, and in a second it is over. For a moment he is paralyzed with fear and, rushing to the sideboard, pours out a glass of the brandy, for himself this time, spilling it upon the woodwork and the carpet, and then stands and hesitates. He dare not leave by the front door in case he is seen. Suddenly he remembers the passage through the rockery on to the river. No doubt the water at the bottom of the tunnel would be frozen, and he could escape that way. With one glance over his shoulder he leaves the library, rushes across the hall through the opposite room and the conservatory, then out into the grounds along the covered walk and by the tunnel on to the frozen river.

"Old Marsden, left for dead, comes slowly back to semiconsciousness. He is dying, and he knows it, but he swears the guilty shall not escape, and even with his failing strength he will denounce the murderer."

Darrent finished his dramatic word picture and then, taking the slip of paper from his pocket, held it before the face of his comrade.

"I am dying, murdered by Astray," gasped Thompson.

"And Astray has skipped," Darrent interrupted.

Thompson could only stolidly nod in acquiescence. Loath as he was to believe that Astray Marsden, whom he remembered in years back always had a kindly word for every one, was a murderer, he had been led away by Darrent's dramatic recital, and the paper written by the dying man seemed to clinch the matter. Yes, there could be no question about it now. Astray must have done it.

"It looks rather black against young Marsden," he said, at last finding his tongue.

"You suspect him?"

Thompson nodded moodily.

"Well, look here, Thompson," suddenly snapped Darrent. "Don't you be in such a confounded hurry to jump at conclusions. Now, if we find presently that Astray Marsden can prove an absolute alibi, what becomes of these deductions, eh? Astray Marsden is not the only man in the world who stands six feet high, wears a rough homespun suit, carries a Norwegian knife and likes to have his signet ring on the little finger of his left hand."

"But the paper?"

"Well, what of that? 'I am dying, murdered by Astra'— The 'y' is missing, and you jump to the conclusion it must be Astray. Now, suppose, Thompson, that the mystery has a deeper root; that it concerns Astray all the same, but not as a murderer. Suppose old Marsden intended, for example, to write 'murdered by Astray's brother' or any other relative, and died before he could write the last word. What becomes of your evidence then?"

And, having calmly and deliberately demolished the structure that he had so carefully and elaborately constructed, Darrent took a cigarette from his case and, lighting it, strolled over to the window.

"I told you," he said between the whiffs, "that the man stood with his elbow on the mantelshelf. Well, so he did. That's obvious. And then I showed you three dents that looked comparatively fresh, and I said that they had been made by the ring on the little finger of the man's hand. Well, perhaps they were, and perhaps they were done weeks ago by old Marsden himself. Perhaps the man's elbow never rested on the shelf, but old Marsden had put something there and afterward removed it. I shouldn't like to swear to any of it. I've put a lot of little things together, but they may be all wrong, every one of them. What do you think, eh?"

Chronic Indigestion

By far the most important part of digestion takes place in the intestines and it is folly to expect stomach medicines to cure a severe case of indigestion or dyspepsia. The kidneys, liver and bowels must first be made regular and active, and the only remedy which acts directly on these organs is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are purely vegetable, act pleasantly and naturally and positively cure dyspepsia, biliousness and stomach troubles. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; take no substitute.

THE LIMEKILN CLUB.

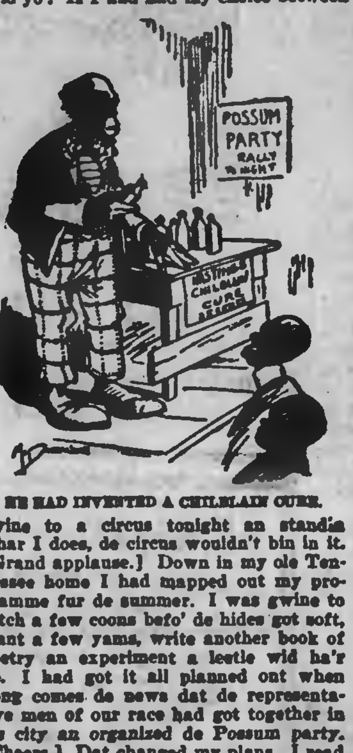
AN ELOQUENT SPEECH BY THE HON. NICKEL PLATED HASTINGS.

He Makes a Decided Hit With the Possum Party and at the Same Time Contrives to Make Welcome Additions to His Exchequer.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

There was the usual enthusiastic audience in Paradise hall when Brother Gardner introduced the speaker of the evening as the Hon. Nickel Plated Hastings of Tennessee. Mr. Hastings had no record as a politician. He started out 30 years ago to make one and would tell the audience why he failed. He was known as "the colored philosopher of Tennessee" and had written poetry and invented a cure for chilblains, but he bore his honors meekly and rated himself only as a humble citizen. [Cheers of greeting.]

The honorable appeared to be a man about 50 years old. He had a hump to his back and feet which were set on at an awkward angle, but his smile was bland and his voice full of molasses as he stepped forward and said:



POSSUM PARTY RALLY TO NIGHT
HASTINGS CHILBLAIN CURE

HE HAD INVENTED A CHILBLAIN CURE.

"My dear people, I'se glad to meet up wid yo'. If I had had my choice between gwine to a circus tonight an standin whar I does, de circus wouldn't bin in it. [Grand applause.] Down in my ole Tennessee home I had mapped out my programme fur de summer. I was gwine to cotch a few coons befo' de hides got soft, plant a few yams, write another book of poetry an experiment a leetle wid ha'r ile. I had got it all planned out when 'long comes de news dat de representative men of our race had got together in dis city an organized de Possum party. [Cheers.] Dat changed my plans. I read ober da platform an put on my hat an started fur de norf, an yere I am. [Prolonged cheers.] I'se come up to hev a leetle talk. ["Dat's what we want!"] As yo'r president has said, I started out 30 y'ars ago to be a politician. I walked up to de poles an voted de hull ticket. I went round talkin an arguin an carryin banners an torches, an when de campaign closed I couldn't speak a loud word on account of my hoarseness. I'd busted my suspenders, worn out my shoes an used up my breath to help de party git dar. When it was all ober, I axed fur my reward, an I got it. [Sensation.] Dey gib me three months in jail fur stealin a hawg! [Howls and hisses.] Arter I got out of jail I proved dat another pusson stole de hawg an dat I was as innercent as an unbo'n rhinoceros, but it was too late. [Groans.] Dey wouldn't eben advise me to steal a calf to git squar' wid de game. It was a put up job to git shet of a man who had worked hard an wanted his jest reward. [Groans of indignation.]

"My fr'en's, I hev bin studyin de white man from near by an from fur off eber since dat jail door was open to me. I'se bin readin up on him since Adam walked about dat garden an Cain killed Abel. [Cheers.] He's allus bin overbearin when he had de bulge an allus bin sly when de other feller had a show. ["Dat's him!"] De Lawd may hev created de white man first, but dat was all accident. Nobody could tell what de prevailin color was gwine to be fur de fust 50 y'ars. De black man come along in good shape arter awhile, an he was willin to divide up de airth wid de white man an lib in peace an harmony. All he wanted was his cabin an truck patch an a fa'r chance wid de coons an possums an persimmons. [Cries of "An watermillions—yum, yum!"] Dar was jest as much excuse fur de black man to go walkin round wid a chip on his shoulder an claimin to own eberything in sight as fur de white man, but did he do it? ["No, no!"] Of co'se he didn't. He jest went to behavin hisself an spadin up de garden an takin all de comfort he could. No, sah, he wasn't crowdin anybody out or steppin high. [Laughter.]

"All was goin well when de white man come 'long one day an says: 'Boy, yo' am off color, an yo'r ha'r kinks. Big feet an a black face don't go around yere. Better move on.' [Groans.] De black man had got his cucumbers to growin, an his sunflowers was comin up, but he jest went down into his butes an departed into another land. [Agitation.] He didn't want no row wid white folks. He talked it ober wid de ole woman, an dey hitched up de mule an driv off. He'd jest got things started again in his new home when dere was a knock on de cabin doah an de white man appeared. [Yells.] He didn't wait two minits befo' he said to dat black man: 'Boy, I ain't gwine to break my back wid hard work when I kin git it dun fur nuthin. Yo' come 'long home wid me an go to diggin.' [Yells of indignation.] If dat black man had stood up fur his rights, he'd hev come out eben up to de row, but he didn't stand. He jest bowed his head an went 'long, an since dat time de white man has had de bulge on him. [Groans.]

"Now 'bout dis political bizness. I'se bin talkin wid black men 'bout it ebery day fur y'ars an y'ars to find out jest what dey wants. Dey don't want but mighty leetle, an dere ain't no pushin an jammin 'bout it. I reckons dat a hundred small offices scattered round would make us all feel good. [Enthusiastic cheers.] If de number was 200, we'd feel a heap better. [More cheering.] It's jest like de case of two hunters lookin at de same coon up a tree. Both want his pelt an his meat, but dey want it fur nuthin. De coon knows dat one or de other am bound to git de best offer he kin. [Wild applause.] We am de coon up de tree. We am bound to come down, but we must git de best terms we kin. ["We will!"] If yo' go to a white man an say yo' want to be rewarded fur yo'r political work, he will look at yo' in astonishment an reply: 'Boy, what yo' mean? Hain't yo' dun got yo' freedom? Can't yo' ride in de street kyars 'longside of white folks?' Waal, de white man has had his freedom a mighty long time, but dat hasn't prevented him from gobblin up all de offices. [Tremendous yells.] I'd willin'ly gib up ridin in de street kyars fur an office payin $600 a y'ar, an I reckon dat's de case wid most of yo'. ["Yes, yes!"]

"I'se fur dis Possum party first an last an all de time, but I ain't gwine to git too excited nor to expect too much. We nebber had nuthin like it befo'. He's gwine to come round wid his hat on his ear an yell at us: 'Yere, now, yo' black folks! Fall into line an git dem torchlights out an do some yellin!' Nobody's gwine to say a word back, an purty soon he'll scratch his head an say to hisself: 'Um! What's de matter yere? 'Pears like dese sons of Ham am gwine to upset de apple cart.' [Prolonged applause.] Dat's our aim an objick—to gib de white man a surprise party an set him to wonderin if he hadn't better divide up—an don't yo' be afraid we won't come out all right. ["We know we will!"]

"Up dar hangs yo'r emblem. De coon knows all de best cornfields, but de possum ain't takin no back seat fur slyness. [Applause.] He may hev to wait a long time fur what he wants, but it comes to him at last. Don't try to astonish de world wid big words, an don't waste yo'r money on brass bands. Nobody am afraid of noise. Yo' jest lay low an bring all de black men into dis Possum party, an you'll find de white folks doin all de worryin. We ain't sayin dat de United States wouldn't keep right along if we was all dead, but yo' let 3,000,000 black votes drap out of a political campaign, an somebody am gwine to git weak in de knees. My fr'en's, keep quiet, saw wood an hang to de root, an if yo' don't come out all right we'll frow away our dreambooks an no longer believe in ghosts."

The orator was enthusiastically applauded at the close of his speech, and such was the general confidence he had incited that during the next half hour he disposed of 28 bottles of his chilblain cure at a quarter a bottle. It was understood that he would return to his state at once and begin organizing, and between his cure and his oratory there is no doubt that he will achieve a grand success.

THE FLOWER BED.

There are 798 distinct species of roses known.

Lilacs, either the common purple or the Persian, become white during the process of forcing.

Poppies should be planted where they are to grow and then thinned out so each will have six or eight inches of room. In a sunny, rich soil, with all the water they want, poppies of all varieties are so beautiful and gay that they well repay culture. They are oriental beauties.

Very few annuals will make such a fine display of bloom during the summer and fall and furnish so many flowers for cutting as the verbena. It is without doubt our finest bedding plant. It has not the slightest objection to blooming right along up to hard frosts and freezing weather.

After Thinking It Over.

Mrs. Ridgeley—Come, John, get up. It's 5 o'clock. You said you wanted to get up early this morning and mow the lawn.

Two Widows and a Salted Mine.

A good story is told about how two prospectors had salted a mine in the Galena district in order to rob a couple of rich widows, which resulted in the aforesaid widows becoming much wealthier.

The prospectors had spent their last cent in digging a hole in the ground to the extent of 60 feet without striking anything but yellow clay. But one of them knew of two rich widows who were just spoiling to have their money sunk in a mine. Accordingly they spent two nights in salting their mine. They hadn't sufficient money to buy some paying dirt, but they stole this from a neighboring mine and hauled a lot of it over to dump into their mine. When several tons of this "paying dirt" had accumulated in the bottom of their mine, the widows were sent for, and while one was talking about the increasing value of the district the other was dumping out all kinds of lead and zinc ore before their astonished eyes.

The widows bought a half interest in that hole in the ground for $1,500. The next day there was no more ore in the shaft, and the fellows declared they would dig no longer. Then the widows bought the other half interest at a total cost of $2,000, and the men hiked out for Missouri, laughing in their sleeves. But the women, blindly believing that there must be more ore, continued with the digging and at a depth of ten additional feet struck the richest vein of the whole belt, realizing $75,000 in less than one year's time.—Kansas City Journal.

Duties of a Missionary In Africa.

He is a teacher, but he must also be a builder, for houses, cattle pens, stores and outhouses have to be constructed by the missionary. He must also be a doctor of medicine and a dentist. He must dose the sick natives, who will trust him implicitly to cure them of even leprosy, and he must be able to draw the most solidly rooted molar that ever grew in the skull of a black man. More than this, he must be his own cobbler, and when his boots wear out he must be able to resole them with good understandings and must be content sometimes with nothing but a few French nails and a piece of cowhide with which to accomplish it. His own socks he must darn and keep his temper while he does it. He must be his own carpenter and house decorator, as well as furniture maker.

But he must also be his own lawyer, accountant and bookkeeper, and when the currency takes the form of cowrie shells, as it does in Uganda, where 200 tiny cowries make a shilling, it is not easy to keep the accounts right. He must marry and divorce, give judgments and baptize. He must be gardener, cook and dairy maid, grow his own feed and look after his live stock. In addition to all this he is the parish minister to help and comfort all who come to him.—From "In Dwarf Land and Cannibal Country," A. B. Lloyd.

On Top of All the Others.

"I am sorry to hear your house was burned last night, Ruggles. But it was insured, wasn't it?"

NEW ROLLING STOCK.

Five New Coaches Added by the Grand Trunk to its Equipment.

The Grand Trunk car shops at Point St. Charles have just completed another lot of five of what are known in Grand Trunk parlance as the 300 series coaches, with many improvements over the last ones. These first-class coaches are models of modern science and are the result of expert workmanship. They are constructed in such a manner that every detail has been observed with a view to comfort and ease to the travelling public without regard to cost. In their entirety, they surpass anything that has hitherto been placed on the railroads of this country in the way of first-class cars.

The appointments of the interior show the artistic taste which has been observed in the way of decorations, blending of colors and the finish and carving ing of the woodwork. These coaches are vestibuled with heavy steel platforms and an adjustable cover over the steps, which can be let down, thus making an entirely closed vestibule and obviating any danger to passengers when passing from car to car, and in addition, they are the means of excluding dust and smoke. The cars are 58 feet long, with a seating capacity of 68 passengers, the body of the car holding 64, and the smoking room 14 people.

As regards the smoking room it certainly is a most comfortable and luxurious compartment, and far exceeds the old style smoking room. The seats in this part of the car are upholstered in crimson plush, and are roomy and most comfortable. The floors are covered with linoleum, while the floors of the body of the cars are carpeted with heavy Brussels of handsome design. The interior of the cars are finished in quartered oak, with ceilings of white wood, decorated in green and gold, and trimmings are of chaste design in bronze. The seats in the body of the coaches are what are known as the Grand Trunk standard reversible pattern, upholstered in crimson plush. The saloons are fitted with closets and white metal washstands.

Two of these magnificent coaches are now running on the eastbound and westbound night express trains between Montreal and Portland, and the other three are being placed on other divisions of the system. Those running between Montreal and Portland have elicited warm praise from the public and many are the encomiums that are heard with regard to the great satisfaction with which they have been received. The shops at Point St. Charles deserve the great credit for these creations of railroad equipment.

AN OLD RESIDENT

Death of Mr. Breckenridge of Belmont.

On Thursday, July 7th, death removed in the person of Mr. David Breckenridge, one of the oldest residents of the Township of Belmont. Deceased was born near Picton, Ont., 61 years ago, and came with his parents to the township when three years of age.

About a week before his death he attended "a raising bee" at one of his neighbor's, and after becoming overheated as a result of the active part he usually took at such places, drank a large quantity of iced water. He immediately took sick and had to be conveyed home by a neighbor. Medical help was called at once, but despite the skilled treatment of two doctors inflamation of the bowels developed and he gradually sank until death came on Thursday.

Deceased was a quiet, unassuming man, a hard worker, a careful manager, a kind father, and a devoted, loving husband. He was widely known, much respected, and the long procession which followed his remains to their last resting place goes to show the esteem in which he was held.

In his early life Mr. Breckenridge followed the occupation of a sailor. He knew the chain of great lakes well. He sailed chiefly on schooners and was mate several seasons. In the early seventies he bought the farm adjoining Norwood, now owned and occupied by Mr. Brethen, and farmed there for three years, until his father, whom he had allowed to handle the papers for him, mortgaged it, and he (David) becoming discouraged, threw it up and went back to the sailor life again.

Returning in a year, he bought the farm in Belmont, married Isabella, daughter of the late Robert Stewart, of Belmont, and has since farmed successfully, ever adding to and improving his property.

Deceased leaves a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters, to mourn his loss. The eldest, Robert, being the assistant principal of the Norwood Public School.

The funeral, which took place to the Maple Grove Cemetery, Havelock, on Saturday, was one of the largest ever seen in Belmont.

The funeral services at the house and at the grave were conducted by the Rev. D. A. Hamilton, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Havelock.

The pall bearers were:—Messrs. J. Wright, R. H. McLaughlin, W. Seabrook, Jas. Simpson, H. Seabrook, N. King. We extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.—Register.

WITH ENGLAND

The Better Class of Americans Sympathize With Great Britain.

Captain Gaskin, of Kingston, is of the opinion that the better class of people across the line are not as antagonistic to England as some American papers would have their readers believe. Of course the Dutch and Clan-Na-Gael Irish are, but thinking people are with England in the South African war. He spent some days in Detroit and conversed with many business men on the subject, and found that they were not by any means pro-Boer. The popular feeling was plainly illustrated at "Wonderland," where many thousands were gathered on Saturday evening. When Lord Roberts' picture was shown the crowd cheered loudly, and Queen Victoria's picture was also received with applause.

P.E.I. GOVERNMENT SAVED.

Dr. Douglas Has Been Elected Over Joseph Wise.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., July 13.—Dr. Douglas, Liberal, has a majority of 303.

Some time ago Wise, who had been returned by the West River district of Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, as a supporter of the Liberal administartion, resigned; but the Government having declined to issue writs for a new election, as Wise asserted they promised to do at once, he attempted to take his seat and vote against the Government. He was then ejected from the House. An election was held yesterday, when Wise ran in the Conservative interests, the Liberals' candidate being Mr. Douglas. The Liberals have now a majority of one in the Legislature.

The Dominion Census.

Ottawa, July 13.—It is understood that the census will be taken as before on April 5. The mere enumeration of the population will be completed thereafter in a few weeks, but the collation of the complete industrial statistics will take near two years. In 1891 it took five years. It is hinted that Statistician George Johnson may be supplanted in his work by a man of fewer years and more scholastic attainments, having made a special study of census taking.

Minister of Justice Says That is His Private Opinion.

Ottawa, July 13.—In the Senate yesterday morning Hon. David Mills reviewed the whole position of Lieutenant-Governor McInnes, holding that Mr. McInnes acted unconstitutionally in several important respects during his official career towards his advisors, and that, if he had taken the advice of his old friend, Hon. R. W. Scott, given to him confidentially, he would still be in office.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell congratulated the Minister of Justice on his important speech.

Providence Doing the Work.

Senator Landry introduced a long question relating to Senate reform; to which Hon. Mr. Mills said: "Providence is engaged in reforming the Senate." He said that the appointing of a French Senator to the Cabinet would be considered in due time.

In the afternoon Senator Ferguson gave notice of a number of amendments to the Election Act.

Mills Says There Was Fraud.

In answer to a question from Senator Perley, re emergency rations, Mr. Mills said that his own impression was that a fraud had been perpetrated on the Militia Department.

The Senators spent some time in discussing Mr. Blair's railway bill. They sat on the Elections bill, and passed 45 clauses before adjournment.

GREATEST THIEVES CHURCH MEMBERS

Sensational Remarks at Winnipeg by Rev. C. A. Eaton—Discusses "The Man Problem" in Orginal Fashion.

At the Baptist convention at Winnipeg on Tuesday Rev. Chas. A. Eaton, of Toronto, led an interesting discussion on "The Man Problem," as applied to church work. 1. The masculine mind is not so prone to spiritual things; 2. this century is saturated with commercialism and materialism; 3. men go where there is something to take them; 4 it is of no use for the preacher to preach Jesus on Sunday and have his members go and pick pockets on Monday. The biggest thieves to-day are members of Christian churches. Those who organize big deals or big steals were pious deacons and church members. If the preachers were to speak out they would fire him quicker than scat—he would lose his job. Rev. Mr. Vansickle thought boys would be just as religious as girls if they were as well looked after. Rev. Dr. Spencer told of writing a hundred letters asking men to give their reasons for not attending church. One reason given was: "We hear such tommy-rot in the pulpit." Another was that employers who were grinding them down and getting rich at their expense were among the leading supporters and officers of the churches. He suggested going to the men themselves to find out the reasons, and that efforts be made by means of open air preaching to reach non-church goers.

Unnecessary Expenditure.

Hamilton Spectator.

The Toronto Globe says:—

"Hon. Geo. E. Foster denounces expenditure in the abstract, but does not mention the particular expenditures he would not make if in office. Mr. Foster is a great statesman—in the abstract."

Mr. Foster has not told us what particular expenditures he would cut off if he had the power, but we think we are safe in saying that, were he the boss of the Government he would not favor expenditure for these things:—

Bringing to Canada of the scum of creation.

Paying $3 a pound for dog biscuit.

Filling Quebec full of public works.

Giving money to gentlemen who want to build railways on speculation.

Giving Quebec additional judges.

Frittering away money on unnecessary works for the purpose of catching votes.

Sending Tarte to Gay Paree to disgrace Canada.

Sending a horde of Grits to France to look after a useless exhibit.

Building railways for Mackenzie & Mann.

Increasing the price of Government contracts that his friends might have a rake-off.

Increasing the wasteful expenditure "next year."

These are some of the many ways of spending public money in which we think Mr. Foster would not indulge.

"Delays are dangerous." Those who have poor, weak, impure blood should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It never disappoints.

THE RUSSIAN ENVOY WAS BOILED ALIVE

The Horrible Story of Chinese Cruelty That Comes To-day--Little Room for Doubt That the Foreigners at Pekin Have Been Killed.

A HORRIBLE STORY OF CRUELTY

St. Petersburg, July 11, via. Paris, July 13—A cablegram from Admiral Alexieff, at Port Arthur, confirms the horrible details of the assassination of M. De Giers which, merely in form of a rumor, had already reached Russia. The Admiral declares that the Russian envoy was dragged through the streets by the Boxers, insulted, beaten and tortured, and then thrown into a great kettle and boiled to death. Then the remains were thrown to the dogs. While M. De Giers was being disposed of the mob danced around the cauldron. M. De Giers, Admiral Alexieff's advices declare, suffered a fate worse than death, and was beaten and tortured with sharp sticks until life was extinct. The legation officials are said to have been tortured fiendishly until death ended their sufferings. M. DeGiers and his legation officials resisted desperately and his brave bodyguard killed many of the attacking mob. Immediately, upon receipt of Admiral Alexieff's report, the Czar ordered the cabinet and council of state to go into session at once.

THE ANNIHILATION AT PEKIN

Shanghai, July 14—Prince Sheng, the director of telegraphs, has communicated a message to the consuls here, announcing the murder of the foreigners at Pekin, and laying the blame on the anti-foreign generals, Tung Fuh Saing. The message says that Tung, enraged at the defence made by the British legation, ordered the guns to fire, demolishing the legation and setting the ruins aflame, the result was the annihilation of the foreigners.

FAVORABLE TO THE BOXERS

Washington, July 14—Secretary Hay has received an undated despatch from Consul-general Goodno, at Shanghai, stating that the Governor of Hanon Fshnafi, has issued a proclamation favorable in its terms to the Boxers. Hanon is the province lying immediately north of Shanghai, and between that city and Pekin.

LI HUNG CHANG SUMMONED

Hong Kong, July 14—Li Hung Chang yesterday received an urgent telegraphic summons to Pekin. It is reported that he will proceed north to-morrow. The Chinese agree that his absence is certain to lead to trouble at Canton.

GERMANS RATALIATED

Washington, July 14—The Japanese legation here has received a despatch from the Minister of Foreign Office, stating that after the German minister was shot at Pekin, the German marines made an assault upon the Tien Tsin Governor's house and burned down the buildings. The despatch goes into the affair in detail.

LITTLE DOUBT FELT

London, July 14—The British Consul General at Shanghai in transmitting to the foreign office, messages from the Governor of Shang Lung, already published, says he fears there can be little doubt in regard to the fate of the foreigners at Pekin.

Searchlights at Fires.

By means of electric lights the interior of a burning building is made as plain as daylight, and firemen can tell at a glance from the window ledge whether their presence is needed inside. The lights are made detachable, so they can be taken from the engine and set up on standards. They are also provided with 200 feet of flexible conducting cables, which enables the firemen to run the searchlights out on a pier, or even into a building.

One of the great fields for usefulness of this apparatus is in lighting up the interior of boats when on fire. When a ship at the pier gets on fire, the darkness in the hold makes it difficult for the firemen to control the flames. Dense volumes of smoke further obscure the point where the fire is burning, and sometimes ship and cargo are lost simply because the firemen are unable to locate the exact place of the fire.—Harper's Weekly.

No Need to Cross.

Booker T. Washington told the following story of a member of the "po'h white trash" who endeavored to cross a stream by means of a ferry owned by a black man:

"Uncle Mose," said the white man, "I want to cross, but I hain't got no money."

Uncle Mose scratched his head. "Doan' you got no money 't all?" he queried.

"No," said the wayfaring stranger, "I haven't a cent."

"But it done cost you but 3 cents," insisted Uncle Mose, "ter cross de ferry."

"I know," said the white man, "but I haven't got the 3 cents."

Uncle Mose was in a quandary. "Boss," he said, "I done tole you what. 'Er man what's got no 3 cents am jes' es well off on dis side er de river as on de odder."—Cleveland Leader.

The Ladies' Trailing Skirts.

Harper's Bazaar.

During a congress of physicians held in Rome lately, war was declared on the trailing skirts of women. One doctor demonstrated the unsanitary evil of this fashion by sending a number of ladies into the street wearing trailing skirts, with instructions to walk about for an hour. When they returned their trains were subject to microscopic examination, and the doctor discovered whole colonies of bacteria on their skirts. The physicians established that the germs of influenza, consumption and typhoid fever are the least of the evils which careless mothers after an hour's promenade bring home to the cradle of their children.

The Farmers Problem.

Weekly Sun.

The farmer of Ontario is to-day laboring under a great disadvantage. He finds that the grain of the farmer of the Western States is carried from Chicago to Montreal at about half the rate that his grain is carried for only half the distance to the same place. He is not going to improve his position by building new or improved routes for American grains, but his position will be improved if he secures from our railroads fair and equitable treatment for himself. How he can best secure this treatment is the problem before him to-day.

How the Machine is Supplied.

E. B. Osler, M. P.

I differed with my leader and with the leader of the Government when they agreed that these railway subsidies were not sources of corruption in elections, such as we are now having exposed. It is from such subsidies that the money is supplied to pay the men who have been engaged in the ballot stuffing and the election frauds which we hear so much about. These men are not committing these crimes for nothing. They are paid with the money of the people.

ONLY THIRTY MEN ESCAPED.

British of the Nitral's Nek Garrison Surprised and Wiped Out.

Further Details of the Disaster to Scots Greys on Wednesday—Nearly Every Man Was Killed or Wounded in the Fighting Before Their Ammunition Gave Out—Boers Employed Armed Natives.

London, July 14.—Lord Roberts has sent nothing further concerning the Nitral's Nek affair. Pretoria despatches, however, show that the Lincolnshires lost half of their officers, including Col. Roberts, who was wounded and taken prisoner.

In the Derdepoort affair, mentioned in Lord Roberts' despatch, the men in the front rank of the Boers wore khaki uniforms and helmets, and the Dragoons passed them unsuspectingly, under the impression that they were Hussars. The mistake was not discovered until the Boers opened a heavy fire, when the Dragoons were within 400 yards.

British prisoners who have escaped to Kroonstad report that Gen. Dewet's force of 10,000 men, with ten guns, expelled from Bethelem by Gen. Clements and Gen. Paget, have have taken up a strong position 15 miles to the southward in the hills around Retieff Nek. President Steyn is reported to be with them.

Another case of Boers wearing khaki is reported to have happened at Lindley on June 26, when they surprised a picket of 25 men of the Yorkshire Light Infantry, 18 of whom were killed or wounded.

THE LINCOLNSHIRE DISASTER.

Further Details Show That a Great Many Were Killed or Wounded.

Pretoria, July 13.—Col. Mahon, reinforced by Gen. French's brigade, Wednesday took all the positions held by the Boers in the neighborhood of Rietfontein. A number of Boer dead were found. The British casualties were trifling.

The Lincolnshire Disaster.

Details are now at hand regarding the disaster to the Lincolnshire Regiment on Wednesday. It appears that five companies were ordered Tuesday to proceed to and hold the pass through Magalesburg in the neighborhood of Daspoort Fort. They arrived in the afternoon at the pass, where three companies, with two guns, took up a position, and camped for the night, leaving two companies on a plain south of the pass. The eastern hill was rugged, rocky and inaccessible, but further east apparently approachable from the main ridge.

Boers Opened Heavy Fire.

At daybreak the Boers appeared on the eastern kopje, and opened a heavy fire. Confusion ensued. The colonel ordered the men to take up a position on a kopje west of the gap. From this point a hot fire was kept up during the entire day. Two guns under the escort of the Scots Greys placed in advance of the main body were captured after a stout resistance.

A Hot Fight.

Nearly every man was killed or wounded. A Maxim gun was brought into action early in the day. The fire was too hot, and the men were forced to retire. A sergeant, aided by seven volunteers, saved the gun. There was a continuous fire all along the line, the Lincolnshire Regiment men vigorously replying. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Boers appeared to the left of the position occupied by the British.

A Terrible Affair.

An officer and fifteen men attempted to charge them, and fourteen were killed or wounded as the result. The companies were practically surrounded, but they kept up a steady fire unwaveringly, until towards nightfall, when their ammunition gave out.

Boers Employing Armed Natives.

The latest arrival from the scene states that at the time of his escape the men were taking a good position under cover and with fixed bayonets were awaiting the approach of the Boers. It is understood upon good authority that the Boers have employed armed natives. Two of the natives leaped from cover when a small party from the Lincolnshire Regiment stepped up and demanded their surrender. A soldier stepped forward and shot both of the natives dead. One officer who succeeded in making his escape had an encounter with an armed native. It is feared that the losses of the British were numerous. About thirty of the British soldiers straggled back to camp yesterday. According to all accounts a great force is being assembled to prevent further progress of the Boers.

LIFE..

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator :

Paris, July 14.—Information given the police by inhabitants of the Rue Cervantes, led to the discovery of a manufactory of spurious Brazilian Bank notes and the arrest of six forgers. A raid resulted in the astounding discovery of most perfect machines and engraved plates and of correspondence which proved that the forgers had agreed to deliver 4,000,000 francs in bank notes before the end of August.

Bank of England Notes.

It is not every one who is aware that a Bank of England note is not of the same thickness all through. The paper is thicker in the left hand corner, to enable it to retain a keener impression of the vignette there, and it is also considerably thicker in the dark shadows of the center letters and beneath the figures at the ends. Counterfeit notes are invariably of one thickness only throughout.—London Telegraph.

Wornout Nerves.

So Weak she Couldn't Sleep or Work—Hands Trembled—Could Scarcely Walk—Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. Margaret Iron, Tower Hill, N. B., writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good. I was so weak that I could not walk twice the length of the house. My hands trembled so that I could not carry a pint of water. I was too nervous to sleep, and unable to do work of any kind.

"Since using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been completely restored. I can walk a mile without any inconvenience. Though 76 years old, and quite fleshy, I do my own housework, and considerable sewing, knitting, and reading besides. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proved of inestimable value to me."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the world's greatest restorative for pale, weak, nervous men, women, and children. In pill form, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Daily Review.

SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1900.

THE ONLY WAY TO GET FACTS.

What a farce the West Elgin Election Commission report is when read in conjunction with the written confession made and signed by the Liberal candidate, Mr. McNish. All any one has to do is to read this confession and then read the report to see what a complete farce the Government has engineered in their endeavor to cover up and smooth down the disgraceful iniquity unearthed in the West Elgin bye-election. The report will accomplish nothing for the Government, however. Mr. McNish's own confession cannot be unsaid without placing the man in a very grave position, and the confession admits all the crooked and corrupt work that was done by the "machine."

The fact that the Commissioners clear Mr. McNish and several others simply goes to show how complete a farce the investigation was. Mr. McNish did not make the confession of Liberal corruption unless he knew the acts had actually been committed, and that the commissioners did not have the evidence before them that would show who were guilty and how the work was done emphasizes the effective means the Ontario Government adopted to narrow down the investigation and prevent a full and thorough investigation.

With the confession in existence the commission's report shows how necessary it is that there must be a change of men at Toronto in order to have a proper and thorough investigation of the crookedness and corruption which runs rampant under the discredited Ross combination.

The facts and details, the exposures and the convictions that must preceed the much-desired reform in Ontario politics can never be obtained under the present men who exist officially and whose only hope of official existence rests in the work that can be done by the machine and their following.

The necessity of the change is emphasized by this farce investigation and the report which has resulted.

POOR SIFTON.

The Voice, the journal published in Winnipeg and edited by Mr. A. W. Puttee, the labor M. P. for that city, has been scoring the Dominion Government, and accuses it of standing in with plotting "boodlers." He also gives Mr. Sifton a vigorous "roast," regardless of the pathetic appeal of the Globe in behalf of this "injured innocent," who failed to face Parliament but spent the time during the session in Paris. The Voice says :—

"At the last hour of the session, and possibly of Parliament, the Dominion Government comes down with a barefaced proposal to devote three and a half millions to railway promoters and charter-mongers in the Dominion, a free gift for the most part to men already wealthy. Just think of it, working men, in addition to taxation in every other conceivable form, there is to be paid about a dollar a head for every man, woman and child in Canada, to help a band of crafty, scheming exploiters to go into a profitable business monopoly for their own personal benefit. It is a fitting climax to the policy of a subservient administration and most conclusive proof that the Grits are, as a party, as completely in the clutches of corporations as their predecessors. That Mackenzie & Mann should be so favorably treated and get such a good slice of appropriations is no surprise; they have had a whip hand on the Government team ever since they started out four years ago. Whatever the Government has to give Mackenzie & Mann must have their full share, and they did not make a few more millions out of the Yukon and secure a blanket appropriation on the mining region was no fault of Mr. Sifton's.

ANOTHER REASON WHY THEY SHOULD GO.

The Mail and Empire gives another very good reason why the Dominion Government should go:

When the Conservatives took office the total expenditures, both revenue and capital, were $[illegible].

The Conservatives enlarged the canals and built the Canadian Pacific. They allowed $18,000,000 to the provinces to keep them free from direct taxation, and spent largely on the development of the country, adding the Northwest to our Empire.

When they went out the total expenditure of all kinds was $42,371,000.

This was an increase of $10,336,000 in eighteen years.

The new Liberals found the expenditure at $42,371,000. They have done nothing much, but last year they spent $51,542,000.

This was an increase of $9,141,000 in four years.

The Conservatives do more and spend less than do the new Liberals.

The taxes in 1878 aggregated $18,476,000. In 1896 they were $27,446,000—an increase of $8,970,000 in eighteen years.

In 1896 the taxes were $27,446,000; in 1900, under the new Liberals, they were $37,919,000—an increase of $10,473,000 in ten years.

The new Liberals bleed the people of their earnings and ought to go.

Sir Richard Cartwright called railway subsidies "bribes" when the Conservatives were in power. Now, when the Liberals are dealing out millions in these "bribes" Sir Richard says nothing but acquiesces. It evidently makes a difference to Sir Richard on whose behalf these "bribes" are being used as to whether he will protest or not. Of such are the principles of Liberal statesmen.

Hon. Dr. Borden's position on the emergency ration scandal is becoming worse, and with him, of course, the four Liberals who brought in the disgraceful majority whitewashing report, also suffer. Ten Liberal members in the House refused to swallow the dose and voted against the report. Several others absented themselves from the House and did not vote at all, and, as a result, the Government majority of fifty was reduced to fourteen. And now Hon. David Mills, the Minister of Justice, speaking in the Senate, acknowledges that a fraud was perpetrated on the Militia Department. The Minister and the Liberal members of the Committee must be beginning to be thoroughly ashamed of the wholesale whitewash.

FRIGHTENED DYSPEPTICS

Find Courage, Relief and Cure in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Are you afraid to eat? Thousands are. They know that Dyspepsia, Indigestion, or one or other of the long list of stomach troubles follows every meal. In order to escape this they deliberately starve themselves. This is utterly needless, for a couple of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal, prevent any evil or unpleasant effect.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are an infallible cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Sour Stomach, Flatulence, and all diseases of the stomach and other digestive organs.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets always cure these diseases and also give health and strength to the stomach and digestive organs. They digest the food themselves, without aid from the stomach, which is given time to rest, and recover from any weakness or other defect.

There has not been a single failure to cure, since Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have been introduced. They have cured every case in which they have been tried. They will cure you. They cannot fail if you give them a fair trial.

Major Drummond Recalled.

Ottawa, July 14.—Major Drummond, military secretary to His Excellency the Governor-General, has been recalled to England to join his regiment, the famous Scots Guards. Major Drummond will be second in command of the battalion now in England. The other two battalions are in active service in South Africa. Major Drummond saw service in South Africa, but was invalided home several weeks ago. He was anxious to return to the front, but would not be permitted. Major Drummond, Mrs. Drummond and family and suite will sail from Montreal on July 21.

THE BICYCLE AND DRINK

The Wheel Credited With the Curtailing of the Saloon Business in Toronto.

Among the good things the bicycle and the street railway are credited with in Toronto is a curtailing of the liquor saloon business, to such an extent that an agitation has set up among saloon keepers to move out into the residential districts as a final hope. The Globe, reviewing the statistics of licenses in Toronto, says that in 1875 Toronto licensed 390 saloons and 123 shops to sell spirituous liquors to a population of 68,075, being an average of one saloon for 240 persons, and, if we suppose that only the head of each family of five used that saloon, the average will be reduced to one saloon for 48 men, leaving out, of course, the 123 shops, which may be taken to have sufficiently supplied the remaining members of the family. In 1886 the number of licenses was 224 to taverns to supply a population of 118,403 persons, giving an average of one for 530 persons. In 1887 the number of saloons was reduced to 150, for a population of 126,163 persons, there being an average of one saloon for about 840 persons. The number of licenses has remained stationary since that time, while the population has increased to 192,987 in 1900, giving now one saloon for about every 1,300 people. At this rate one might have expected that the business of the saloons would have increased in proportion, though the location of most of them has practically remained the same since 1887, 139 out of the 150 now licensed being quite within the business portions of the city. But the Globe thinks the hopes of the saloon men from a transfer into residental districts, if they could secure the necessary permission, would be futile, for conditions have changed and toperism is now tabooed. The Globe says that the customer of times past who took half a dozen friends into a saloon to liquor up, and then propped himself up against the bar until each of his friends had followed suit, is now either dead from indulgence, or else is financially ruined. His class has become extinct, and with him drinking at the bar went out as a social custom. The Globe winds up its article as follows:—"There are large sections of residential territory in Toronto with no saloons, and the license holders seem to think that they would do better there than in the crowded down-town section, but it is quite within the limits of probability that if they were successful in moving out into these districts, they would find that the prudent and thrifty householder would rather water his grass and trim his lawn than spend the evening treating at the bar."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only medicine that will cure Diabetes. Like Bright's Disease this disease was incurable until Dodd's Kidney Pills cured it. Doctors themselves confess that without Dodd's Kidney Pills they are powerless against Diabetes. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the first medicine that ever cured Diabetes. Imitations—box, name and pill, are advertised to do so, but the medicine that does cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills are fifty cents a box at all druggists.

Diabetes

Freezing Weather in July

Would cause great discomfort and loss, but fortunately it is seldom known. A vast amount of misery is caused at this season, however, by impoverished blood, poor appetite and general debility. These conditions may be remedied by enriching the blood and toning the stomach with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine seems to put new life into the whole physical system, simply because of its wonderful power to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood, create an appetite and invigorate the digestive functions. We advise you to get a bottle and try it if you are not feeling just right. It will do you more good than a six weeks' vacation. It is the best medicine money can buy.

THAT PATHETIC APPEAL.

That Was Made by the Globe on Behalf of Hon. Clifford Sifton.

(Mail and Empire.)

We are sorry that every humane individual in the country would be moved to tears if he could believe all that is said of the sorrows and the tribulations of Mr. Clifford Sifton by that other paragon of virtue, the Toronto Globe. It appears from the statement of the organ, that Mr. Sifton is a much-abused man, and that he ranks easily with the Christian martyrs. The sufferings to which he has been exposed have not, however, been inflicted exclusively by the Tory heathens. On the contrary, they have come also from within the party—from Liberals who suspect and distrust him, from men who view his career with jealousy, resentment, and disappointment. Through it all Mr. Sifton has conducted himself with marvellous "dignity, showing neither littleness nor bitterness." He has been too high-minded to condescend to notice his nefarious opponents, or to reply to the unspeakable Martin. As a result he has come out "unscathed," and is bound when the history of Canada is written to stand forth as one of the largest men of our time. The organ regards Sifton as so great a statesman that Canada cannot afford "to have him sacrificed either to private funds and to party animosities."

This certificate of character, which is issued for the purpose of continuing Mr. Sifton in the position from which he ought to have been ejected long ago, would have come with better grace from some other source. Mr. Sifton is answerable for the Crow's Nest deal. The organ itself says he pushed that transaction through. It is a brassy and impudent thing for the chief beneficiaries of that most scandalous affair which depletes the treasury to the tune of two millions of dollars, and gives private territory to politicians who have not earned it, to confer upon a co-conspirator a clean bill of health, and a lofty reputation for statesmanship, ability, and honesty. If we want an opinion of Mr. Sifton from a really Liberal source, let us turn to somebody who owes him nothing and knows him well. Such a man is Mr. James Fisher, for many years his political friend in the Province of Manitoba. This gentleman was cognizant of the railway deals made by the late Manitoba Cabinet. Those deals were extravagant and bad. They conferred riches upon railway promoters, and loaded the people with debts. When Mr. Greenway was appealing to the province not long since, their influence contributed to his defeat. An outraged electorate rose in revolt against them, and swept Greenway from the scene. Says Mr. Fisher: "Let me say, in justice to Mr. Greenway, that I am quite sure he was not the author of these schemes of public robbery. He was driven to acceptance of them by those by whom he was unfortunately surrounded. I speak whereof I know when I say he acted against his better judgment in these and other matters. He yielded to the influences that surrounded him, and lives to-day to regret it. The author of these schemes, and the arch-corrupter of Manitoba, was Mr. Clifford Sifton, the young Napoleon of the West, as his friends admiringly style him. To-day Mr. Greenway in his own heart, and in tones much louder than mere whispers, curses the young Napoleon for driving him into a course of conduct that has led to his downfall and the ruin of Manitoba Liberals. Let me add that the time is not far distant, if I mistake not, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier will discover that the Manitoba Government is not the only Liberal Government that Clifford Sifton is bound to wreck." This is a Liberal judgment of Mr. Sifton, who is canonized in Ontario by the agency which worked with him in the Crow's Nest and the Yukon deals. Mr. Sifton is clearly no martyr. He was taken into the Cabinet against the advice of the clean Liberals, partly because with the aid of the school question he could make it miserable for Laurier if he was left out, and partly because of his capacity for transactions of the kind that Mr. Fisher condemns. We see the result to-day. Of sound policy looking to the promotion of Canadian interests, Mr. Sifton has none. His entire administration of the Interior Department has been, and is, of a political and exploiting character. He has jammed the offices full of the political workers, Smart, Pedley, Preston, Jury, McCleary, Wade, McGregory, Grieve, Davies, and dozens of others are politicians receiving their rewards from the public chest. He has striven to unload upon the North-West a foreign population to which the people object for the purpose of swelling his immigration figures, and having there men, whose votes can be polled en bloc. His Yukon administration disgraced us before the civilized world, alike for its incapacity and its corruption, and was so utterly rotten that clean Liberals condemned it, while the majority in Parliament had to protect him from the investigation that ought to have been held.

His railway deals are viewed with well-grounded suspicion. According to the Winnipeg Tribune, they are "barefaced robberies." The rejected Yukon affair which was falsely represented to Parliament and the country as a necessity was a deliberate imposition, looking solely to the transference of vast territories to friendly contractors. Even though dead, that transaction speaks to our pockets, and we are bound now to pay $334,000 for Mr. Sifton's blunder in ordering the work to go on before Parliament had authorized it. The party organ is right when it says that Mr. Sifton is objected to by both Liberals and Conservatives. He certainly is regarded as an unsafe man. The organ is right again when it appeals for his continuance in the Cabinet. The departure of the arch-corruptor in the face of an election would be an awful admission for Laurier to make, and besides it would be a pity—a great pity—to break the set.

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midsummer of life, and he left his family $1,000,000.

LAST WILL TESTAMENT

The doctor's certificate showed that death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend; "That man was a suicide. He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been sound. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and by neglect of symptoms which have been warning him a year past, that his stomach was failing in its duties."

The symptoms of a disordered condition of the stomach and the organs of digestion and nutrition are, among others, variable appetite, sour risings, heartburn, undue fullness after eating, dull headache, dingy complexion, discolored eye, fluctuations in physical strength, nervousness, sleeplessness, despondency. No one person will have all these symptoms at once, but any one of them calls for prompt aid for the suffering stomach.

The restoration of the stomach, digestive and nutritive organs to a condition of sound health, begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses from that dose until the functions of the stomach and its related organs are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet, the appetite healthful, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear. In one word the body is in a condition of perfect health.

"I was troubled with indigestion about two years," writes Wm. [illegible], Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Don't let the dealer sell you a substitute, if you want a cure. Insist on having "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets surpass all complexion powders. They make the skin healthy and the complexion clear.

Chronic Indigestion

By far the most important part of digestion takes place in the intestines and it is folly to expect stomach medicines to cure a severe case of indigestion or dyspepsia. The kidneys, liver and bowels must first be made regular and active, and the only remedy which acts directly on these organs is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They are purely vegetable, act pleasantly and naturally and positively cure dyspepsia, biliousness and stomach troubles. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; take no substitute.

FIGHT AGAINST THE SENATE.

"The Haven of Rest For the Rejected of the People."

After So Describing Canada's Upper House, Solicitor-General Fitzpatrick Moves That the Amendment Regarding the Three New Quebec Judges Be Not Concurred In—Senators Charged With Working Against French Canada

Ottawa, July 14.—A visitor to the gallery yesterday would have thought the session was but begun had he judged by the discussion upon the Quebec judges' bill, returned amended from the Senate, which cut out the clause making three additional judges in the Montreal district. The whole day was spent in discussing Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick's amendment that the clause be reinserted Of business there was but a drop.

Mr. Foster's Queries.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in reply to a question put by Mr. Foster, said that the Dominion Government could not say at what time the Royal Commission appointed to look into election frauds would proceed. That was a matter which was entirely within the control of the commission. It was, however, the intention of the Government to give such solicitors as the commission would require.

Mr. Foster brought to the attention of the Government a published statement that the Nova Scotia Government had presented a claim for repayment of subsidies given by the Provincial Government to the Western Counties Railway, and the Government had appointed Judge Burton to arbitrate the matter. Mr. Fielding said the Provincial Government had made such a claim, but the Government had refused to entertain it. The Government of Nova Scotia had also presented a claim to the Dominion for subsidies paid by the provinces to railways which were now part of the Intercolonial Railway system. This claim was to be arbitrated. The Minister of Interior replied that a fiat had been granted to the Regina Long Park and Saskatchewan Railway, to sue for their claim to cash subsidies in place of land which the company claims to have been deprived of.

Want Clute, Q. C., as a Judge.

A petition legally signed by the members of the Belleville bar has been received at the Department of Justice, praying for the appointment of R. C. Clute, Q.C., to the vacancy in the High Court Bench. The Governemnt, however, wants to keep Mr. Clute as conciliator for labor troubles, after his success in Kootenay strike. The man who wants the position is B. M. Britton, Q.C., and he has party qualifications.

Fighting the Senate.

Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick moved that the amendment of the Senate to the Quebec Judges bill be not concurred in.

The pith of his argument was that the Provincial Government of Quebec had passed legislation making provision for the appointment of three new judges in Montreal. This legislation was passed unanimously. Now the province wanted the Federal Government to exercise their power and give the three judges. To refuse the three judges would be to violate the constitution. He declared that the system of administration of law in Quebec was one to which the province was wedded, and the re-distribution of the judges was out of the question.

He said the action of the Senate was just what was to be expected from a body that was not representative, but formed "a haven of rest for the rejected of the people." He said the action of the Senate was a blow aimed at French-Canadians, and was an interference with provincial rights.

Places For Politicians.

Mr. Bergeron replied that the Government desired to appoint three new judges in order to give places to three political friends. He complained of the present system of legal administration, and pleaded for a redistribution of the judges, holding that that would do away with the need of additional judges.

Many Liberals spoke, arguing that the Senate, being in a majority Conservative, was working against the French-Canadians.

Sir Wilfrid Denies It.

Mr. Foster said that when the House opened yesterday he had asked Sir Wilfrid to let a vote be taken on Mr. Fitzpatrick's amendment without discussion. Sir Wilfrid refused to do so. Why? Because the Government wished to sneer at the Senate and to make campaign literature on the eve of an election.

The whole question, said Mr. Foster, was one of opinion, and it might have arisen over a bill affecting Manitoba, as well as over a bill affecting Quebec. The Senate had expressed its opinion, as it had a perfect right to do, and for which it took the responsibility.

The Premier had lent himself to a scheme to make political capital on a basis that brought the two races in Canada into conflict. Yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the man who had declared his proudest hope was to have engraven on his tombstone, "He tried to cement the two races in Canada."

Sir Wilfrid, in replying, said that he had never appealed to racial differences, and never did he countenance such an appeal. Referring to the Senate, he said "the Senate had no right to throw out the clause," and in so doing it violated the British North America Act. His final remark was that responsible government had become a by-word, and Canada had the tyranny of the Senate imposed upon her.

A vote was taken at 6 o'clock, and by 68 to 22 Mr. Fitzpatrick's amendment carried.

Mulock's "Jolly" Sense.

The House went into supply last night and it was discovered that numerous wharfs were being built at public expense down on the Soulanges Canal. Mr. Foster pointed out that this was an innovation unheard of until Mr. Mulock assumed control of the Public Works. He then surprised the Postmaster General by reading the following circular letter, sent to the faithful by Mr. Mulock. The letter speaks for itself and Mr. Mulock had no reply:

Ottawa, Ont., March 13, 1900.

My Dear Sir,—During Mr. Tarte's absence I have been requested to take charge of his department for him, and it would be of great service in enabling me to take up his work if you would kindly write me at your earliest convenience, with reference to the following subjects:

(1) For what works in your constituency has there been a Parliament vote?

(2) Have these works been begun? If so, in what state of progress are they?

(3) If not begun, what is your advice as to whether or not they should be begun?

(4) Are you asking for provision being made in supplementary estimates for (a) new works, (b) carrying on, or completion, of works already authorised or begun? If so, what are your views? (a) As to sum required. (b) As to what work should be performed?

(5) In case of any work not now under contract, but authorised by vote of Parliament, please say whether you advise its being carried out by contract, or by day labor. Yours faithfully,

W. Mulock.

Minister Blair's estimates on canals came in for hours of discussion and by one o'clock the war was as warm as at the beginning and it looked like an all-night session. Members on both sides of the House were to be found all over the buildings, sleeping, waiting for the House to quit.

THE SENATE.

Ottawa, July 14.—Hon. Mr. Mills yesterday announced that the Senate would sit twice on Saturday.

The senators devoted their energies to the Elections Act all day, holding three sessions and making much progress.

In the evening Sir Mackenzie Bowell moved that the provisions relating to the deputy-returning officer, removing the counterfoils should be amended by adding the words "destroy the same." This carried.

Sir Mackenzie moved additions to clauses, aiming to overcome the residential clauses of the Ontario and to allow voters who may move in the same city or town, so long as they are still residents, to retain their votes. This carried.

The committee reported progress and got leave to sit again.

A message from the Commons was received, refusing to concur in the Senate amendment to the Quebec Judges Act.

The Senate adjourned till to-day at 11 a. m.

A CANVAS OF ST. LOUIS.

Strikers Will Try to Raise Funds and Find Popular Sentiment.

St. Louis, Mo., July 14.—Two thousand solicitors engaged by the Trades and Labor Unions of St. Louis to canvas the city and collect contributions for the striking street railway men's 'bus line, began work yesterday. In addition to collecting funds for this project, the solicitors are expected to ascertain what proportion of the population favor trades and labor unions.

An explosion occurred during the night on the Easton avenue line of the Transit Company. The car ran over an explosive supposed to be dynamite, which shattered the front truck and otherwise damaged the car. Nobody was injured.

They Died the Same Hour.

Kingston, Ont., July 14.—Captain John Donnelly, sr., died yesterday after a prolonged illness, aged 65 years. He was born in Ireland and came to Kingston in 1846. Captain Donnelly sailed up to 1858, and then began his wrecking career, so famous on Canadian waters.

William Johnston, first enginner of the Royal Military College since its opening in 1876, died suddenly at 9 o'clock yesterday morning of heart failure. He had wheeled to the residence of Capt. John Donnelly, sr., and had just dismounted when death overtook him. He and Capt. Donnelly, who died ten minutes later, were brothers-in-law, their wives being sisters. Capt. Johnston was aged about 60 years, and was considered the foremost authority in Canada on beam engines.

Red Ned Captured.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 14.—A posse of officers captured Beaumont, a desperate criminal known as "Red Ned," yesterday. Beaumont was released from Dannemora prison in June, having served 16 years for criminal assault, and horse stealing. Coming here, he crossed to Ottawa, Ont., where he kidnapped Oscar Gallagher, 14 years of age, and came over to the fishing shack on this side. Beaumont threatened to kill the boy if he told his story to any person or attempted to escape. Gallagher was recognized from newspaper descriptions, and the arrest followed.

THE CHINESE SITUATION.

No News of the Legations But the Worst is Generally Feared.

Li Hung Chang Will Remain in Canton Until Allied Troops Have Defeated Prince Tuan's Forces in Pekin—Then He Will Co-operate With Prince Ching Yung Lu and Other Pro-Foreign Viceroys—Chinese Driving in the Allies.

London, July 14.—The scanty cable despatches received to-day add nothing to the knowledge in London of the Chinese situation. It is stated positively from Canton that Li Hung Chang will remain there until the allied troops have defeated Prince Tuan's forces, and will then go north to lend his powerful aid in arranging the terms of peace, co-operating with Prince Ching, Yung Lu and other pro-foreign viceroys. For the present Li Hung Chang considers that he can best control and direct the viceroys from Canton and also keep in check the turbulent province of Kwang Tung.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Express, telegraphing under date of July 9, asserts that the Chinese are daily driving in the allies. They have mounted, says the correspondent, 12 fresh guns in advantageous positions, with which they are sweeping the streets of the foreign settlement, the incessant fire rendering position after position quite untenable.

The Daily Mail's St. Petersburg correspondent says that in the last six hours' battle outside of Tien Tsin the Cossacks captured six Krupp guns, and killed a number of fleeing Boxers. The Chinese lost 300 killed, including Gen. Kek.

LITTLE ROOM FOR HOPE

That Legations Have Survived the Terrible Bombardment of July 17.

London, July 14.—A telegram at the office of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs in London from the Governor of Shantung is identical with United States Consul Goodnow's report of the bombardment of the legations July 7. The officials here regard the despatch as leaving little room to hope the legations have survived.

Murdered on July 6.

A News Agency report says that an official message received in London states that all the foreigners in Pekin were murdered July 6.

Goodnow's Cable.

Washington, July 14.—The Department of State has received a despatch from Consul-General Goodnow at Shanghai, saying that the Governor of Shantung wires that the Boxers and soldiers were bombarding the legations for a final attack upon the 7th of July. He is extremely anxious for the safety of the Ministers and friendly Chinese in Pekin. The Consul adds that fears of the worst are generally entertained.

Won't Give Up the Letter.

Shanghai, Thursday, July 12.—The foreign consuls are offering large sums for the production of the letter which a Chinese merchant is said to have received from Pekin, dated June 30, and saying the legations had been demolished and the foreigners killed. The merchant, however, declines to show it, alleging that he fears punishment from the Chinese officials.

Rioting is reported to have occurred at Ning Po, but no confirmation of the reports has been received.

Grand Forks, B.C., July 14. — A civic issue of $50,000 worth of debentures were yesterday sold at par to the Trusts & Guarantee Co. of Toronto. The proceeds will be utilized in completing the waterworks and electric light systems, improving the fire department, and constructing a new City Hall: Hon. J. R. Stratton and T. P. Coffee, president and general manager respectively, of the Guarantee Company, closed the deal yesterday with Mayor Manley before leaving for Vancouver.

William Cannon, an aged resident of Kingston, was struck by a T. H. & B. Railway train at the Albion bridge, about four miles east of Hamilton, at 9.40 Friday morning, and died from his injuries. Deceased was about 75 years of age. He was en route from Kingston to visit his daughter, Mrs. James Begg of St. Thomas.

A RETURNED SOLDIER

Ernie Craig Who Has Returned From South Africa Talks—Sergt. Beattie's Brave Deed.

The Windsor Record of July 10 contains the following very interesting interview with a returned soldier of the South African contingent:

"When ever Pte. Ernie Craig seeks rest by sitting down in a comfortable chair he is surrounded by a crowd of hero-worshippers who hang upon the words of the returned soldier from Africa.

"Is it hot enough for you?" was asked Craig.

"Hot? Well, it is a trifle. I don't mind it though, since my experience with the burning sands of Africa. Out there it is something awful. The sun's rays beat down with terrific force. Why, it is almost hot enough to light a cigarette.

"The thermometer rises to its highest point about 10 o'clock in the day. The atmosphere is very dry and the heat becomes intense at that hour. In the evening it turns extremely cool. That is the reason long marches are made at night. In the daytime, however, you just have to swelter, and I guess that is no 'hot-air' tale either.

"Who was Father O'Leary?" enquired an interested individual.

"Oh, he was the finest old chap I ever met. He was our chaplain, and the boys all loved him. Although nearly 60 years of age he did heroic work on the firing line at Paardeberg. He buried the fallen ones whether Protestant or Catholic. From the time he left Quebec with us he became a great favorite with the boys. The poor chaplain is sick now at Bloemfontein."

"What was the bravest deed you witnessed?".

"I think it was that of Sergt. Beatty, of Toronto. When Color-Sergt. Shrieve was wounded twice in his arm, Beatty was brave enough to carry his comrade across the firing line. Both crossed without receiving further wounds. It was one of those lucky escapes, but nevertheless, a brave deed. Sergt Beatty the hero, afterwards died of fever in Bloemfontein."

"Ever hear of anything funny?" asked a man with a penchant for the ludicrous.

"Well, for grim humor, I guess the experience of "Gummy" was the best instance. He was an old Kaffir and drove an ammunition cart in the Black Watch regiment. They called him 'Gummy' because his teeth were missing. He was a funny character. He slept with his mules and talked to them as if they were human. Every Sunday he carried a Bible and made a bluff at reading it. Then he would go and gamble away all he had. Perhaps that is where he learned to be game. In the battle of Magersfontein bullets and shells were flying in dangerous proximity. After a big shell whizzed by his head 'Gummy' remarked, 'Pass, friend, all is well.' Many a poor soldier in the battle was unable to answer likewise, for Highlanders were found dead with their clothes caught in the barbed wire trenches."

"How about the time you got lost?"

"That was the funniest thing that ever happened. One night in Belmont I was on outpost duty. In some way I wandered away some three miles and was lost for two hours. I was challenging ostriches which roamed on the kopjes (we pronounce it like copy). I finally managed, however, to get back without being shot."

New Steam Yacht

Says the Lindsay Post:—In the course of a couple weeks another handsome steam yacht will have been added to Lindsay's fleet of pleasure craft. Mr. Sam Irwin, Weights and Measures Inspector, will be the owner, and he is now busy supervising the construction of the craft in Mr. P. J. Ryley's shipyard. The hull is of white oak firmly fastened to the ribs with screws. The dimensions are: Length, 30 ft. 8 in.; beam, 6 ft. 6 in.; depth, 2 2-3 feet. When completed Mr. Irwin will make a test of a new rotary engine, recently invented by him, and which he confidently expects will prove a wonderful power."

Brevities

—The market this morning was not large.

—The last of the league rifle matches is being shot to-day.

—At the police court this morning Fred Baker and John Swanton were fined $2 each for vagrancy. A similar charge against Thomas Tully was dismissed.

—Joseph Nesbitt had a wages case of $1.98 against Noble Graham in police court this morning. The amount was paid and the case dismissed.

—Wm. Jordan, who was charged in County Magistrate Edmison's court yesterday with stealing old iron, was acquitted.

—An Assyrian and his wife, a Peterborough lady, have been airing their troubles in police court for a couple of mornings, and have decided to dissolve the union by simply separating.

—The 57th Regimental band again entertained an immense crowd at Victoria park last evening. The programme, which was mostly of a popular character, was much appreciated.

—Yesterday afternoon John Spence, of Walnut-st., an employee of the Dickson Co's sawmill in Ashburnham, had his fingers cut on a saw. Dr. Scott dressed the wounds, which, while painful, were not serious.

—Lindsay's fire alarm system was inspected by Messrs. Scott and Smith, of the Bell Telephone Co., yesterday and pronounced useless. The town is now wrestling with the question of a new system.

—A petition has been circulated in Marmora calling upon the Minister of Railways to enforce the Railway Act, which provides that the C.P.R. must stop twice daily each way. For several months past only one express east and one west has stopped each day at the C.P.R. junction. There has been some talk among Marmora people of boycotting the C.P.R. over the matter.

—The Cordova Exploration Company are preparing to develop their water power on Deer River Falls, lately secured from the Gilmour Company. This will supply power for the mine much more cheaply than by steam. The company will also increase the number of stamps in their mill. The Belmont gold mine is being thoroughly developed and will be one of the finest mines in Canada within the near future.

—A Westwood correspondent writes to the Norwood Register and says:—"The Salvation army band, of Peterborough, made a raid on Westwood on Monday night last. They arrived in town between eight and nine o'clock, and opened up with a concert, assisted by Westwood's celebrated talent. On account of it being so poorly advertised, there was very small crowd. I hope when the Westwood people have another concert they will get out posters and make it known. Dr. Oliver acted as chairman for the occasion."

PROHIBITION CONVENTION

An Urgent Call Sent Out to the Provincial Prohibitionists to Rally.

The annual convention of the Dominion Prohibition Alliance will be held in the Horticultural Pavillion, Toronto, on Tuesday, July 17th. Special rates will be given as usual. Each church and society is entitled to two representatives and each church and society having more than fifty members is entitled to a delegate for each additional fifty.

The Alliance Executive has issued a special call for this convention, in which it is said:—

"The Executive Committee of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance respectfully requests the friends of moral reform in this province to meet them in an earnest conference to plan for united and practical effort for the overthrow of the liquor evil which still continues its legalized work of merciless destruction throughout our land.

"In spite of all that has been done by religious and moral agencies, we have to deplore the heart-saddening yearly record of thousands of characters, homes and lives wrecked by this curse. We see perils gathering round our children. Its baneful influence checks our material progress, corrupts our politics, and everywhere spreads poverty, disease, degradation and crime.

"The people of Ontario as a whole are overwhelmingly opposed to the continuance of this cruel traffic. We have flooded Parliament and Legislative Assembly with petitions for relief. Two plebiscites have resulted in the polling of great majorities in favor of total prohibition. So far, however, our prayers and votes seem equally in vain.

"The Dominion Government and Parliament treat the great question of the terrible drink evil, the earnest requests of religious and temperance organizations and the votes of the people which they invited, with indifference that does not fall short of contempt.

"Our Provincial Government and Legislature have equally failed to respond to the expressed wish of the electorate. Their power to abolish at least the greater part of the now permitted liquor traffic is undisputed. It remains unexercised.

"Notwithstanding repeated appeals for the legislation that every consideration of humanity and justice demands, our law makers, both at Ottawa and at Toronto, ignore this great issue, in flagrant disregard of the fundamental principles of honest and popular government.

"This extraordinary situation makes it exceedingly desirable that the coming convention should be as largely attended as possible. We shall need all the wisdom, zeal, determination and strength that we can muster. We must carefully consider, definitely decide upon and then resolutely carry out, such a policy as will make absolutely impossible the continued forcing of ruinous liquor traffic upon an unwilling and protesting people.

"We have the example of a Prohibition Bill now before the Legislature of Manitoba and a Prohibition Act already passed by the Legislature of Prince Edward Island. It is practically certain that a general Dominion election will be held during the coming Alliance year. A Provincial election must follow before very long. Now is the time to plan and prepare for the coming campaigns. Both legislative and political action are pressing questions that demand our careful consideration."

Good Tea Kept Good.

At every grocer's, whether it be the pretentious structure of many stories, or the humble little corner shop, can be seen nowadays a package that has revolutionized the world's tea trade. It is a lead package with a blue, red or gold label with the words "Salada" Ceylon Tea plainly marked thereon. This sealed lead package contains the purest and most delicious tea in the world, from the virgin soil of the Island of Ceylon, where it is grown and manufactured on scientific principles, without coloring matter or adulteration in any form whatever. The lead package ensures cleanliness in handling, and retains the full strength and fine flavor of the tea. It excludes all air, dust, dirt and germs, indefinitely keeping the tea in just the condition it came from the gardens, fresh, juicy and succulent. The new tea, "Salada" Green Ceylon Tea, is rapidly growing in favor with Japan tea drinkers, because, though it is similar in taste to the finest Japan tea, it is infinitely more delicious and far more healthful in use.

Well Done, Turners.

Midland, July 13, 1900.

To Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, Peterborough:—

I, Silas A. Milligan, Mayor of the town of Midland, and Chairman of the 12th Celebration Committee, have much pleasure in thanking the Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, of Peterborough, and their employees for the careful and courteous manner in which they performed their contract, also for decorating the line of march, three days previous to the celebration. We consider such decorations, as before stated, to be a good advertisement, and the cause of bringing a number of strangers to town to see the flags, mottoes, etc., which were numerous and well placed.

We heartily approve of that style of decoration over the old and cumbersome arches both for appearance and cleanliness.

S. A. Milligan,
Mayor.

THE DOMINIE.

The Catholic Truth society in England has restored the tomb of Cardinal Pole.

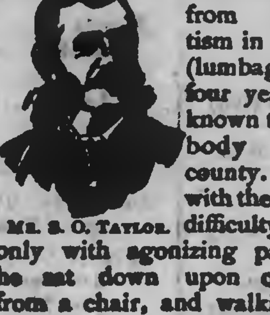
Rev. A. M. Harvout has been chosen president of the new theological seminary for women in Cincinnati.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker of London is the author of over 40 volumes of sermons, novels and essays, and now that he is past 70 years of age he is writing a book fitted especially for ministers.

Dr. Mandell Creighton, the bishop of London, rarely has time to prepare his speeches carefully, and many of them are thought out while in his carriage. He reads and answers on an average 60 letters a day. He is not a teetotaler, he smokes, he likes a good play and he spends his holidays in little Italian villages, where he throws work to the winds and prowls about the hills doing nothing.

RESTORED TO HEALTH.

One of the best known men in East Durham county is Steven O. Taylor, Charlecote, Ontario.



MR. S. O. TAYLOR.

His sufferings from rheumatism in the back (lumbago) for four years were known to everybody in the county. It was with the greatest difficulty, and only with agonizing pain that he sat down upon or arose from a chair, and walking was simply torture; neither the skill of physicians, nor the enormous quantities of patent medicines he took, gave him any relief until he tried Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. After taking the first few doses of this wonderful medicine he obtained relief, and, continuing the treatment, a complete cure was effected. He has not been troubled with an ache or pain since and speaks in praiseworthy terms of the medicine which restored him to health—Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure.

Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is put up in 50 cent bottles, containing ten days' treatment. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine. The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

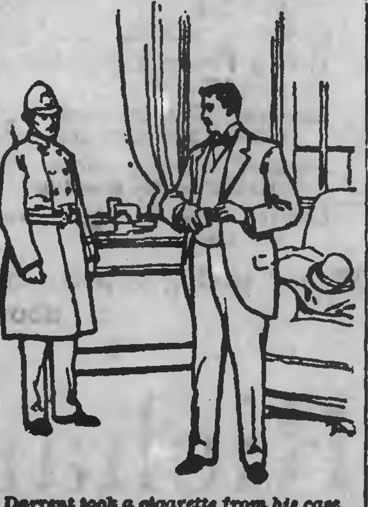
Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"I think they all fit too well."

"They fit well enough, but they prove nothing, absolutely nothing. To be a successful detective one must be ready not only to forge chains, but to set to work directly afterward and break them, if they can be broken, test every link and if there's a flaw find it. One must not persuade himself, because a few circumstances fit, that that, and that only, must be the truth. Why, I have made many as good a chain of circumstantial evidence before, and every link has been faulty, the whole thing worse than worthless."

"But, Darrent, the papers say that you are"—

"The American Lecoq, precisely, but I am very much afraid that their knowledge of M. Lecoq has only been derived from French sensational novels, according to which he never erred, was absolutely infallible. I think M. Lecoq himself would tell a very different story. We have followed one set of circumstances closely and—well, with the result that it brands Astray Marsden as the murderer. Very well; now we'll forget all about that and go on an entirely different track. What is the mystery connected with the set of Indian chessmen? Let us look at this question a little.



Darrent took a cigarette from his case.

"(1) Why have they been stolen, and by whom?

"(2) If Astray murdered old Marsden to obtain any secret connected with the chessmen, why did he leave them behind?

"(3) If Astray murdered old Marsden and only discovered afterward the hidden value of the chessmen, where is the motive of the murder?

"(4) If Astray did not commit the murder, who did?

"Once find the secret of the chessmen, and you'll find the murderer. Now, what have we got as our clew—the one piece here, a pawn, missing from the set (there cannot be many sets like this one, Thompson), and a chip from another piece? Still, we cannot go into everybody's house and examine curiosities and bric-a-brac to discover if they have the set we are in search of. Now, clew the second is more valuable, and that is the knife. You see it is of an ordinary Norwegian pattern, with a spring blade, but the letter 'A' is branded into the yellow wood of the handle. Find to whom it belongs—if 'A' means Astray, if young Marsden ever owned this knife—and we shall be nearer the hand that struck the blow. Now, then, Thompson, who do you think committed the murder?"

"Well, I don't know, sir. The way you put it, it might be any one."

"So it might," Darrent replied. "It might be any one, and perhaps we haven't got within a thousand miles of the right one yet. Still, I've done all I can till I get news from Chicago, and I'm going for a skate on the river. I'm not a sleuthhound longing for blood, but I've been longing to get on that stretch of ice ever since I've been in Norcombe."

CHAPTER IV.

GETTING CLOSER.

Herbert Darrent spoke the truth when he said that he did not belong to the sleuthhound type of detectives. He was too thoroughly American to take a morbid delight in mere man hunting, his profession notwithstanding, but he possessed sufficient sound common sense to make use of some especially acute and discerning faculties that nature had endowed him with and was generally admitted to be one of the very smartest young detectives that Chicago had ever been proud to possess.

If there seemed absolutely no clew, the cry was, "Send Darrent," and if Darrent gave it up it was hopeless. Although the last man in the world to neglect duty for pleasure, he took a keen delight in all sports and pastimes and could handle a baseball bat or cue and pull an oar with the best.

He had mentally decided that the very first step in this investigation must be to trace Astray Marsden, and as no further progress could be made until he got his reply from headquarters he decided to take an hour's spin upon the river, an hour on that perfect stretch of ice, and then he would be back in time to drive over and catch the express from Barnstaple to Chicago if required there.

It was simply glorious to glide along at racing speed over miles of smooth black ice, but rather annoying to Darrent, who counted himself a good skater, to find that he could never overtake a man who kept steadily on some 40 yards in front of him, sometimes letting him decrease the distance that separated them to only a few feet and then suddenly sweeping a quarter of a mile ahead. Darrent felt decidedly piqued as for the fourth time the stranger spurted double his pace and easily left him behind, but at last, apparently contented with the exhibition he had given of his prowess, the man curved round and came bearing down upon him.

"Bah Jove!" he ejaculated as he maneuvered to Darrent's side by a series of complicated twists and curves. "Bah Jove, stranger! You skate a bit, eh?"

Darrent acknowledged the brusque compliment by a shake of the head and replied:

"I tried my level best, but I could not get near you."

"Well, I fawncy I'm fast; spent a few years on the other side of the big pond."

"I beg your pardon?"

"In England."

"Oh!"

"And in Canada, the country that has such great skating; fawncy good ice for months, y'know."

"Oh, yes!"

Darrent gazed with some curiosity at his companion as side by side they sped along toward Norcombe.

"It's a great country, sir—England."

"Yes; so I have always understood from Englishmen."

"The finest on earth, bah Jove!"

"You seem much impressed by it."

"Why, certainly. I fawncy I am rather proud to be a citizen of one of the big cities of England. Slick bit of ice this, eh?"

"Very good."

The next remark from the stranger surprised and nettled Darrent.

"Fawncy you're a 'tec from Chicago, eh? On the scent; sort of bloodhound."

"I beg your pardon?"

"You needn't. I saw you pottering round The Grange this morning, examining footpaths and finger marks. I fawncy I am a bit clewah—just a bit. Spotted your man yet?"

"Eh?"

MODEL WIFE WAS SHE

MRS. GLADSTONE WHOSE PASSING WAS RECENTLY REPORTED.

Although a Woman of Rare Ability, She Devoted Her Entire Life to the Care of Her Still More Illustrious Husband —Her Family Was One of the Oldest in Great Britain.

When William E. Gladstone died two years ago all the world bowed its head and gave fitting token of its regard for the great English statesman. Again respect has caused the world to bow its head, this time not to one who was a great statesman, but to one who was a great wife; to her who for almost 60 years stood beside the "grand old man." For Mrs. Gladstone passed away the other day at Hawarden Castle, completing a life of nearly 90 years.

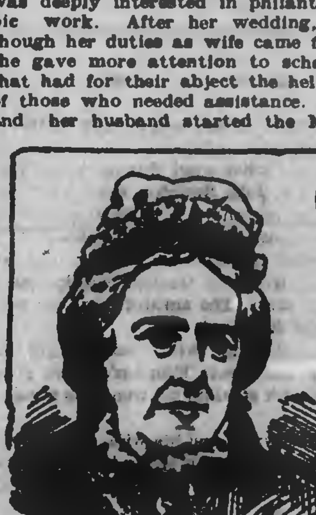
If recognition were given to wifehood as it is to statesmanship, then Mrs. Gladstone probably would rank as high among English wives as her husband ranks among English political leaders. One of the most popular photographs ever taken of the great premier shows him, bareheaded, addressing an open-air meeting, with gray-haired Mrs. Gladstone standing behind him holding an umbrella to shield him from the sun.

This picture is emblematic of her life. She was ever holding an umbrella over her famous husband; ever protecting him from annoyances and intrusion, and ever watchful for his comfort.

Mrs. Gladstone comes of a family beside which other families called old seem mere parvenus. Her ancestry can be traced directly for more than 1,000 years to the chief of a tribe in North Wales, who flourished in the early part of the ninth century. Her father, Sir Stephen Richard Glynne, died when she was about five, leaving to his widow the care of the estate and of his children, two girls and a son. Fortunately she was of noble character, and credit for the admirable qualities that Mrs. Gladstone has shown in her long years before the English public can be given very justly to the mother's training.

While Catherine Glynne and her younger sister—they were known as "the handsome Misses Glynne—never plunged into the whirl of London society, they had as much of its pleasures as they cared for. Both were intelligent and found interest in the social and political problems and movements of the day, even more than they did in the excitement of London seasons.

Even before her marriage to Mr. Gladstone, in 1839, Catherine Glynne was deeply interested in philanthropic work. After her wedding, although her duties as wife came first, she gave more attention to schemes that had for their object the helping of those who needed assistance. She and her husband started the Newport Market refuge, now carried on at Westminster with an industrial school attached. Its object is to furnish aid to persons in temporary distress.



MRS. W. E. GLADSTONE.

During the cholera epidemic in 1866 she secured care of hundreds of London waifs who had been left homeless by the death of their parents by their being removed to hospitals for treatment. She established the free Convalescent Home, where those who are recovering from illness and have no homes can have fresh air, wholesome food and comfortable lodging. Another charitable institution of her founding is the orphanage at Hawarden, at which boys are kept until they are old enough to be apprenticed to trades. Besides those who have been helped by these public charities with which she has been connected thousands have been assisted by her privately.

Mrs. Gladstone cared nothing for display. At Hawarden Castle, which was her home from her birth to the time of her death, her life, as was that of her husband, was always simple and quiet, though she never denied herself comforts.

Mrs. Gladstone's own room at Hawarden is thus described in an article that appeared years ago in the Illustrated London News, and the room may be taken as indicative to a degree of the character of the woman:

"Nothing could be simpler than Mrs. Gladstone's own living room, bright and sunny, yellow-walled, flower-scented, with an outlook from its wide windows upon the lawn. It was hung with old pictures, and in a case by the wall are many presents to Mrs. Gladstone from cities which she has visited."

Mrs. Gladstone was the mother of eight children—four boys and four girls. One of these sons entered the church and later became the rector of Hawarden. Two of the daughters showed the influence of the theological atmosphere in which they had been brought up by marrying clergymen.

Festivities Long Drawn Out.

Wedding festivities in Cairo, Egypt, usually continue for three days, during which time there is constant feasting and jollification. The guests are expected to remain while the festivities last.

In Size.

Willie Good—Pa, our teacher says that "collect" and "congregate" mean the same thing.

Rev. Good—Well, you tell your teacher that you have information that there is considerable difference between a congregation and a collection. —Baltimore American.

He Was Very Accommodating.

Apropos of the ready comprehension and native wit attributed to the sons of Erin, Patrick's compliance with the customer's wish stands out in bold opposition. Patrick was a clerk in a suburban grocery store. It was a busy season and the grocer was waiting upon two or three customers at the same time. He was in a hurry, and everything had to be where he could get it without much trouble or he would be delayed and probably lose money, so when he found that the pound weight was gone he was bothered.

"Patrick," he called out, "where's the pound weight?"

"The pound weight, is it?" said Patrick complacently. "Sure, an it's Misther Jones has the pound weight."

"Mr. Jones has it? What do you mean by saying that Mr. Jones has the pound weight? I thought the pound weight said in the store. How did Mr. Jones get it?"

"An shure, didn't yez tell me to be perlite to the rigular customers?"

"Of course."

"Well, thin, Misther Jones comes into the store for a pound of tay. An, says he, whin I asked him what quality of tay he would have, 'Whativer yez give me,' says he, 'give me the weight.' So I put the pound weight in the package with the tay, perlite like, an it's himself that's gone with it."—Chicago Post.

Admiralty Weak on Geography.

During the Boer war of 1880 the admiralty was hopelessly ignorant of the geography of South Africa.

The admiral in charge of the fleet at Cape Town received strict orders that he was not on any account to bombard the town of Potchefstroom. Now, as Potchefstroom is a good many hundred miles from the seacoast and lies on the Mooi river, which is barely 200 yards across and dry for three parts of the year, this order was superfluous.

During the same period the fleet was at Port Elizabeth, and the admiral headed dispatches to the admiralty from that seaport. By the next mail he again sent dispatches, but happened to head them Algoa bay.

The admiralty cabled out asking him what business he had to change the location of the fleet without instructions, sublimely ignorant of the fact that Port Elizabeth and Algoa bay are one and the same place.

By the way, the names Algoa bay and Delagoa bay are derived from the outward and homeward voyages of the old East Indiamen who, on their voyages to Goa, in India, were wont to call at Port Elizabeth on the outward voyage and at Lourenco Marques on the homeward voyage. Hence the names Algoa (to Goa) and Delagoa (from Goa).—Stray Stories.

Toronto, July 14.—The run of live stock at the stock yards yesterday was not large—44 carloads, composed of 539 cattle, 1,197 hogs, 871 sheep and lambs and 25 calves. The quality of fat cattle was good for the season. Butchers' cattle were scarce, especially those of good quality. Trade was fairly good all round, with butchers' cattle firm at Thursday's prices. Exporters, however, were inclined to be easier, owing to the fact that there were few buyers, and little space to be had on ocean boats.

Trouble in The Stomach

Which Doctors Failed to Remove, Cured by Less Than Two Boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The experience of Mr. Blackwell is similar to that of many sufferers with chronic indigestion. Stomach medicines will seldom really cure indigestion. The kidneys and liver must be set right, and the bowels made regular and active.

Mr. Joseph Blackwell, Holmesville, Ont., says:—"I derived more benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills than from any other medicine I ever took, and can highly recommend them for stomach troubles. I was in a terrible state and could hardly work at my trade. I tried most every kind of medicine and doctors, until I was tired doctoring, and before I used one box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I could see that they were helping me, and after taking a box and a half, found that I was cured."

STOMACH TROUBLES

MAKES THE LIVES OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE MISERABLE.

Mrs. John Holland, of Tarantum, P.E.I., Gives Her Experience for the Benefit of Similar Sufferers—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured Her After Other Medicines Failed.

From the Watchman, Charlottetown.

Mrs. John Holland, of Tarantum, P.E.I., is well known and highly respected in the community where she resides. For some years her life was one of misery and suffering, having been an acute sufferer from that common foe of humanity, dyspepsia. A reporter hearing of her restoration to health through the agency of that wonderful remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, called upon Mrs. Holland to obtain particulars, which were cheerfully given as follows:—"About four years ago I became very ill, I was attacked with a distressing pain in my stomach, accompanied by flashes of heat and cold. These attacks were generally preceded by a sleepiness and stupor which required constant exertion to keep awake. I had little or no appetite and food lay as a stone on my stomach. As time passed, I was growing worse, vomiting of food set in, with sudden changes of heat and cold in my feet. I was so reduced in strength as not to be able to walk any distance without resting. To work I dare not attempt. I began to feel that I could not live very long in my present condition. I was reduced in weight to 115 pounds. Two years ago I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before this I had tried various advertised medicines, but without any benefit resulting. I was using the second box of the pills before I felt any benefit, but from that my recovery was rapid. I used in all five boxes of the pills, and have never felt better in my life than I do at the present moment. All the disagreeable sensations that accompany dyspepsia have vanished; I can enjoy my meals with relish, and my weight has increased from 115 to 129 pounds. It is now more than a year since I discontinued the use of the pills, and as I have not had the slightest touch of the trouble in that time, I feel safe in saying that my cure is permanent. I would strongly advise others suffering from stomach troubles to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

P., of Kingston, who was a shining mark amon ston, who was a shining mark among the majority members of the Rations Committee.

Members of the Canadian contingents took 1,000 boxes of Dr. Chase's Liniment with them to South Africa to relieve the sufferings of campaigning life.

THE INVALIDED HEROES.

Preparations Made at Quebec to Give Them a Right Warm Canadian Reception.

Quebec, July 14.—A casemate has been prepared at the Citadel for the reception of the 28 invalided heroes from South Africa who are to arrive here this morning on the SS. Parisian. If any of the men are too ill to go into these quarters they will be sent to the Military Hospital, where they will receive every care and attention.

At a quarter-past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon a public meeting of the citizens was held at the City Hall. It was a very representative one. A committee was appointed to organize a reception.

Tanguay and other dignitaries, as well as the Reception Committee, the steamer will convey them to the Queen's Wharf, where the disembarkation will be made at precisely 8.30 a.m.

The R. C. A. and R. C. R. I., together with the State band, will await their arrival, and together with the local militia, will escort the invalided sons of Canada to the Citadel. An address of welcome will be read by the pro-Mayor. Vehicles will be in attendance to convey to the Citadel the men who are unable to march in the procession. The officers and men of the warships in port are to be invited to participate in the demonstration. The men of the R.C.A. who reached the town from Dawson City yesterday morning will parade in their Yukon uniform.

THAT COMMISSION REPORT

A Farce That Adds Fraud to Fraud and Excuses Rascality.

The report of the Ross commission on the West Elgin ballot frauds would be amazing were it not that the joke is a joke upon justice at the expense of the rights and franchises of the people of this province. We do not blame the commissioners for the farce which adds fraud to fraud and excuses rascality. These judges were restricted to their instructions, and their instructions were specially drawn for the defence of the Ontario Government's band of paid criminals. The commissioners were not appointed to discover the truth. They were limited to an investigation along a line which avoided all that Mr. Macnish knows and all that he has confessed to. The roguery in his commission fraud does not lie with the judges, but with the Ministers who devised the scheme whereby an appearance of virtue might be assumed and thieves might escape detection all the same. Owing to the manner in which the commission has been handicapped, the affair has developed into an instrument for exculpating the machine. Inquiry into the intrigues and rascality, the corruption and the ballot-box stuffing has not made. The trial of the men whom Mr. Macnish knows to be guilty it has not attempted. All it has done has been to summon suspects before it, to ask them if they were guilty or not guilty, to receive their not unexpected protestations of innocence, and to report that all is right. Apart from one or two little irregularities, that amount to nothing, there is not one case of wrong-doing established. Nobody did anything, and the election was a marvel of propriety. The "machine" was virtuous throughout. Men who in North Waterloo were declared by the judges on evidence most circumstantial to have planned and carried out schemes of corruption and fraud are found by the Ross commission to have been quite superior to that sort of thing in West Elgin. Thieving there was under these very individuals in Waterloo, but in Elgin, owing either to the climate or to the presence of Preston, there was nothing of the kind, although Mr. Macnish has stated definitely that there was, and that he was informed of it. Duncan Bole is innocent. It will be a great relief and a great surprise to him when he reads about it in the commissioners' report. Eighty electors who had been robbed of their votes at Bole's polling division petitioned the Government for redress. They will join in Bole's astonishment when they discover that the stealing of their ballots does not count. Cahill, one of the "strangers," is likewise innocent. What a mistake he made in fleeing the country! Pritchett is innocent also. He swears that he was taken to the constituency to commit some of the offences which Mr. Macnish confesses were perpetrated in his behalf; he declares that he sinned, as Mr. Macnish by inference admits. But the judges will not even accept a confession, and Pritchett is actually declared to be innocent against his will, and in the face of his plea of guilty! The commission gulped down all the claims to innocence made by Preston, Smith and Co., but when a man got up and said that he had done some of the ballot-switching, their Honors at once became sceptical, and pronounced the witness a liar. It is impossible to read the report in the light of Mr. Macnish's confession, and at the same time to regard commissions as efficient bodies for the discovery of crimes. Mr. Macnish declares that the following frauds were committed:—

1. A large number of persons were specially sent into the constituency by men working on behalf of the Liberal party, and fraudulent and corrupt means were used by some of such persons to secure Mr. Macnish's election.
2. Several of such persons illegally acted as deputy returning officers.
3. In many of the polling sub-divisions there were grave irregularities connected with the return of the ballot boxes and their contents, the voting, and the counting of ballots.
4. A large number of persons were brought in to personate legitimate voters, and did personate such voters.
5. The votes counted for Mr. Macnish largely exceeded the bona-fide votes cast.
6. The votes were manipulated in a corrupt and nefarious manner.
7. There were specific and well authenticated cases where agents of Mr. Macnish concealed at their homes strangers sent into the constituency to corrupt electors.

And the Ross commission found out none of these things, except count No. 2, which does not matter. The judges who composed the commission meant well. But the Ross Government was bent, first, upon screening its hired scoundrels, and secondly, upon deceiving the people. It has succeeded in the one purpose, but it cannot succeed in the other.

WRITING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Proposed Writing Reform Discussed in an Interesting Manner.

Some few years ago the writing system in the Public schools of Peterborough was changed from the Spencerian slant to the vertical. Since that time the vertical system has been used exclusively in the writing classes, and though there has been no education department order on the subject the authorized writing books are with sample lines in the vertical system. The Hamilton Spectator in an article on the subject discusses the question in this way:—"Eight years is a long enough time in which to prove a writing system, but, oddly enough, there is no more unanimity of opinion as to the real value of the vertical system now than there was when it was first introduced—at least, among the school authorities. For some years on the American side of the line the vertical system has been in use in many Public schools, and it is an incident worthy of note that in New York city, which is possibly the largest single school district in the United States, the managers of the education department have decided that vertical writing will not do.

"When the slanting Spencerian writing system was the authorized system of the Public schools it was argued against it that it had a tendency to cause the children to lean over and crook their backs while writing, thus doing permanent injury to their bodies. The eye, also, was said to be injuriously affected, owing to the lines of the slant copy being out of line with the line of sight. It was urged, also, that the tendency of the Spencerian slant was to cause children to write illegibly, especially when hurried in their work. Another objection to the slant system in those days was that it developed a tendency to "flourishes," which, while very nice in their way, were not just the thing for a Public school writing course.

"For these and other reasons the change from slant to vertical was made, and now, as has been stated above, after several years of trial, there is still difference of opinion as to its desirability or advantage over others as a writing system. Among the many advantages claimed for the vertical system the one most pointed is that it promotes legibility. Where with the slant system the child would fail to make proper distinction between n, m, u, etc., with the vertical system, such failure is much less marked. Another point of advantage claimed is that the vertical is more natural than any other, it having been found that in a majority of cases the first writing effort of childhood is of the vertical sort. Another advantage claimed is that the most rapid writers use the vertical system in their work.

"As against these advantages claimed for vertical writing there is an array of contrary arguments. It is claimed, and with considerable show of reason, that up and down writing, as taught in the Public schools, entirely does away with individuality in the penmanship of the pupils. The principal objectors to this dead uniformity in writing are business men who employ clerks, book-keepers, etc. They do not like the sameness nor do they care for the large space covering vertical system at all in book-keeping. Business colleges do not encourage it among their pupils, and it is argued that as the Public schools are turning out graduates for the business world, they should not encourage it either.

"Another objection to the system is that it develops a tendency among the children to back hand writing, and back hand writing is particularly odious to business people, no matter how legible it may be. Despite the claim made for the vertical system that it is a "fast" system, its opponents affirm that it spoils speed, and argue that it is only where the writer departs from the copy book vertical and uses a slight slant that speed can be acquired.

"Well grounded objections are thus to be found in both the Spencerian slant and the present Public school vertical systems, and the School Boards of New York city believe they have at last found, in a happy medium, the proper thing. Discarding the Spencerian slant for the vertical some years ago, they have now discarded the vertical for a system which is neither one nor the other of the discarded ones, but a modification of both. It is a slant, but not a Spencerian slant. The Spencerian slant was about 38 degrees from vertical, and 52 degrees from horizontal. Its letters were all narrow and high, three spaces in the copy books being allowed for the highest letters and the same below the line for the sub-line letters. In the vertical system the particular characteristic besides absence of slant was the broad and moderately high letters. The new style for New York schools will retain the broad letters and moderate height of the vertical system, but will be started from 20 to 25 degrees from the vertical.

"This new system, it is claimed, will enable the pupils to develope a running hand, which is admittedly more rapid than any other, without necessarily sacrificing legibility. Inasmuch as freedom is the greatest result for which the new system will aim, the exact slant will not be insisted on—only the broad and moderately high letters—and, in this way it is believed not only speed will be secured and legibility retained, but also an individually of penmanship developed such as would be impossible with the present vertical system.

"The Spectator interviewed Public School Inspector Ballard, of Hamilton, on the subject of writing in the schools, and while the inspector was not particularly enthusiastic over the present vertical system, he could see points of excellence in it that could not be located in the Spencerian slant system of other days. Mr. Ballard was strong on the legibility of the vertical system, and, coming to the newspaper man as he did from a batch of examination papers, he had the best of evidence on his side.

"The vertical system," said he, "makes it a much easier task to examine these papers than it was when the slant system was in use." At the same time Mr. Ballard admitted that public school pupils after leaving school did not generally continue the vertical system taught in the schools in their writing habit, either developing a back hand or a slant of some description. Not all the teachers, Mr. Ballard said, were in favor of the vertical system, some of them still maintaining that the old slant or a modified slant was better and more generally useful. The inspector knew of no agitation for a change from the vertical and assured the newspaper man that the present system had been adopted, not as a fad, but in the honest belief that it was an improvement, and more in accord with natural tendency than the old slant system.

"There are many people who believe that in the public schools of Ontario the teaching of writing is conducted on a wrong principle. They argue that in the teaching of writing the first, last and only rule of the school should be to train the children to make the written letters of the alphabet uniform and in the system most nearly approaching that most common among rapid and legible writers. When the school has done this with the child the argument is that it should leave it free to develope a handwriting individual to itself, the only care taken by the teacher being to see that the uniformity and legibility are being preserved throughout. And this freedom to the pupil to develope as it may, naturally should be, it is argued, extended to the holding of pen or pencil and all the other incidental etcetras which are now too often governed by hard and fast rules, broken in a majority of cases as soon as the child leaves the school.

"The whole subject is an interesting one, and worthy the study and attention of not only teacher, but parents and the children themselves."

CINNAMON COATED

Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills are coated like a Cinnamon drop, very small and delightful to take.

—The Manita, the Trent Valley Navigation Co.'s new steamer, arrived in Lindsay shortly after dinner yesterday, says the Post, and left at 3.30 on her first trip to Coboconk. The new craft is as pretty as a picture and is admirably adapted for the traffic between this town and Coboconk. She is built very much after the plan of the Empress, owned by Capt. Reynolds, of Lakefield, and has a roomy promenade deck for passengers. We understand that her speed will be about 14 miles per hour, but of course a full head of steam will not be turned on for a few days yet.

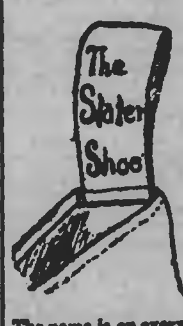
SUBSTITUTION

One of the greatest proofs of the value of a standard article is its number of imitators. Imitation is in some cases the sincerest of compliments.

A popular shoe for instance—no sooner does it become popular that imitators spring up from all directions.

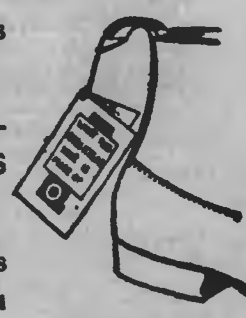


The name is on every Strap

Their name is Legion, which so far as shoes are concerned means, NO NAME AT ALL.

This is where substitution comes in. The unwary man is sometimes caught by the "JUST AS GOOD" article.

In a "Slater Shoe" for example, its just as well to satisfy yourself that it is the GENUINE you are paying for.



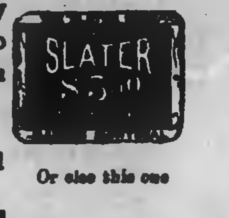
A coupon is attached to every pair

The best shoe factories in the world turn out some imperfect shoes you know, but reliable manufacturers job these off, they do not want to father them and would not GUARANTEE them for a MINUTE.

Take care therefore, that you do not get a Shoe that MIGHT have been a "Slater Shoe" had it come through perfect. or had it not lost caste by depreciating in value on account of style or some other cause and consequently had its name CANCELLED—been disinherited as it were.

This stamp is on the sole

It is not difficult to identify a genuine "Slater Shoe"—every pair has the name and price on the sole in a SLATE FRAME, also on the strap and their is a coupon attached telling of the leather in its composition and how to care for it.



Or else this one

Made on the latest toes and styles, in reliable leathers and fashionable colors.

IMPROVED CENSUS METHODS

Suggested Changes in Returns Used Ten Years Ago—Actural Population.

Mutual preference among the colonies of Great Britain was resolved to be the best means of increasing Canadian trade with South Africa by the Executive Committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at a recent meeting in Toronto and they considered the present a most opportune time for the adoption of such a policy. The committee also passed resolutions urging the holding of a Dominion exhibition in Toronto in 1901, notwithstanding that no grant has been made by the Dominion Government, and commending the improved, up-to-date and business-like postal delivery recently inaugurated in Toronto and Montreal. The committee, with the assistance of Dr. Wickett, have studied the census returns of England, Germany and the United States, and recommend to the Minister of Agriculture many improvements on the system used in 1891. They suggest (1) that the actual population only shall be counted, not the de jure; (2) that an industrial establishment must employ at least five persons and not be defined, as before, "anyone producing goods for sale," and that the factories be graded in classes, according to the number employed; (3) that in the returns of "goods produced" the value of the raw material used should be shown; (4) that special reports be made upon our larger industries, as iron, pulp, leather and wood; (5) that expert enumerators be employed to get returns of manufactures, as in the United States; (6) that the occupation of each person be given with the name, and that particular profession be shown; (7) that wages paid employees be distinguished from salaries to members of the firms and company officials, and the hours of labor per day be shown; (8) that "capital" should mean capital on a particular day, and that shares be taken at their market price; (9) that farms be classified according to acreage, 1—50, 50—100, etc.; (10) that a careful report be included on transportation, and, finally, that there should be a careful estimate of the wealth of the country, Federal, Provincial, municipal and private, showing the debts of each and the taxation. It is expected that many of these improvements will commend themselves to the Minister, though the argument against material changes is that it will be impossible to compare and relate the present with our "dead selves" if the old method is not followed.

DEFEAT OF THE ALLIED FORCES ON THE 13TH

Three Thousand Causalties Reported--A Despatch From American Consul Would Seem to Contradict Story of Pekin Massacre.

THREE THOUSAND CASUALTIES

Tien Tsin, July 13, via Che Foo, July 15, to Shanghai, July 16.—At two o'clock this afternoon seven thousand of the allied troops were attempting to storm the walls of the city. The attack began at daylight. Its success is doubtful. The Chinese on the walls are estimated conservatively at 20,000. They are pouring a terrible hail of artillery, rifle and machine gun fire upon the attackers. American, Japanese, British and French troops are attacking from the west and Russian from the east. The Americans suffered terribly. The chief surgeon of the 9th infantry said it was a conservative estimate that 25 per cent. of the Americans had been hit. Col. Emmerson is reported to have been mortally wounded while walking in front of his troops. Officers declared that it was a hotter fight than Santiago. When the correspondent left, the Americans were lying in the plain between the wall and river and under a very heavy and direct fire. It was equally difficult for them to advance or to return. The correspondent counted 3.000 wounded men of all nationalities.

DEFEAT OF ALLIED FORCES

Washington, July 16.—The Navy Department this morning received official confirmation from Admiral Remey of the reported reverse of the allied forces at Tien Tsin on the morning of the 13th. The despatch is dated Che Foo, July 16, and says: Reported that allied forces attacked native city on the morning of the 13th. The Russians on the right, with the 9th infantry and marines on the left. Losses of the allied forces are large. Russians, 100, including artillery Colonel, Americans over 30, British over 40, Japanese 59 including colonel, French 25. Col. Liscun, 9th infantry, was killed; also Capt. Davis, Marine corps, Capt. Leinly, Lieuts. Butler and Leonard were wounded. At 7 in the evening the allied attack on the native city was repulsed with great loss. Details not yet confirmed.

THE PEKIN MASSACRE

Shanghai, July 5—(morning, delayed)—The following particulars of the massacre in Pekin have been gleaned indirectly from all Pekin refugees. Of all the legations the Americans had the greatest proportion of women, especially after the arrival of the American missionaries who had taken refuge there. Hence it is known that the women's legation was among the first destroyed. Then the women were domiciled at the British legation. American sailors, supposed to be marines from the Oregon, missionaries and civilians generally composed the inner guard; Germans, Russians and Japanese doing the outpost work, at which the Germans were especially good. The native servants gradually disappeared, escaping into the city after the final sortie by the legation troops. The attack by the Chinese was renewed with redoubled vigour, the fighting was hand to hand. The foreigners barricaded the windows, but the Boxers were able to reach a low roof where another encounter took place. The marines dropped to the ground and stood with their backs to the wall, standing off the Chinese. In the midst of the melee Prince Tuan's artillery opened fire, sweeping Boxers and Christians alike. The fire ceased then and a final charge completed the annihilation of the foreigners. This information does not include the story of the European men killing the women and children, and it is stated the Boxers had no white captives which so enraged them that they attacked the fourth Princess House opposite the Legation where native Christians had taken refuge. These were dragged fourth and subjected to every brutality. This and other buildings were burned. The streets at night swarmed with Boxers smeared with blood and stained with powder. They carried torches and ghastly trophies of the day's work.

A CONTRADICTION OF THE STORY

Washington, D.C., July 17—Consul General Goodnow cabled to the State Department from Shanghai under to-day's date that there was nothing more to report since his cablegram of the 12th instant. That dispatch reported the attack on the Legations at Pekin as about to begin. Mr. Goodnow's statement is a direct contradiction of the Shanghai story that all foreign Consuls were informed on Saturday by Sheng that the Legations had fallen and the Ministers had been killed.

ONE OF TUAN'S REPORTED FREAKS

Washington, D.C., July 16.—An unofficial report has come to the attention of the Chinese officials to the effect that 3,000 Chinese officials at Pekin petitioned Prince Tuan who ordered all those who united in the petition to be killed.

WELCOME CANADIAN HEROES

Quebec Gave Them a Right Royal and Loyal Welcome—A Complimentary Address Was Presented, and the People Cheered at It Close—The Ottawa Men Received in Their Own Town By the People and Former Comrades.

Quebec, July 16.—The returning Canadian soldier boys received a royal welcome on Saturday at the hands of the Ancient Capital. The boys are 28 in number, and, with one exception, belong the first contingent. The exception is a member from the Mounted Rifles. Shortly after his arrival at the front he was taken sick with a severe attack of enteric fever, and was, later, sent to Netley Hospital, England, for treatment. He has, apparently, fully recovered, although his eyesight is not as good as formerly.

Old Quebec's Welcome.

At 8.30 a.m., the steamer Queen, suitably decorated, landed the men at the Queen's wharf. Thousands of people were there, and at every point of vantage to receive them.

They were presented with a complimentary address of welcome by Acting Mayor Ald. Tanguay.

After the reading of the address there was a military salute by the militia and the detachments of marines from H.M.S. Indefatigable and H.M.S. Psyche, who were on the wharf as the guard of honor, and enthusiastic cheers by thousands of spectators. The soldiers were asked to enter carriages specially provided for them, but they refused, preferring to walk all the way to their headquarters at the Citadel.

The order of march was as follows:

A guard of 20 civic police, the acting Mayor and other members of the Reception Committee in carriages.

The State band.

Bodyguard of bluejackets from H. M. S. Psyche and Indefatigable.

The returning soldiers.

The R.C.A. and R.C.R.I. and other military bodies.

Citizens in carriages and on foot.

The route of procession was from Queen's wharf by Champlain street, St. Peter, Mountain Hill, Du Fort Louis to the Citadel. The streets were crowded and decorated everywhere.

Leave For Other Points.

Quebec, July 16.—Six returned soldiers from South Africa left by the Saturday afternoon C.P.R. train, five being for Ottawa and one for Montreal. The same night the C.P.R. took out seven more, one each for Woodland, Hamilton, Windsor, Smithville and St. Mary's, and two for Toronto.

AN OVATION AT OTTAWA.

Six Thousand People at the Station—No Police Control Interfered.

Ottawa, July 16.—Ottawa's quota of returned invalid soldiers of the first contingent reached the city on Saturday night at 9.45. Over 6,000 persons were down at the station to give them a welcome. Everything

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator:

Name of Company.	Commenced Business.	Canadian Business Written in 1899
North American	1881	$4,834,505
Sun Life	1871	3,996,865
Ontario Mutual	1870	3,965,509
Confederation	1871	3,839,469
Canada Life	1847	3,800,917

The above are the five leading Canadian Companies and although the North American is much the youngest in years, she is outstripping all her rivals in the Canadian field.

For 20 Years—A Constant Sufferer from Bleeding and Protruding Piles—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

In vain did Mrs. Jas. Brown, of Hintonburgh, near Ottawa, search for a cure for piles. In Europe and America she tried every remedy available, but it remained for Dr. Chase's Ointment to effect a cure.

Mrs. Brown writes:—"I have been a constant sufferer from nearly every form of piles for the last twenty years, and during that time both here and in the Old Country have tried most every remedy.

"I am only doing justice to Dr. Chase's Ointment when I say that I believe it to be the best remedy obtainable for bleeding and protruding piles. I strongly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to mothers, or indeed to any person suffering from that dread torment—piles."

Physicians and druggists recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the one preparation that will never fail to cure piles. It is guaranteed to positively cure piles, whether itching, bleeding, or protruding. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

HON. MR. BLAIR'S OIL CONTRACT.

Our evening contemporary is one of many Liberal organs that have been lauding Mr. Blair's management of the Intercolonial railway, and the Examiner made special reference to the saving he had made in the item of oil used on the road. As noted before considerable light has recently been thrown on the oil question in connection with Mr. Blair's management of the Intercolonial. The Montreal Star has placed the record in concise and proper order, so that the reader is allowed to see clearly what Blair's management in the matter of oils really is, and we give it to Review readers:—

One of the first "reforms" inaugurated by Mr. Blair, says the Star, when he became Minister of Railways, was to cancel the contracts made by the previous Government for the supply of oils to the Intercolonial Railway and grant new contracts. Senator Ferguson has thrown a flood of light upon the nature of these "reforms." Tenders and samples were received in May, 1896, from eight firms of various kinds of oil, and the samples were analyzed by Prof. Ruttan.

For cylinder oil the late Government gave the contract to the Imperial Oil Company, at thirty cents a gallon. Mr. Blair "reformed" this arrangement by giving the contract to the Galena Oil Company (nominally of Toronto Junction, Canada, but really of Pennsylvania) at sixty-three cents a gallon. Professor Ruttan's report speaks of the large number of excellent oils submitted, but describes the Galena as "distinctly inferior," as "sure to undergo partial decomposition at high temperature, setting free fat acids which in course of time will affect the cylinders in which they are used."

For engine oils for summer use the late Government gave the contract to the Imperial Oil Company at twenty cents a gallon. Mr. Blair's reform in this instance was to transfer the contract to the Galena Oil Company at thirty-nine cents a gallon. Professor Ruttan's analysis includes the Imperial Oil Company's oil among the three best submitted, and condemns the Galena sample for a number of reasons.

For engine oils for winter use the late Government awarded the contract to the Eastern Oil Company at twenty-one and a quarter cents a gallon. The analyst's report was infinitely more favorable to the Eastern Oil Company's oil than to the Galena Company's oil.

For car oils for summer and winter use respectively, the Imperial Oil Company's price was eight and a half cents and nine and a half cents a gallon, and in this case the analyst's report favored the Galena oils as unquestionably superior. Mr. Blair had no objection to the better oil this time and gave the Galena Company the contract at twenty-seven cents a gallon.

For coach oil for winter use the Galena Company submitted no sample and the late Government gave the contract to the Eastern Oil Company at twenty-one and a quarter cents a gallon, the analyst reporting that the sample was the best and "an excellent product indeed." Mr. Blair's "reform" gave the contract to the Galena Company at forty-five cents a gallon.

For coach oil for summer use the analyst condemned the sample of the Galena Oil Company as objectionable. The late Government took the Imperial Oil Company's oil at nineteen cents a gallon. Mr. Blair made a "reform" bargain by taking instead the Galena Oil Company's objectionable oil at forty-five cents a gallon.

For lubricating oil the Galena Oil Company entered into a novel arrangement with the Government; they undertook to lubricate the road for ten per cent. less per thousand miles run than it cost the Government during the previous twelve months. Senator Ferguson finds that the result of this "reform" has been an average increase during the three years of ten per cent. on the engine oils and 27 per cent. on the car oils instead of the guaranteed decrease of ten per cent. In 1896 the Department paid for lubricating oils $33,777.96, in 1897 $43,174.60, and in 1898 $40,266.12. Mr. Blair allowed two years and eight months to pass before obtaining any reduction from the Galena Oil Company on account of its guarantee, although the settlement was supposed to be made monthly. Then, as the result of protests made in Parliament and in the press, $21,667.13 was deducted from one year's account. Senator Ferguson states that a further deduction of twenty-two per cent. is necessary to bring the Galena Company's charges within the terms of their guarantee.

For signal or hand lamp oil the late Government gave the contract to the Imperial Oil Company at thirty-seven and a half cents a gallon. Mr. Blair preferred to cancel this contract and accept from the Galena Oil Company an oil declared to be inferior and objectionable, at forty-six and two-tenths cents per gallon.

The above interesting record seems to show why the Hon. Andrew Blair was able to approve of Hon. Dr. Borden's contract for broken biscuit at $3 a pound. A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind.

Tarte has made another speech in France, misrepresenting Canada. This kind of thing will only be stopped and Canada represented by men who will not disgrace our national sentiment and our loyalty when there is a change of rulers at Ottawa. Tarte is Master of the present rulers, and they dare not stop him and his speeches.

The Liberals are now calling the Senate "the haven of rest for the rejected of the people." Isn't this rather hard on the Liberals, who have been presenting themselves in dozens and scores whenever a vacancy occurred, anxious and eager to be placed among "the rejected." Liberal attacks on the Senate in the past have strengthened that body, because they were made when the Senate stepped in and saved the country from gigantic steals and deals that had been pushed through the Commons by the Liberal Ministers and their obedient majority. This present case of the Quebec judges cannot be passed upon yet because the entire details are not yet apparent. But in the Yukon deal and the Drummond County railway steal the Senators were undoubtedly right, and they may be in this case, too.

was nicely arranged.

Hon. Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, Lieut.-Col. Cotton, D.O.C., Col. Foster, Col. Sherwood and other local officers, all in uniform, had formed a pretty hollow square, and awaited the coming of the train. The available space about the station was packed with singing humanity. About a hundred of the 43rd soldiers and their new khaki uniforms were lined up in two ranks along the track. The train came in. The returning men stood on the car platform. The civilians made a rush to receive them. The 43rd men broke ranks and joined in the reception.

Lieut.-Col. Cotton shouted, "Resume your ranks," but nobody heeded him.

Official Reception Forgotten.

The official reception was forgot. Their speeches filled with loyalty were left in their breasts, and the singing throng took possession of the five sunburnt, healthful-looking men from South Africa. They were hustled into hacks. In the meantime so imperfect was the police protection that the crowd had become a mob, and what with the pushing of the thousands, the screams of crushed women and the swearing of angry men, a fair sized pandemonium reigned.

It was a wonder that nobody was hurt, for several women tripped and fell where the jam was the greatest.

At the Russell.

When quiet had been restored an order was given to form a procession but the 43rd men could not be found. They had started for the Russell House on their own hook. Making the best of a bad job, Hon. Dr. Borden, the officers, Mayor Payment and Alderman drove the five soldiers to the Russell House, where they were welcomed in an informal way. While the felicitious words of cheering welcome were being said, a huge crowd gathered in and about the hotel rotunda. The streets of the city were lined with people and wherever a khaki uniform was seen it was cheered. Shortly after 10 the participants in the reception broke away from the hotel, and the five soldiers were given over to their chums to be escorted to their homes.

The last one seen was Pte. Coleman at the head of a little procession of his own, walking along Spark street singing "In Sunny Tennessee."

Captain Pelletier is Home.

A Miner's Fearful Fall.

Rat Portage, July 16.—John McGuire, a miner at the Mikado mine, met with a terrible accident Saturday afternoon. He was working on the 180-foot level, when he stepped into the shaft and fell 60 feet. When he was brought to the surface, it was found that one leg was broken in two places, both arms fractured, and five ribs broken. Besides, he sustained injuries to his back and other parts of his body.

Collector Battle Dead.

Ottawa, July 16.—T. Battle, collector of tolls on the Rideau Canal, was found dead in his office on the canal bank in this city early yesterday morning. Heart disease was the cause of death. Deceased was over 50 years of age.

John McNeil died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Hamilton, Saturday afternoon, the result of injuries he received in a drunken brawl in the North End about three weeks ago. An inquest will be held.

ENGAGED ALL DAY SATURDAY

Members of Strathcona's Horse Driven in Temporarily.

Heavy Musketry Fire Directed Against Their Right—Mounted Infantry in Face of a Severe Fire Attacked the Boers—Boers Forced From Their Positions—Gen. Dewet Threatened to Shoot Steyn—Capt. Driscoll's Nerve.

London, July 16.—A report from Platkop says that the British engaged the Boers all day long Friday.

Scouts and mounted infantry arriving north located the Boers 1,000 strong, occupying the ridge, from which they were driven. Col. Thornycliff's men held the ridge facing them.

Members of Strathcona's Horse were driven in temporarily on the right by the heavy musketry fire. After a stubborn resistance the Boers forced the British to bring the howitzers into action.

The infantry deployed for a general advance under Cleary's direction.

The Boers opened fire in all directions, shelling with the guns posted on the British right.

The Mounted Infantry, in the face of a severe fire, attacked the Boers.

A gun posted on an entrenched kopje four miles to the east, forced the Boers from a number of ridges, detached parties retiring in the centre, while a gun on the right was withdrawn through a ravine towards an entrenched hill.

Threatened to Shoot Steyn.

Senekal, Orange River Colony, July 14.—Gen. Rundle's rapid advance has, it is said, forced the Boers into an obviously bad corner.

President Steyn is reported to have given up all hope since the loss of Bethlehem, and would have surrendered, but Gen. Dewet threatened to shoot him and it is believed he was imprisoned in his own laager.

Capt. Driscoll Had Nerve.

Capt. Driscoll of D Scouts, who went alone to Zuringkrantz to view the Boer positions, was surprised at breakfast by four Boer scouts. He picked up his rifle and commanded them to surrender or he would shoot. The four surrendered, although Driscoll was ten miles away from the main body of the scouts and close to a large Boer force.

Is Roberts' Health Broken.

London, July 16.—It is rumored in official circles that Lord Roberts' health is breaking and that Gen. Buller's appointment as chief in command is possible. It is said there is also serious friction between Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener, whose autocratic methods have produced bitter discontent in the staff. The transport and supplies service has failed again, which, with the bickerings of the commanders, is given as the cause of the prolonged fighting around Pretoria.

HORRIBLE DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

James Swick Kills His Wife and Then Commits Suicide.

Cayuga, Ont., July 16.—The people of this community were startled on Saturday morning when they heard of the horrible death of James Swick and his wife, an old couple about 70 years of age. The old man first killed his wife and then put an end to his own existence. The scene of the tragedy is at a farm house in East Seneca, about four miles from the village of Canfield and ten miles from Cayuga.

On Friday at noon their son Harvey went to the field to cut wheat, leaving the old couple alone in the house. When he returned at night a dreadful spectacle was presented to him. The mother was lying dead with her head horribly bruised, apparently by a hammer, and the father was lying with his head almost shot off, by means of a shot gun in his own hands. Death must have come almost instantly to him.

There were signs of a struggle between the old man and woman, as her throat showed finger prints, he evidently trying to strangle her first, then completing his work by means of a hammer, as her head was badly battered. The hammer was found hidden under the house, where the old man had put it after doing his terrible work. Then he completed his own destruction as already described. At the inquest no new developments were brought out.

ENDEAVORERS IN LONDON.

10,000 of Them Were at the Alexandra Palace Opening Meeting.

London, July 16.—Alexandra Palace presented a brilliant spectacle Saturday night when 10,000 members of the Society of Christian Endeavor opened the world's convention. The night session was preceded by an afternoon organ recital, an immense chorus rendering familiar Christian Endeavor songs, accompanied by one of the greatest organs in all England. This was followed by a second musical service and six simultaneous secondary services.

Dr. Monroe Gibson, of Toronto, now of London, welcomed the members of the Society of Christian Endeavor in behalf of all England. Honorary Secretary Rev. S. W. McKnight also made an eloquent welcome address. The responses were by Chaplain Rev. W. Tracy of Philadelphia, Dr. Newman Hall and Rev. W. Paterson of Canada.

COMMONS ON SATURDAY.

Fault Found With Galicians—Roumanian Jews Destined For Canada.

Ottawa, July 14.—After being up this morning till 3.30 o'clock, when the House adjourned, few members were present at 11 a. m., when the Saturday morning sitting began.

Mr. Foster for a return of all dismissed officials from the employment of the Department of Railways and Canals. No promise was made him.

Mr. Frank Oliver said that the man who wrote the report of the Department of the Interior was possessed of a pleasing imagination. The report said that the 16,000 Galicians settled in the Northwest Territories "were being divided into small colonies." This Mr. Oliver declared was not true for near his own home, Edmonton, there existed one colony consisting of 8,000 Galicians. The report was also wrong when it said that the objection to the Gallicians had passed away from the minds of the Westerners. Mr. Oliver declared the fact was that because of the large number of the immigrants and their remarkable fecundity the objection to them was really increasing.

Mr. Clarke read from The Edinburgh Scotsman of July 3 a despatch from Vienna, stating that a large exodus of Roumania Jews was making its way through Vienna on the road to Canada. The despatch said these Jews were so poor that they had to camp out at night, and hadn't a sou with which to buy a bed. He wanted to know what the Government had to say.

Sir Wilfrid declared it was not the policy of the Government to import paupers, but he could not say nothing definite in the absence of Mr. Sifton.

Bank Amendment Act.

An Act to amend the Bank Act Amendment Act so as to enable one bank to buy the business of another was given a third reading.

A similar fate fell to the lot of an Act respecting the Quebec Harbor Commissioners.

Subsidies Passed.

Mr. Blair's bill based on the railway subsidies resolution was read a third time.

The House went into supply on Quebec estimates at 12 o'clock.

The House sat till 11.30 Saturday night with the intention of getting through the estimates, but the intention was not consummated. The progress was made slowly. There remains the railway estimates, the fisheries and other minor items to be discussed. They will take all day Monday.

THE SENATE.

Ottawa, July 16.—The Elections Act was discussed in committee Saturday morning, but not finished.

When the Postal Act came up in the afternoon, Sir Mackenzie Bowell wished to amend it by destroying the principal of zones.

On a point of order, Speaker Pelletier ruled that, as the Postal Act was a money measure, it could not be amended by the Senate.

The ruling of the Speaker forced the hand of Sir Mackenzie, and, accordingly, the Postal Act was bodily rejected.

FIVE BLOCKS WERE BURNED.

Business Section of Prescott, Arizona, Went Up in Smoke.

Prescott, Arizona, July 16.—Fire, which wrought over $1,000,000 damage, started at 10.45 on Friday evening, and burned unchecked until 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The burned district embraces five blocks.

A THIN DISGUISE.

The cuttle fish has a tricky habit of covering his tracks by exuding an inky fluid which discolors the water and keeps him out of view. There's a good deal of the cuttle fish about some advertisements, notably those purporting to offer medical advice by a woman to women. An examination of the advertisement will show that no offer of a doctor's advice is really made. And all the clamor about "writing to a woman" is merely raised to divert attention from the fact that a doctor's advice is not really offered and cannot be given. The real question is not of writing to a woman or a man but of writing to a doctor,

For the advice of an unqualified woman is just as dangerous as the advice of an unqualified man.

Every day adds to the number of women who take advantage of Dr. Pierce's genuine offer of a consultation by letter free of cost. As chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. R. V. Pierce has, in a practice of over thirty years, treated more than half-a-million women for female troubles with the remarkable record of ninety-eight per cent. of cures. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, without fear and without fee. Every letter is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential, and all answers are mailed sealed in plain envelopes without printing of any kind upon them.

GRANT'S LOVE OF HORSES.

How He Encouraged the Artillerymen to Take Home Bay Bet.

"General Grant," said the colonel, "was a close observer of men and horses. His eye went over the horses of an artillery company or of a cavalry regiment lighting up with appreciation of the soldierly quality of horses as well as the soldierly quality of men. After the surrender at Appomattox instinctively his sympathies went out to the Confederates who owned and were attached to their horses, and one of the first things he thought of was some scheme by which the men might be permitted to take their horses home. I don't believe there is an old cavalryman that served in the Confederate service but warmed to General Grant from that minute.

"I have always thought that General Grant's influence had much to do with inaugurating the policy that permitted many of our own cavalry and artillery men to smuggle home or to purchase at a mere song favorite horses or company pets. In one case I know that he openly encouraged the men of an artillery company to carry home a bay mare that had won a peculiar reputation. There was not a finer looking mare in any artillery company than Bay Bet. She was purchased on her good looks and her spirit, but she had never been harnessed, and she would not work in team. She caused so much trouble that she was finally assigned to one of the officers as a riding horse. In weeks and months of service she developed the genuine dramatic battle spirit. She carried herself as finely as any horse in the service.

"On one occasion, when a good many of the horses were shot, the captain as a last resort ordered that Bay Bet be put into harness, that the guns might be dragged to a new position. Every one expected to see trouble, but Bet accepted the situation, and we whirled to the new line with the mare showing as finely as she would in a cavalry charge. The boys cheered and cheered her, and the Confederates probably supposed that the cheers meant victory on some part of the line. After that Bay Bet was one of the most serviceable horses in the company, but she would never bear a whip.

"She was taken home and for some months was allowed to play about the farm at her will. In the fall it was decided to use her in plowing. She took to the harness well enough, a little skittish over the plow, but went to work like an old stager. But early in the day the man driving the team struck her with a whip. She was furious on the instant and ran away, dragging the plow and the old farm horse after her across the field in the style of a cavalry horse careering to the front, struck a snag of a tree projecting from the ground and killed herself. The boys of the company always believed that, humiliated by the whip, she committed suicide."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

He Didn't Ask.

He is a small boy who likes to have the things that he wants, and he is diplomatic in getting them. The other day he had gone out to make a call with his mamma upon an old friend.

"Now, dear," said mamma as they stood on the doorstep, "remember that you are not to ask for anything."

"Yes, mamma," answered the small boy.

"I have been busy almost all the morning making crullers," said the friend as she entered the room and greeted them. A beatific expression spread over the small boy's face.

"I like to hear you talk about crullers," he said, with a smile of more than childlike innocence.

"Why, are you fond of them?" asked the mamma's friend in a pleased tone.

"Oh, yes, very," said the small boy, looking, if anything, still more innocent.

"I didn't ask for them, mamma," he cried in a tone of indignant protest as the door closed on the cruller maker, who had gone to bring in a sample.—New York Times.

An Ingersoll Story.

"I will tell you a story about the late Colonel Ingersoll which I never saw in print," said a lawyer who knew the great agnostic well.

"When he was an attorney in Peoria, Ills., a young wife called to see him about filing a suit for divorce. Ingersoll questioned her closely and after she had detailed a number of grievances he told her that none was sufficient. She was much perturbed in consequence and finally appealed to him to know on what grounds she could procure her bill. The colonel took a lawbook from his collection and pretended to examine it. After this he turned to her and said: 'Madam, I find nothing in this book to fit the situation. But if you can establish the fact that he is addicted to the unmasculine habit of eating ice cream soda I know a judge who will give you a decree.'

"That, in Ingersoll's opinion, in a man was inexcusable."

Keeping His Fingers Supple.

How any great pianoforte player keeps his hands supple has often been a matter for wonder, but M. Paderewski, the king of pianists, revealed the whole secret. "The night before I play I turn my hands over to my valet, and he rubs my fingers until they tingle," declared M. Paderewski. "Then he takes one finger after the other and turns and twists it in the palm of his hand, always turning the one way. That makes the fingers supple and keeps the knuckles in good working order. Last he rubs the palm of each hand very hard—as hard as I can stand it. Just before I go on the platform to play I have a basin of hot water brought to my dressing room. In this I immerse my hands. Hot! I should say so; just about as hot as it is possible for a man to stand it." So this is the way it is done.

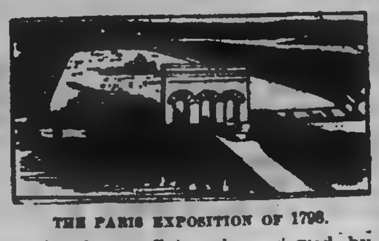
GREAT WORLD FAIRS

A SHORT HISTORY OF THOSE WHICH HAVE ATTRACTED ATTENTION.

Paris May Justly Lay Claim to Being the Exposition City Par Excellence—Sketches Showing the Scale of Her Great Shows in 1798 and in 1849—Wonderful Growth and Progress.

Paris can lay just claim to being the exposition city of the world. It has been the leader of the exposition idea of modern times, and has set a lively pace for other ambitious cities to follow. For more than a century the city has been in the business of entertaining the people of the world with just the sort of shows that is attracting such crowds to France this year, and every one of her expositions has been bigger, more expensive, more artistic, more largely attended and better than the last.

When one looks upon the wonderful creation that is to-day attracting visitors from every nation of the world one can scarcely realize that it is but 100 years ago when Paris gave her first exposition and invited the world to visit it.



THE PARIS EXPOSITION OF 1798.

The first exposition which Paris gave to the world in 1798 was not much of an affair when viewed by comparison with present-day standards. Its total cost was but $12,000, and there but 110 exhibitors, of which practically every fourth one secured a medal, as 25 of these were distributed. But small as it was, it was artistic. The buildings were of embellished wood, and attracted the attention of artists in every country. The world has long since forgotten this feeble effort at fête-giving in Paris, and yet feeble though it may have been, it was an effort that should not be despised, for it was but the seed from which the magnificent exposition of 1900 has grown.

That Paris was not discouraged by her first effort is evidenced by the fact that only three years later another effort was made which was far more successful. This second exposition was held in 1801 in the court of Louvre, and represented just double the number of exhibitors. In all other ways it was much superior to the first.

Just a year later came the third attempt on the part of the French capital, and which met with even greater success. It was held at the same place, and attracted such attention that 550 exhibits were displayed.

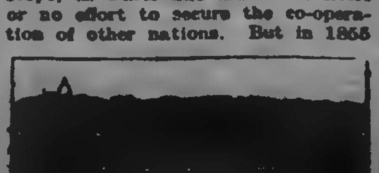
After this success a rest of four years was taken, and then the city outdid all of her previous efforts combined. The exposition of 1806 was opened by no less a personage than Napoleon I., and attracted 1,422 exhibitors. It was held on the Esplanade des Invalides, and was visited by people from all over Europe and America.

Still a longer wait came between the exposition of 1806 and the one that followed, which was not until 1819. Foreign war and internal strife kept France in a turmoil during those years, and expositions were impossible. But, like the others, the exposition of 1819 showed an increase in the number of exhibitors, and attendance, the exhibitors growing from 1,422 in 1806 to 1,622 in 1819.

The sixth exposition opened in 1823, and the seventh opened in 1827, met with but little success, while the eighth showed a considerable gain over its nearest rival, the one of 1819, there being a total of 2,487 exhibitors.

Still another gain in interest was shown at the exposition of 1839, held on the Champs Elysees, at which 3,960 exhibitors were represented. The exposition of 1849 was held at the same place, and attracted quite as much attention as any of its predecessors. But some idea of the size of this exposition in comparison with those of the present time may be had from the fact that even as late as 1849 the cost had not reached the half million mark for any of them, the exposition of 1849 costing but $300,000.

While all of the first expositions were comparatively large affairs for the times, they were but national in scope, as Paris had made but little or no effort to secure the co-operation of other nations. But in 1855 the exposition ideas of the French city had greatly enlarged, as in 1851 she had a most successful rival in world fair building in London, Vienna, Brussels, Berlin, and other European cities attempted to follow her example and attract to themselves a part of the great crowds that were being attracted to Paris. In 1855 Paris spent $2,300,000 in building her exposition; at it there were 23,954 exhibitors, and it attracted more than 5,000,000 visitors.



THE PARIS EXPOSITION OF 1849.

Since 1855 these great international expositions have followed each other swiftly in Paris. The one of 1867 attracted 52,000 exhibitors, as did the next one, in 1878, and the latter had an attendance of 16,000,000 visitors. Again after a lapse of 11 years Paris gave the pleasure seeking world the exposition of 1889, with its 55,486 exhibitors, and at which there was an attendance of 32,500,000 visitors.

ASIA'S LARGEST LAKE.

Baikal Is an Interesting Body of Water Which Is Being Studied.

Lake Baikal, the largest body of land-locked water in Asia, will, in the near future, be of much more importance to the world in general than at present, for the Siberian Railroad will, as it were, bring the lake into the world. This the Russian Government has already recognized, and in consequence, has sent a number of experienced explorers to study carefully and report upon the geography of the lake and the surrounding district. The report which the explorers have made has greatly enriched our knowledge of this hitherto mysterious sea.

Lake Baikal has an area of over 20,000 square miles. The name "Baikal" is derived from a Tartar word, Baykul, which means rich. The Mongols, on the other hand, call it the Dalai-nor—the holy lake.

It is often shrouded in thick fog, and lashed by terrific storms. In the former it is no rare occurrence for the boats of the fishermen to wander aimlessly for days before finding a landing place. In the storms dozens of craft are sunk. No wonder then that the lake is feared by the superstitious peasantry. At a distance of half a mile from the shore, the bottom sinks down sheer from 4,000 to 6,000 feet. Before the recent investigations it was thought that the deepest point in the lake was not more than 5,500 feet, which would be 3,000 feet below the sea level. But Dryenko has just proved the existence of a depth of over 8,000 feet, such a depth as can be found nowhere else but in the ocean, and which far exceeds that of such ocean seas as the White, Baltic and North Seas.

Strange to say Lake Baikal does not freeze readily even in deep winter, and traffic is often open until the end of December. It was also discovered that while the water of the southern end of the lake freezes completely, that of the north, especially about the island of Olchon, does not freeze over entirely. The latter fact explains the presence on the island of the famous Lake Baikal seals, which form a distinct class, with marked peculiarities.

With the exception of where the River Selenga enters the lake, the shores are backed by mountains, whose slopes are covered with thick forests of fir and larch, and whose summits are snow-covered. The lake is so wide that from the middle the shores cannot be seen.

The Sultan's Barbarous Capital.

European ladies constantly run away with the idea that Constantinople is a civilized town and act accordingly. Then they are astonished when something disagreeable happens, and continually one hears of ladies being hustled, pinched or kissed by Turkish soldiers. It must be remembered that the soldiers are recruited from the wildest tribes in Asia Minor, where woman is considered an inferior creature, who must give way to man, besides being trained to avoid him on all possible occasions.

One can easily imagine that such a soldier is astonished to see a European lady unveiled, boldly expecting him to give way to her or at any rate not avoiding him, and he naturally takes it to be an advance on her part. Ladies have often told me they have been pushed by soldiers into the gutter, and I have nearly always found that it is simply as I have explained, that neither makes way for the other, with the result that the lady, being the weaker, comes to grief.—London Telegraph.

TROOPER JOHNSTON INVALIDED HOME

WAS WOUNDED BUT REMAINED AT HIS POST UNDER FIRE.

A Comrade Writes to the Review and Gives the Facts—Johnston is a Cool Man on the Field and a Jovial Companion.

The Review has received the following letter from Cape Town, and publishes it most readily, for it is a pleasure always to record the deeds of brave boys in South Africa. Trooper Johnston is from Caven, and belongs to a well-known and highly respected family:—

Cape Town, South Africa,
June 9, 1900.

Editor Peterborough Review, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—Will you please form my unconnected remarks into a respectable article and let your many subscribers and readers know a few facts concerning a special friend of mine, who hails from your city.

Trooper R. G. Johnston, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, is invalided home owing to a misfortune in the campaign. During the battle of Brantfort he was wounded. It was in the early part of the fight, yet he never flinched, remaining at his post of duty as jovial as ever. He never heeded the pain of his leg, and, in fact, he is as cool on the field of battle as when around the camp-fire. The bullet did not make any abrasion of the flesh, but struck so forcibly as to injure the nervous tissue of the marrow in the bone. If all the Peterborough boys are as cool under fire and as good soldiers as Johnston the town may well feel proud of their representatives. He is a lucky fellow, too. The next day after he was wounded he was at the battle of Thaba 'Nchu and narrowly escaped being killed, having the button shot off his left shoulder. He is very reluctant at having to go home, and would like to have seen more actual fighting. Had he not been wounded I do really believe he would have won distinction. He is an intimate friend of mine, and when he hates to go home so badly I thought I would tell you these facts so that you would know the reason why.

You will do me a favor by publishing these facts if space will permit, and oblige.

Yours Truly,
TROOPER W. SHERBOURNE,
C. M. R.

A Reported Appointment.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I have been informed by reliable parties that the position of Inspector of Canadian Products at the Paris Exposition has been granted by the Government to one of our citizens. Now, Mr. Editor, while I have always considered the Liberal Government free and impartial, I cannot approve of its choice in the present case. 'There are several men of more advanced years and possessing greater experience in agricultural pursuits who would be better fitted than a tailor to represent one of the greatest industries of this fair Dominion of ours.

Trusting, Mr. Editor, that this matter will obtain your favorable attention, I am,

Yours Etc.,

—There will be a holiday at the Geo. Matthews Packing establishment tomorrow. The annual picnic of the employees will be held down the river on the Eclipse and Palace scow.

—The Stanley Piano Co's. works number among the staff several successful fishermen. Mr. Kent seldom fails to bring home a fine fish or two, and on Saturday Mr. Jas. Scobell, of the finishing department, caught at Young's Point a fine 'lunge that tipped the scales at 26 1-2 pounds. The fish was sent by Mr. Scobell to his mother at Bowmanville.

—Fishing parties that started out with poles improvised from the slab piles and lines made out of the string off of last week's grocery parcels, and hooks bent in the good old way, have been known to go out in this vicinity and return with a goodly harvest of the finny tribe. But what would you expect a party to bring back that left in . a rubber-tired coach, with a driver in livery and all the necessary style for a splash wedding in the height of the June season. Such a party left Peterborough last week for Millbrook in search of trout. Needless to say, like the man with the fancy pole and patent reel, the catch was small and, worst of all, was the unlucky thirteen in number, and some of them were peculiar species of trout, having horns.

CROSSLEY AND HUNTER.

Their Sixteenth Year in Evangelistic Work Closed.

The following circular which has been issued by the famous evangelists, will be read with general interest:

Another year of health, happiness, hard work and victory in the Master's service has been graciously given us of God.

Sixteen years ago, July 12, we entered the evangelistic work, and we gratefully record that the past year has been one of the most successful.

During the year we have been privileged to conduct campaigns in Dunnville, Tulbury, Stratford, (second visit), Boston, Mass., (fourth visit), Chesley, Minneapolis, Minn., (second visit), Philadelphia, Pa., Toronto, (sixth visit), Kemptville, Arnprior and Elora, closing the year in the latter place on Sunday, July 8th.

We will not attempt to give an extended account of the year's work, suffice to say that, in the most of the campaigns the pastors and people of the various evangelical churches united in the services and great numbers of men, women and youth turned to the Lord, thousands of whom are now accredited members of the churches.

We arrived at our island home in Muskoka last evening, where we expect to enjoy a few weeks' rest, recreation and study preparing for the work of another year.

Fraternally,

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

TENNIS.

The finals in the Peterborough club tournament were played on Saturday afternoon between Messrs. Kerr and Hollingshead. The latter conceded his handicap with the former and both played at scratch. The match was very close, the majority of the games in the two first sets being deuce. Hollingshead finally won out 3 set to 1, with the following score: 7-5, 9-7, 1-6, and 6-4.

In the semi-finals of the Peterborough club, Kerr minus 1-2 15, won from Sandy Hall, plus 1-2 15, by 11 to 9 and 7 to 5.

The Millbrook Tennis Club will play here on Tuesday, four strong. This is the second match in the Ontario Tennis League series.

BASEBALL.

The large and enthusiastic crowd which thronged to Nicholl's Oval Saturday afternoon were fully recompensed for their long and tedious walk by the snappy exhibition of baseball put up by the Vaticans and the Auburns. Although the youngsters of the junior league have not as yet reached the standard of professional ball, still their playing on Saturday would have brought a blush to the countenances of the older players of the senior league. Both pitchers received considerable punishment from their opponents, but this slight inconvenience was greatly offset by the sharp steady work of the fielders. Of those who did particularly destructive work with the bat we might signalize Belleghem, of the Auburns and Graham and Thornton of the Vaticans, for their "freeman-like" abilities. Among the fielders O'Brien and Jeffers were remarked by many of the spectators for their quick stops and speedy throws. A better and more complete idea of the game may be had from the appended score:

The manager of the Lindsay Baseball Team writes complaining that the comments in the Review on the refusal of the Lindsay executive to have next Thursday's game played on Saturday are unfair. He states that they could not play on Saturday, as that would make it impossible for the business people of their town to see the match.

An exciting game of baseball in the City League was played at the P. A. A. A. grounds on Saturday afternoon between the Electrics and the Coal Heavers, the two strong rivals. All the star players in town were to be found on the grounds. Parnell and Graham formed the battery for the Coalheavers, and Meagher and DeRussia were at points for the Electrics. Seven innings of spectacular play were furnished and the Electrics won out by 15 runs to 12. The feature of the afternoon were the heavy batting of Earls and Scott. The Electric team was composed of Earls, Parnell, DeRussia, Clarke, McCabe, Craig, Vennels, Davidson and Grady. The Coalheavers were Mulhall, Scott, Graham, King, Whitcroft, Guerin, Dunford, McClellan and Meagher. The base running of Craig was exciting.

LACROSSE.

The Telegram says:—A week from today (Saturday next) the Capitals will file an appearance at Rosedale for the first time this season. They are stronger than for some years back, and have serious intentions regarding the pennant. It will do old-timers good to see a really good inside home man like Jack Powers, who since Harvey German retired, has no rival in that position. Westwick, "the rat," is also back at centre, and Pat Murphy, of last year's Tecumsehs, who is even a greater net-get than Freddy Mc an, is on the home field. The Caps failed to beat Cornwall in Cornwall, and in that are a notch behind the Shamrocks, but they have disposed of everything else they met. They are the greatest lacrosse outfit the Washington of the north has owned since the days of the Carsons, etc.

Telegram:—That the Tecumsehs were defeated in Orangeville was not a surprise to lacrosse men. Without Soules, Kelly, McDonald and Angus the team is no better than an ordinary one, and it takes more than an ordinary team to beat the Dufferins at home. It is a pity all the same that the Indians will persist in leaving town with such teams. They owe it to the game and to themselves to show that Island victories are not the only ones scratched up to their credit.

ATHLETICS.

Coldwater has produced another champion athlete in the person of Mr. H. Gill, cousin of Geo. R. Gray, the champion shot-putter, who was his trainer. At the New York Athletic Club games recently Gill made a great record in the ten contests, winning three firsts, three seconds, two thirds and two fourths. His victories were in shot-putting, heavy weight throwing and high jumping.

It was with the greatest difficulty, and only with agonizing pain that he sat down upon or arose from a chair, and walking was simply torture; neither the skill of physicians, nor the enormous quantities of patent medicines he took, gave him any relief until he tried Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. After taking the first few doses of this wonderful medicine he obtained relief, and, continuing the treatment, a complete cure was effected. THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"The man who helped old Marsden to collect his chips and hand 'em in."

"Oh, no! Not yet."

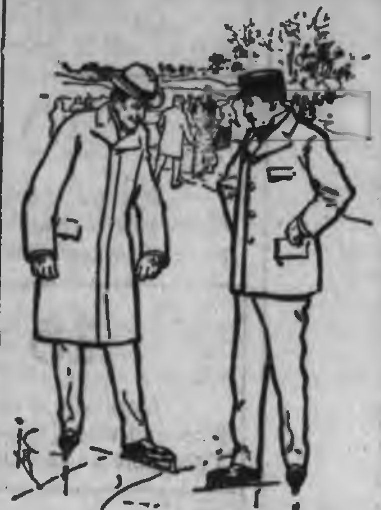
"Now, I rather fawncied you'd lay hold of him at once."

"Indeed!"

"Touching young Marsden, eh? What price that?"

"I'm afraid I don't exactly follow you."

"No? Well, I fawncy not. I'm a bit clevah, sir, I am," and the Englishman tapped the side of his nose with a long forefinger. "Find if young Marsden's returned. Ah, not that I'm oversorry old Marsden's pegged it. Of course I didn't want him murdered, but I fawncy I might stand to be a bit better off in a week or two."



"Silas Gosnell, sir—Silas Gosnell."

"How so?"

"Really, now, don't you see, he never recognised me, but I'm a cousin, sir, and I fawncy I'll shake things up a bit presently. There are one or two others in this neighborhood, sir, and you may be sure we shall contest the will."

"That is, if it's not satisfactory to your ideas, I presume?"

"Precisely. What's the law, now, if that old miser, Marsden, has left all his dust to the youngster and it's proved that the youngster murdered him? What's the law?"

"Don't you think, Mr."—

"Silas Gosnell, sir—Silas Gosnell."

"Well, don't you think, Mr. Gosnell, it would be much wiser to wait until young Mr. Marsden is accused before you make quite so much use of his name in connection with the murder?"

"I fawncy that perhaps you're right. But what's the law anyway?"

"I'm sure I don't know," Darrent responded sharply as they made for the bank on the Norcombe side.

"All right; steady does it. Don't get warm, young man," Mr. Gosnell observed as he unfastened his skates. "Still, I fawncy a Scotland Yard man would know the law backward."

"Very probably so, Mr. Gosnell," replied Darrent. "He would know it, as you say, backward."

"Are you strolling my way, old chap?"

"I think not, and yet, on second thought, I think I will."

"Right. Will you have a drink?"

"No, thanks."

"Sure?"

"No, thanks."

"I fawncy you're right. Poison yourself is no figure of speech if you drink the stuff they sell in Norcombe."

Herbert Darrent walked with his strange acquaintance through the village, anxious to gain what news he could, if any, of the relatives of the late Josiah Marsden, and before they parted at the door of the Palace hotel he had learned that Marsden's remaining cousins were Andrew Marsden, a farmer, living a few miles west of Norcombe, and Arthur Ridgeway, the manager of a theater in Barnstaple.

Silas Gosnell was a man that Darrent felt he would very much like to study, but time would not permit. He could only label him as a harmless idiot and then forget him, although he did ask himself once or twice during the day, as the thought recurred to him, why Gosnell's insanity had taken such a peculiar turn.

After bidding goodby to his companion Darrent walked down to the police station, but there was no reply to his telegram, and it was not until noon next day that he received a lengthy dispatch from Chicago in answer to his own.

Thanks to his promptitude of action, the authorities had experienced little difficulty in tracing Astray Marsden. He had gone by the first train from Barnstaple to Chicago, as Darrent had expected he would, had taken a cab at the station and was driven to the Royal hotel, where he was now staying under his own name.

"Hum!" muttered Darrent as he read the message. "Got a good alibi, I suppose." He glanced at his watch. He could drive over and catch the afternoon train from Barnstaple, get to Chicago, see young Marsden and be back again the next nigh and while at Barnstaple he might be able to have a few words with one of the other cousins, Arthur Ridgeway.

A couple of hours later Darrent was strolling down High street, Barnstaple, looking for the Gaiety theater, which, after a lengthy search, he discovered in a not very lively quarter of the town and from a variegated placard on the wall gleaned the information that Mr. Arthur Ridgeway was the actor-manager. Another highly colored poster representing a gentleman in a deep blue frock coat and pink trousers, with an unaccountably amiable smile upon his features, being dropped into an enormous caldron of some steaming liquid by another and less amiable gentleman, who, in pleasing contrast to his unfortunate victim, was attired in a pink frock coat and blue trousers, announced to all and sundry that there would be played that evening and for the rest of the week the stirring melodrama, entitled "The Factory Man's Revenge," in which were introduced a real steam hammer weighing a hundred tons and a real caldron of real molten metal, "the most thrilling scene," the poster asserted, "ever seen on any stage," which Darrent was quite ready to believe.

Making his way down a grimy court, at the entrance of which a lamp in a wire cage bore the legend "Stage Door," Darrent found a veritable picture gallery of posters representing the villain, always in the same pink coat and the same blue trousers, putting the gentleman whose taste in clothes was exactly vice versa through a variety of original and excruciating tortures, at which the bland gentleman continued to beam and smile, evidently with an inborn knowledge that his turn was coming in the last act.

At last Darrent reached the stage door of the Gaiety theater and, sending in his card, asked to see Mr. Ridgeway and while waiting whiled away the time by studying a pictorial representation of the great scene of the last act, which explained the much put upon gentleman's extreme forbearance in the previous scenes.

Darrent's admiration of the triumph of virtue over villainy was interrupted by the return of the stage door keeper. Mr. Ridgeway would see him, he was informed, and, following his guide along a tortuous labyrinth of stairs and passages, he at last found himself upon the stage of the Gaiety theater, where the flaring "T" pieces only served to render the gloom of auditorium visible. A good tempered looking man nodded to him as he appeared and, begging to be excused for a moment, continued the task upon which he was engaged of holding the hundred ton hammer erect while a man went over it with a paintbrush.

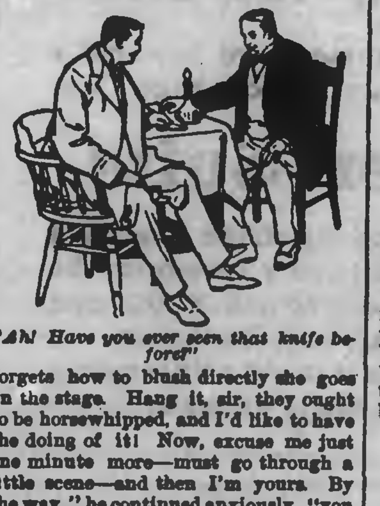
"Glad to see you. Sit down, sir," he shouted as Darrent appeared. "Not in a hurry for a minute? Thanks. Awfully busy. Give you ten minutes in ten minutes. Suit you? Right; they're yours. Now, give me your opinion, stranger," he rattled on. "Does that steam hammer look like the real thing, or does it not? Ha! You're laughing. Never mind. You haven't got the right light on it. Come tonight and see it, and you'd swear it was the genuine article. One hundred tons. Daylight does not suit any of us. Now, look at me. What do I look—40, eh? See me tonight. I'm the hero, 35, and lovely as the rising sun. Look at the heroine. Ah! She's a pretty girl anyway, isn't she? But she'll look a goddess, a perfect goddess of 21, tonight. As it is she's"—

"Now, Arthur, don't tell any stories," a very pretty girl standing by the manager exclaimed, putting her hand over his mouth. "He's always talking nonsense," she continued, in an explanatory way, to Herbert Darrent.

"My wife, sir," Ridgeway continued, releasing the hundred ton hammer, which descended with a dead wooden thud, and, putting his arm round the girl, "one of the best, one of the very best, and the prettiest little heroine on the stage."

Darrent shook hands with the lady and paid her an easy little compliment that raised her color and caused her husband to beam upon them both.

"Look at that, sir—look at it!" he exclaimed delightedly. "There's a lovely little innocent blush for you! And yet you'll find people who say a woman forgets how to blush directly she goes on the stage. Hang it, sir, they ought to be horsewhipped, and I'd like to have the doing of it! Now, excuse me just one minute more—must go through a little scene—and then I'm yours. By the way," he continued anxiously, "you don't want to go on the stage, do you? Don't say you do; shouldn't like to refuse you. I like the look of you, but I'm full—full."



"Ah! Have you ever seen that knife before?"

Darrent shook his head laughingly, and the manager, much relieved, bustled across the stage and rushed into rehearsal of the little scene.

"A good hearted fellow," was the way Herbert Darrent summed up the second relation of Josiah Marsden and fell into a reverie about the first relation he had met and why nature had ever found it worth her while to create such a colossal idiot. Or—the idea always came to him—was the man as big a fool as he pretended to be or something more of a rogue?

His ruminations were interrupted and he was brought back to the world again by finding Mr. Ridgeway standing before him, wildly brushing his hand through his hair and looking the very picture of farcical despair.

"Behold her, behold her!" the manager excitedly shouted, waving his hand toward his wife. "What does she look like?"

Darrent thought to himself that she looked like what she was, a very bright young girl, but he was not even given time to express his opinion.

"Does she look broken hearted and starving? Not a bit, not a bit like it. I've gone through this scene dozens of times, and she won't look miserable. I don't believe she can, bless her heart!'

"Go on, go on. Enter James Hardy. He's the villain of the piece," he explained to Darrent. "Squire Hardy, in love with the village maiden; good old crusted melodrama. But won't it go? Won't the public hoot him? Ah!" and the energetic manager rushed across the stage again. "It won't do, I tell you. You say 'You're in my power!' as if you were asking the time the next train started for Chicago. Put some life into it. Now, then, my dear, shrink from him. I know he's not a bad fellow actually, but that's not his character in the play. That's better. No; wait a minute. 'You're in my power'—yes, that's all right. Shrink and then do a little shriek. Now go back. 'If I could see him once more, I could die content.' That's right. Enter Hardy; cue, 'in my power'—good. Shriek: 'I am lost! Who will save me?' Ah, very good! I enter; struggle. Yes, that's all right. Now, do it like that tonight."

The little scene was evidently settled to Mr. Ridgeway's satisfaction, and he walked over to Herbert Darrent. "Now, sir, I am yours to command."

The detective, ever a quick judge of character, had long since arrived at the conclusion that the best way to deal with Mr. Ridgeway was to come to the point at once, and, having taken a seat in that gentleman's room and accepted a glass of wine that was generously pressed upon him, he placed his hand in his pocket and, taking out the spring knife, laid it upon the table.

"I am not going to attempt to deceive you, Mr. Ridgeway," he exclaimed. "I tell you frankly I am a detective, inquiring into the murder of your cousin, Josiah Marsden."

The manager, with his eyes riveted upon the knife, nodded his head, but said nothing.

"When did you see Josiah Marsden last?"

"Two years ago, when he foreclosed on his mortgage on this theater and turned me into the streets almost ruined. I was the proprietor then. Now I'm only the manager," Ridgeway replied, with suppressed passion in his voice. "Never seen him since then and always prayed I never would—in case of accidents."

"Ah! Have you ever seen that knife before?"

Ridgeway caught his breath.

"Marsden was murdered with that knife. Do you remember ever seeing it before?"

"Never," the manager replied, turning his gaze from the knife to his own boots and nervously fingering the stem of his wineglass. "Never. That I am absolutely certain of."

"A good hearted fellow," was Darrent's mental note as he observed the obvious embarrassment of the man. "He's not used to telling lies, but it's no use."

"Seen Astray Marsden lately?" he interjected.

"No."

"He's abroad, is he not?"

"So they say."

"Ah!"

"Good heavens, sir!" exclaimed Arthur Ridgeway, jumping to his feet. "You don't mean to say you suspect him? It's impossible. He wouldn't do it. I'd stake my right hand on it. He's a trump, as white a man as was ever made."

"And so is his friend, Arthur Ridgeway," Darrent interposed, slapping him on the back. "There, don't disturb yourself. If he's innocent, he'll be able to prove it right enough." And, wringing the man's hand, Herbert Darrent strolled out of the theater and toward the railway station.

"Arthur Ridgeway recognizes the knife and knows that Astray Marsden has returned," he muses. "Very well; things are getting closer. Now to see whether young Marsden is worthy of this man's good opinion or is one of the biggest scoundrels breathing."

ST. HELENA.

St. Helena is distant 1,440 miles from Africa and 1,800 from America.

The island is ten miles long and eight miles across, with an area of 47 square miles.

The only inhabited place in St. Helena is Jamestown, which has a population of about 2,500.

Diana's peak, the highest point in the island, near the center, is 2,700 feet above the sea.

The coast of the island forms a perpendicular wall, or cliff, averaging from 600 feet to 2,000 feet, all around.

On Feb. 7, 1890, at the end of the Zulu war, Dinizulu and Undabuko, two Zulu chieftains, were transported to St. Helena.

St. Helena was discovered by the Portuguese on St. Helena's day, 21st of May, 1502. The Dutch held it until 1600, when they were expelled by the English.

Ladder hill, on which the government house is situated, is so called because of the almost precipitous, ladderlike wooden stairs by which its acclivity of 600 feet has to be scaled.

Dizzy Spells and Headache

Weak, Nervous, and Run Down, would Shake with Nervousness—A Terrible Case—A Remarkable Cure.

Mrs. Chas. H. Jones, Piercston, Que., writes:—"For years I have been a great sufferer with my heart and nerves. I would take shaking spells and a dizzy, swimming feeling would come over me. Night after night I would never close my eyes, and my head would ache as though it would burst. At last I had to keep to my bed, and though my doctor attended me from fall until spring, his medicine did not help me.

"I have now taken five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it has done me more good than I ever believed a medicine could do. Words fail to express my gratitude for the wonderful cure brought about by this treatment."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food makes pale, weak, nervous men, women, and children strong, healthy, and happy. In pill form, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The clothing consisted of dark trousers and coat with no vest. There were several bad bruises at the base of the skull.

THE FATE OF THE LEGATIONS

Europeans Made a Desperate Sortie and Bravely Met Death.

Sir Robert Hart Wired to His Wife on July 5:" Our People, Including the Women Are in the Legations—Prepare to Hear the Worst"-Did Sheng Doctor News Which Came to Shanghai?—Allies Fighting Hard.

London, July 16, 6 a. m.—Confirmation of the awful rumors in reference to Pekin has now been received from Shanghai. Sheng, the director of telegraphs, obtained audience of the whole Consular body on Saturday, and informed them that on or about June 30 the foreigners in the British Legations were annihilated. The information had reached him from the Governor of Shantung.

Chinese Knew It a Week Ago.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "I can assert positively that the Chinese authorities had the dreadful news from Pekin a week ago and that Sheng knew all the foreigners in Pekin were dead when he asked the American consul to cable Washington a proposal to deliver the foreigners in safety at Tien Tsin on condition that the allies would suspend their operations to the North of Pekin."

Tuan Decided on a Night Attack.

The correspondent adds certain details of affairs at Pekin after June 25. According to his story members of the legations made daily sorties, sometimes by night, and so successfully as to compel the Chinese to retreat from the immediate vicinity. These reverses had a disheartening effect on the Chinese, and there soon began to be open signs of disaffection, followed by desertions to Prince Ching's army, which was endeavoring to co-operate with the besieged. Ultimately Prince Tuan decided to make a night attack in three powerful columns.

Fire Opened on British Legation.

"At 6 o'clock on the evening of July 6," says the correspondent, "fire was opened with artillery upon the British legation, where the foreigners were concentrated. For two hours the walls were battered with shot and shell, and huge breaches were made in them. Then a general advance was ordered and the Chinese infantry, volleying constantly, moved toward the gaps. The fire of the defenders, however, was so accurate and steady that hordes of Chinese soldiers and Boxers broke and fled in the wildest confusion, leaving large numbers of dead and wounded around the legation. They could not be rallied until they were out of rifle range of the foreigners.

Tuan's Desperate Appeal.

"Then Prince Tuan, making a desperate appeal, induced them to stand and return to the attack. Artillery fire was then resumed and at the middle watch a second attack was attempted. But before the attackers could accomplish their object they were met by Prince Ching and Gen. Wen Win Shao with their troops, who were going to the aid of the foreigners. A desperate battle ensued between the various forces of Chinese and Manchus.

Ching's Troops Deserted.

"Unfortunately many of Prince Ching's troops deserted to Prince Tuan. Prince Ching fell and was supposed to have been killed, but as the search for his body was unsuccessful it is now believed he was only wounded and carried off and secreted by his faithful retainers.

"Gen. Wen Win Shao, altho grey haired and 70 years old, valiantly led his troops in person. He was killed and his force, which was completely outnumbered, was routed.

Repeated Night Attacks.

"Throuout the night repeated attacks were made on the legation, but these were invariably repulsed, with heavy losses. Toward the end of the third watch, about 3 a.m., the allies had practically defeated the besiegers, who were wavering and gradually withdrawing. But just then Gen. Tung Fuh Siang arrived from the vicinity of Tien Tsin, with a large force. By this time the walls of the legation had been battered down, and most of the buildings were in ruins. Many of the allies had fallen at their posts, and the small band that was left took refuge in the wrecked buildings, which they endeavored hastily to fortify.

Met Death Stubbornly.

"Upon the fire of the Chinese, artillery was directed. Towards sunrise it was evident that the ammunition of the allies was running out, and at 7 o'clock, as the advances of the Chinese force failed to draw a response, a rush was determined upon.

"Thus, standing together, as the sun rose, the little remaining band of Europeans met death, stubbornly. There was a desperate hand to hand encounter. The Chinese lost heavily, but as one man fell others advanced, and, finally, overcome by overwhelming odds, every one of the Europeans remaining was put to the sword in the most atrocious manner."

THE MASSACRE.

Terrible Account of the Last Days of the Foreigners in the City of Pekin.

London, July 16.—The Shanghai correspont of The Express, on the alleged authority of couriers who brought the story in regard to Pekin gives a very sensational account. He says:

"Maddened with hunger, after having been without food for many days, the members of the legations and the guards made a sortie on the night of June 30 and killed 200 Chinese in an unexpected attack. Gen. Tung Fuh Siang, enraged over the loss of so many men, brought up heavy guns and Prince Tuan gave orders that every foreigner must be destroyed. His words were: 'Destroy every foreign vestige and make China sealed book to all western powers.'

Fired on Ching's Troops.

"Prince Tuan had previously discovered that Prince Ching was supplying the foreigners secretly with ammunition. He therefore ordered Gen. Tung Fuh Siang to fire on Prince Ching's troops, and it is reported that Ching was killed or seriously wounded.

"In the final attempt to cut their way thru, the legationers formed a square, with the women and children in the centre. When the Boxers realized that they were being attacked they became like wild beasts and shot each other in the darkness.

Foreigners Killed Their Own Women.

"The foreigners went mad and killed all their women and children with revolvers. Heavy guns bombarded all night until the buildings were demolished and in flames. Many foreigners were roasted in the ruins. The Boxers rushed upon them and hacked and stabbed both dead and wounded, cutting off their heads and carrying these thru the streets on their rifles, shouting fiercely. They then attacked the native Christian quarters, massacred all who refused to join them, outraged the women and brained the children. Hundreds of mission buildings were burned."

All China Aflame.

The correspondent adds: "All China is now aflame with revolt against foreigners. Only in the extreme west is there quiet. Every port, even Shanghai is menaced. In the Province of Hupe and Hunan thousands of native Christians have been massacred and tortured, the women first being outraged and then massacred."

Italian Missions Destroyed.

Rome, July 15.—The Italian consul at Shanghai cables that the Italian mission in Hunan has been destroyed and Bishop Fantosati and two missionaries killed.

He also reports that the Italian missions in Honan and Hupe have been assaulted.

ALL FOREIGNERS WERE KILLED.

Purport of an Official Telegram From the Governor of Shantung.

Shanghai, July 16.—An official telegram was received last night from the Governor of Shantung, stating that a breach was made in the wall, after a gallant defence and all the ammunition had given out. All foreigners were killed.

HEAVY FIGHTING AT TIEN TSIN.

Japanese by Flank Movement Drove the Enemy Out—Allies Burn An Arsenal.

London, July 15.—The following despatches from Admiral Seymour were published this evening:

"Tien Tsin, July 9.—The enemy's position southwest of the settlement was attacked at 4 o'clock this morning. The Japanese, by a flank movement, drove the enemy out and captured four guns. Cavalry pursued and completed the rout of the enemy, killing large numbers of soldiers and Boxers.

Allies Occupy Western Arsenal.

"The allied forces shelled and occupied the western arsenal, capturing the guns. The arsenal was burned, as the allies were unable to hold it. The enemy's loss was 350 killed. The losses of the allies were small."

Allies Lost 150 Killed and Wounded

Tien Tsin, July 12.—The Chinese at 3 a.m. yesterday made a determined attack on the railway station in great force. Finally they were driven off, but the allies lost 150 killed and wounded. The Chinese loss is unknown, but it is believed to have been heavy.

"The allied forces have been increased by the arrival of 1500 Americans."

RIOTING IN NINGPO.

Roman Catholic Mission Burned—American Missionaries Appeal to the U. S. People.

Shanghai, Friday, July 13.—There has been serious rioting in Ningpo, where the Roman Catholic mission has been burned. No details have yet been received.

The American missionaries ask the Associated Press to publish the following:

To the Christian people of the United States: The missionaries in China ask a special prayer from every pulpit for the guidance of the Government for the speedy succor of Americans and native converts in extreme peril.

Americans in Shanghai Protest.

The following is the text of an appeal of Americans in China, assembled in mass meeting in Shanghai, to their fellow-citizens at home:

"Urge the Government to send adequate forces to act effectively in concert with the other powers. At present the American forces are quite disproportionate to the interests involved."

"Our commercial interests in the northern provinces are paramount, and we consider it a humiliating policy to entrust to other powers the chief task, that of protecting Americans.

Massacres Continue.

"Anti-foreign outrages are multiplying daily. Officials and missionaries are massacred. The fate of the Ministers and their families in Pekin is not known, but a general massacre is apprehended. Wholesale massacres of native Christians continue. The whole country is terrorized. Trade is paralyzed.

Delay Will Be Disastrous.

"The speedy restoration of order and retribution are duties pressing upon all civilized powers. The consequences of delay will be disastrous. Not only are foreign lives and property placed in jeopardy, but the loss of influence will be incalculable.

Chinese Statements Not Reliable.

"Give no credence to the statements of the situation sent by the Chinese Government to its Ministers abroad. The present outrages are the result of the weak and vacillating policy of the powers in the past. We urge immediate, energetic and concerted action."

France's Great Fete Day.

Paris, July 16.—The French national holiday was celebrated, with splendid weather in Paris on Saturday. Holiday crowds promenaded the streets, and an immense concourse made its way to the Bois de Boulogne to witness the military review. The only regrettable incident in connection with the national fete occurred at the conclusion of the fireworks demonstration. Men, women and children began pushing, and a panic occurred. Women fainted by the score, and many children were trodden under foot. At least 100 women were carried to the cafes in the neighborhood. It is impossible to tell how many were injured. No deaths have been reported as yet.

BEE BUZZES.

A queen will live three or four years.

The average life of a worker bee is 45 days.

The best time to feed bees is just at night.

Wooden troughs are best in which to feed bees.

All particles of comb should be saved and melted into wax.

A worker bee is hatched in 21 days after the egg is deposited.

There is no economy in wasting time with black bees and box hives.

There is no advantage in rushing honey on the market as fast as it is obtained.

For contracting the space in hives division boards can be used to good advantage.

The ground occupied by an apiary is of no value unless planted to small fruits of some kind.

To hive a swarm right is to hive all the bees. If the queen is there at all, she will likely be in the hive along with the rest of them.

Avoid working with bees in cool, cloudy days; also avoid handling them very early in the morning or late in the evening, as they are more irritable at such times.

"Delays are dangerous." Those who have poor, weak, impure blood should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It never disappoints.

REVIEWS.

The Designer for August is replete with fashions in garments and millinery particularly appropriate for this—the warmest month of summer. The color plates are unusually attractive, and the full-page black and white illustrations are artistic in the extreme. The summer girl who is bemoaning her sunburn and freckles, will avail herself gladly of the recipes given for the restoration of her complexion under "For Health and Beauty," while she who has had no vacation will derive satisfaction and learn to appreciate her home surroundings from "Comfort for the Stay-at-Homes."

THE VETERAN STATESMAN.

Wonderful Vitality of the Tupper Stock —An Example of Energy and Industry.

"Don" in Saturday Night of last Saturday says:—

"Sir Charles Tupper is a wonderful old man, but if the statements made by a Nova Scotia clergyman at the Baptist Congress in Winnipeg are accurate, Sir Charles' father, the Rev. Dr. Tupper, was even more wonderful. It was stated that in the early part of his life the schooling of Sir Charles' father was limited to ten weeks, but that by hard work later on he became master of many languages, including Hebrew, Greek, Latin, French, German, Italian and Syriac. It is said he read the New Testament in the first three of these at least a hundred times. At his jubilee it was stated that he had travelled 146,000 miles, chiefly on horseback, preached 65,-750 sermons, taken part in 6,430 other services, and made 11,520 family visits, married 238 couples, attended 542 funerals, and baptized 522 converts. If we added all these figures together, we should perhaps approximate the number of speeches which the present head of the family has made in the course of his long and varied political career.

"The vitality of the Tupper stock is something in which all Canadians can take pride, for it is a good thing to be able to show by such examples that we do not kill all our public men prematurely with worry and abuse. At the same time it may reasonably be a source of anxiety to some Conservative politicians, who see before them no possibility of a change of leadership or of readjustment within the party. The statement was made somewhere the other day that Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper has a son who hankers after a political career. There may be still further generations of Tuppers in store, and if they evince the same propensity not to be killed and to pile up records in the matter of sermons, speeches, marriages and baptisms, it is a question whether Canadians a hundred years hence will not be still reading of their doings and sayings.

"However, I for one am pleased to know that Sir Charles Tupper's father, like Sir Charles himself, affords an example of energy and industry which every young Canadian can profit by."

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous attack has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

END OF THE TRANSVAAL.

Final Meeting of the Boer Parliament at Pretoria Described by One Who Was Present.

Pretoria, May 12.—"They have said, Oh God, that this must be the last meeting of the Volksraads of the Republic. To Thee we pray to prevent that."

The words came in the chaplain's opening prayer, so that all who were there felt they were present at a historic sitting.

A gravity that was really a gloom settled on the faces of the Raadsleden, and of the women in the crowd the greater number wept. All knew the inexorableness of the fate that pursued them, though none admitted it.

And they looked a synod of kirk elders rather than a Parliament, this company of sunburned men in ill-cut broadcloth. They filled their chairs uneasily, for, for seven months, they had known no softer seat than a saddle. Their deep bronzed faces contrasted strangely with the office pallor of the Hollander clerks, and the healthy mahogany of the chairman, Lucas Meyer, made ghastly the fishy whiteness of the President's cheeks.

"PEACE HATH ITS" PRICE.

For a deliberative assembly they were young, with only two greybeards conspicuous in the First Volksraad. Douce, sober-minded farmers they seemed, more suited to the taking of a collection than the deliberation of a nation's destinies. All men in their prime, full of the passion of life, there was but one influence could curb their animalism—their own material gain. Peace had its price in this Transvaal national assembly, the reckoning day was coming, and the members were already counting its cost.

In the chair sat General Lucas Meyer, a great man, deep-chested and deep-voiced, pre-eminently a man of presence. High on his left hung the portraits of those he had aspired to be reckoned among —Paul Kruger, Piet Joubert and Nicholaas Smit. A war, he had valiantly fought against, had intervened to keep him from their company, and to dim in some degree the lustre of his reputation. He had not done badly in battle, but he had not proved himself the leader the people had thought him, and so he was somewhat of a smaller man than at the date of his last election to the chair. He had been tried in the fire, and the burghers were not satisfied with the assay.

THE CENTRAL FIGURE.

At his right hand sat the changeless one, Paul Kruger. Sitting crinkled up in his chair, the old, leaden-faced man looked badly beside his burly colleague. And yet had he lost nothing of the respect which he claimed at the commencement of the struggle. Day in, day out, ceaselessly, tirelessly, the President had worked. Many of the big battles had been designed by him, all of the State's great business had been conducted by him. He had been indefatigable, laboring through the darkness and all through the Sunday. Every principle of his daily life had been violated. At seventy-five he had broken laws which had been immutable with him since childhood. He had set out on long journeys on the Sabbath, had forgotten the peasant's precision in dining hours, and had driven poor Tanta Sana nearly crazy by the irregularity of his ways.

But there is much of the hero in Paul Kruger. He has had a great battle to fight, and, with the material to his hand, has fought it well. He stood out that opening day pre-eminently the greatest man in the State, as he did when he sat in the Raadzaal. He alone stood firm in the faith while others faltered. He was a man who, in other States, would go down in history as Paul the Great; nor would he there disgrace many of his compeers. Granted some grace of body, some dignity of presence, and Paul Kruger would be avowedly a great man. Sitting there huddled together in his chair, with the thumbless hand, fretting over the needless, tedious ceremony, he is merely the farmer of Geduld made President.

VACANT SEATS.

But through it all the restless eyes are roaming, resting for a moment with silent wonder on the brilliant uniforms of the foreign consuls and the glittering breasts of the military attaches, but resting longest on the vacant places. Only two of the Executive chairs to his right are occupied. Mr. Reitz, the State Secretary, is there, looking busy, but buoyant, regretting sorely the time lost in this senseless ceremony; and Vice-President Schalk Burger, pessimistic, burdened, tired—the man who has overlain his opportunity, the Transvaal Hamlet.

Piet Joubert's seat is held sacred to him by a great wreath of palm leaves clasped by a bunch of Transvaal ribbon. It is his guerdon for a clean handed life of service to the State; General Joubert may have been no great tactitian, but he was an honest man—the proudest epitaph a man may earn in South Africa.

Three other Executive seats are empty, those of A. D. Wolmarans, gone to Europe; Jan Kock, killed at Elandslaagte; and Piet Cronje. Jan Kock's place is marked, as Joubert's is, by the insignia of an honorable death. Over the vexed chair of Cronje is draped a vierkleur, and on that is placed an oak wreath—memorials of the man who so blindly planned the Republic's Sedan at Paardeberg.

STRICKEN BY THE WAR.

Down in the body of the Raadzaal two wreaths show the seats of Mr. Barnard, died at Derdepoort, and of Mr. Tosen, succumbed to hardships suffered at the front. Of the members, one at least was dependent upon a crutch, who had walked straight and well six months before. Round every hat was a band of crape, and the hand of war lay very heavy on the Assembly that bright, sunlit afternoon of May 7, 1900.

Three members remained out of seven upon the Executive benches, and the President referred to the vacant places not inelegantly in his speech: "To my mind it would not be out of place to express here how sincerely we appreciate the services of these our dead brothers. History will know how to value the work of our late commandant-general. He not only commanded the respect of the enemy, but his humane and glorious deeds have significance to the State among the nations."

A suitable resolution was afterwards adopted by the House.

THE PRESIDENT'S LIMITATIONS.

Blunt company of farmers though they be, the Transvaal Raadsleden are jealous of their Parliamentary ceremonies. Their President may only enter the Raadzaal on their express invitation, and must remain throughout a guest with all a guest's limitations of privilege. At this, the opening of the Raad, he is escorted to his seat by a chosen commission of members, wears his broad, green sash of office, and so much of a pair of white gloves as he can conveniently manipulate.

He is an old man, Paul Kruger, now; of a curious leaden complexion, who speaks without stop or breath in a hard, crackling voice that positively barks when he is irritated. His voice was a good bass one, but it has grown sadly rusted on the veldt in battle and in the chase, and is now but a greatly deteriorated instrument. His language is the true voortrekker's taal, forcible, sometimes picturesque, but terribly illiterate. Punctuated by hard, dry barks, it is difficult to follow; and much of the clerkly Hollander's dread of him is due to the mystery of his tongue.

He entered the Raadzaal this afternoon with a bluff "Goede middag, heren," and settled in his seat to hear the reading of his formal speech. Later, he spoke, and his speaking was a passionate recital of his efforts after peace and of his country's treatment at the hands of the British. The substance of all of it has been known to us this long time; but there was conviction in the old man's voice, as he thundered:—"I tell you God has said, 'Thus far shall you come, but no farther.' We live in the Lord, and we shall triumph."

And yet this was no Roundhead Parliament, and that no Oliver Cromwell. It was the "most corrupt body of politicians on the face of the globe," throwing its faith utterly upon a God of just dealing! But Oom Paul was as honest in his belief as ever was Old Noll. In that belief the better part of this fighting has been undertaken.

LOSING FAITH IN THE PRESIDENT.

And so it was until the next day, when the Government introduced to a secret session its proposal to dispose of certain undermining rights, the property of the State and of private persons, "in the worst market and at the worst time." No longer was the sea-green incorruptible secure in his faith. He must have money and he would have money. He wrestled with the Raad, bullied it, cajoled it. It was useless. The Raad would have none of the proposition, and the old man flung himself homeward in the deepest dungeon.

Again, on the Wednesday, an attempt was made in a new form; but the opposition swore to end their part in the war, to withdraw their sons and relatives from the fighting line if this thing were done. The President was worsted.

And so the session of 1900 was ended. It had ended badly. Moderate men, sobered by the long-drawn tussle with death, left again for their commandos, wondering sadly that such things could be while the very veldt was rusted with the blood of patriots.

Was this, then, to be their last recollection of the Volksraad?

DOUGLAS STORY.

Half Crazy With Piles.

Mr. Isaac Fostes, Erie View, Norfolk Co., Ontario, writes:—"I was troubled with itching piles for about two years and could not sleep at nights. In fact I was half crazy from the terrible itching. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment I purchased a box. After the second application I experienced relief and one box cured me thoroughly and permanently, and that was two years ago. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box. All druggists.

TALKS ABOUT THE BOXERS

Dr. F. E. Clark, Founder of Christian Endeavor Society, After His Visit to Pekin, China.

Dr. Francis E. Clark, of Boston, founder of the Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor, has arrived in London, fresh from the scene of conflict in China. The Boxer revolt was on the verge of outbreak when he left Pekin on May 12. In an interview with a correspondent to-night Dr. Clark said:—

"Pekin, Tien Tsin and all Northern China have been one great hotbed of insurrection throughout the spring, although the foreigners have felt that nothing in the shape of a dangerous rebellion was likely to break out inside of six months or a year. The Boxers all along have been indulging in incantations and contortions within the walls of the capital, but their threats of murder and violence were not taken seriously in official circles. Mr. Conger trusted the Chinese and consistently refused to recognize the gravity of the situation. To my mind he dwelt in a fool's paradise, although most solicitous in the protection of American interests.

PRACTICE WITH BOWS AND ARROWS.

"The boxers were in the habit of exercising with bows and arrows and spears and other obsolete weapons, a fact which served to inspire the foreigners with the belief that little was to be feared from them, so that the revelation of their boldness in obtaining a supply of modern armaments was altogether astonishing.

"Early in May a Chinese Christian came from Tung Chow, where he had been tortured by the Boxers, bringing word that they were only awaiting orders from higher authority to rise all over the Empire and exterminate the 'foreign devils.' It is generally believed that these orders were expected to come from the Dowager Empress, who is regarded as hand-in-hand with the anarchists. Her periodical edicts against the Boxers are considered to have been issued for the sole purpose of currying favor with the powers.

LI HUNG CHANG HELD IN CONTEMPT.

"Li Hung Chang is discussed only with expressions of contempt by all classes in China. The old Chinaman is a selfish, unscrupulous demagog, ready to ally himself with the Empress, the Boxers or the foreigners, whichever should promise best to serve him.

"There is not the remotest foundation for the charge that tactlessness of missionaries is responsible for the present crisis. It is simply the culmination of foreign hatred of long growth.

"Germany's occupation of Kiao Chou is one of the most recent aggravations of the anti-foreign frenzy, while the building of the railway from Tien Tsin to Pekin is another provocation. The ignorant natives have been led to believe that a Chinese child lies buried under every tie of the road and that the walls along the route have been poisoned by the foreigners.

PRAISE FOR THE MISSIONARIES.

"The American and European missionaries in the eastern field are an uncommonly heroic, earnest and sensible set of men and women. Mr. Conger, as well as Col. Buck, United States Minister at Tokyo, assured me that their work had been the most powerful influence in the Orient, not only in behalf of civilization, but in behalf of the advancement of China itself.

"The inevitable solution of the pending horror must be the destruction of China as a Government. It is impossible for the dynasty to prevail there now. There is no international force capable of re-establishing law and order. Somehow or other the powers must step in and revolutionize the Empire's governmental machinery."

NOTHING TO CONFIRM THE PEKIN MASSACRE

A Despatch To-day Says Ministers Were Safe on the 9th--Tien Tsin has Fallen Before the Allied Forces.

ALLIES WERE SUCCESSFUL THIS TIME

London, July 17th—The Shanghai correspondent of the Evening News telegraphing under date of July 17 says: The allied troops resumed the attack upon the walled city of Tien Tsin on the morning of July 14th, and succeeded in breaking the walls and capturing the forts. The Chinese were completely routed and the allies took possession of the native city and its defences. The total losses of the allies in the engagement of Thursday, Friday and Saturday were about 300 killed or wounded. The casualties were greatest among the Russians and Japanese.

THE FIGHT ON FRIDAY

Tien Tsin, Friday, July 13—In to-day's combined attack upon the native city 40 guns bombarded the Chinese positions. The fighting was most determined and the Allies losses were heavy. Eight Chinese guns were captured and the Chinese were driven out of the west arsenal after a fierce cannonade. A strong mixed force is now close to the walls and it is expected that an assault will be made to-morrow.

FORTY THOUSAND CHINESE TROOPS

London, July 17—A despatch from Shanghai to the Globe filed today says it is learned that one hundred thousand Chinese troops, armed with Mausers, are encamped in three places within 40 miles of Shanghai. These troops, the despatches say, will be used to besiege Shanghai should the allied troops attack the Wa Sing forts outside Shanghai. The Rowdies here would be ready to aid the beseiged Chinamen.

SAFE ON JULY 9TH

Washington, July 17—The Chinese Minister has just received a cablegram announcing the safety of the Foreign Ministers on July 9th. The despatch came from the Minister at London and is authenticated by Sheng, the Imperial Inspector of posts and telegraphs at Shanghai, and by the Viceroys.

TIEN TSIN CAPTURED

Washington, July 17—Admiral Remey this morning cabled the Navy Department that the city and forts of Tien Tsin are in the hands of the Allies. His despatch states that the total killed and wounded are 775. Russian and Japanese loss heavy. Our total loss 215. About 40 were marines but number believed to be exaggerated.

DESTROYED A MISSION

Washington, July 17—The Secretary of State has received a despatch from Mr. Allen, the American Minister in Corea, saying that the Boxers on Saturday, July 14, destroyed a Catholic Mission three miles from the Corean boundary and 50 miles from the American mines.

ONLY $18 WAS LEFT

To go to the Boers' Orphans and Widows After the Expenses of the Envoys Were Paid.

A scandal has been caused in Washington over alleged misuse of the money subscribed at the Boer mass meeting recently held there. The money was contributed by everyone present under the impression that it was to be sent to the "widows and orphans" of the soldiers of the South African republics. Only $18 so went.

Congressman William Sulzer, defeated candidate for vice presidential honors on the Democratic ticket, was the active chairman of the committee. For two hours he pleaded with his audience to give or subscribe money for the widows and orphans. On the stage were the accredited Boer envoys, and out of sympathy for a people fighting for their independence hundreds gave liberally. Most of the gifts came from pocketbooks that were slenderly supplied, and Chairman Sulzer, who apparently knew everybody seated in front of him, often remarked on the generosity of this subscription or that, and called the person out by name and thanked him or her in behalf of the sufferers in South Africa who were to benefit from this generous contribution.

HOTEL EXPENSES OF ENVOYS.

The Boer delegates were well entertained there, but everyone supposed that they were paying their own bills. The self-appointed committee, of which Mr. Sulzer and Senator Allen were the most conspicuous and certainly the most ubiquitous members, helped to entertain the envoys, and not only went to New York to meet them, but returned with them.

Within the last few days various subscribers in Washington, attracted by the publication given by the chairmen of committees in other cities where funds were contributed, asked for some statement of the manner in which the money was disbursed. All expected that the total amount of the subscriptions would be considerable, and few were disappointed when they learned that it was something over $1,100. The account rendered by the chairman having the relief fund in hand showed that only $18 had been "left over" for the benefit of the widows and orphans in the South African republics.

The list of expenses showed that over $140 had been spent for wine, and almost as much for carriages and hacks and for music and other trifles. Again, much to the disgust of the subscribers, the publication of the account indicated that all the hotel expenses of the accredited representatives of the South African republics, amounting to over $500, had been paid by the relief fund committee.

Various prominent citizens are complaining against the committee, and against Mr. Sulzer in particular, for the manner in which this money was disbursed. No one objected to giving money for the widows and orphans, they are saying, but none cared to contribute to the entertainment of Mr. Sulzer and other "important" members of the self-appointed committee. A leading physician of Washington in a letter to the Washington "Post" closes as follows:

AN UNHEEDED REMONSTRANCE.

"I remonstrated against those expenditures in committee and moved the appointment of a committee on disbursements, but the chairman, Mr. Sulzer, said: 'We do not need any. Capt. O'Farrel will go on and pay bills as they are reported.' The captain did so and the bill amounted to $160 a day. Mr. Sulzer announced to the committee that he was 'ex-officio' chairman of all the committees.

"It seems that the sum of $48 was paid to get the congressional reception committee to New York and back, although it was agreed that they should pay their own expenses, as they certainly ought to have done.

The Captain O'Farrell spoken of was one of the organizers of the relief committee, and is a prominent Boer sympathizer in Washington."—Times Herald.

Honor to Canadians Back From Boer Battlefields.

Seven of the Invalided Soldiers in Toronto on Monday, and Later Went to Their Own Homes, Where They Were Received With Enthusiasm and Marks of Honor—Boers Massing—Kruger Will Not Surrender.

Toronto, July 17.—The first detachment of invalided South African heroes arrived in town yesterday morning, sunburned and hearty-looking, from their tropical campaign. Only one, Pte. Fred Iglestrom of "I" company, Q. O. R., lives here, although Corp. F. Norman Rae, whose home is in Oshawa, has been attending medical school in the city, and is pretty well known. The others who came to Toronto, and left for their homes later in the day were: Pte. J. H. Suttom, 13th Regiment, Hamilton; Pte. J. W. Cartwright, 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines; Pte. Victor T. Mafentette, 21st Fusiliers, Windsor; Pte. George J. Graham, St. Mary's; John R. Ray, Rock Mountain Rangers, Victoria, B. C.

No organized reception was given to the boys on their arrival, partly because few knew they were coming, and the boys themselves, as modest as they are brave, preferred to have no demonstration. Nevertheless a good sized group of their friends were on hand when the C. P. R. train pulled into the depot at V.15 o'clock, and they were given a hearty reception.

Reception at Gerhard Heintzman's.

At 5 o'clock a reception was given Pte. Fred Iglestrom by his employers, at which all the employes were present, and addresses of welcome were given by Gerhard Heintzman to which he suitably responded.

Pte. Graham Welcomed Home.

St. Mary's, Ont., July 17. — Pte. George J. Graham of the first Canadian contingent arrived home yesterday. An immense crowd congregated at the G.T.R. station to greet him on his return. The Cadet Volunteer Corps, headed by the town band, led the procession. At the Town Hall Mayor Lawrie presented him with a very flattering address. The modest young soldier made a brief, but fitting reply.

More Than Cheers For Rae.

Oshawa, Ont., July 17.—A civic reception was tendered Corp. Norman F. Rae, on his arrival home from South Africa last evening. Mr. Rae was met at the station by the Mayor and Council, the clergy of the town, Col. Farewell of the 34th, Capt. Dillon, Capt. King and Major McGillivray of Whitby, No 3 Co., under the captaincy of Capt. Grierson, the Boys' Brigade, under Capt. Hezzlewood; the fire brigade, the town band, and was escorted to his mother's home by them and 5,000 people, who felt a just pride in one of the heroes of Sunnyside. On being presented from the balcony of the house, the boy in khaki received an ovation calculated to wake the dead. Mayor Fowke presided, and read a warmly-worded address of welcome, accompanied by a purse containing $100 in gold. Corporal Rae briefly replied, after which addresses were delivered by Col. Farewell, Revs. Messrs. Talbot, Hodges, Rae, Tovey and Liddy, and by Mr. James Carmichael and Dr. Kaiser.

Welcome to Private Sutton.

Hamilton, July 17.—Pte. Joseph H. Sutton, who went to South Africa with the first Canadian contingent, arrived home last night and was tendered a most enthusiastic reception by the citizens generally. Fully 5,000 people were at the C. P. R. station when the express from Toronto pulled in at 8.25. The people cheered for several minutes. The S. O. E. Band struck up "The British Grenadiers" and headed the procession, which marched to the drill hall, where short speeches of a congratulatory nature were delivered by Henry Carscallen, Q. C., J. B. Buckingham, Robert Evans and others. The officers of the 13th Battalion afterwards entertained Sutton in their mess.

Boers Are Massing Near Pretoria.

New York, July 17.—A Herald despatch from Pretoria, dated July [illegible], says the Boers continue massing from 10 to 20 miles outside the Magaliesburg range, near Pretoria. Their laagers now extend from the Delagoa Bay Railway across the Warsburg line, westward. The enemy's total strength is probably about 10,000 men, with many guns. The inaction of the British main army has given the enemy confidence. The Boer raiders creep closer and do much sniping.

LIFE..

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator :

Name of Company.	Commenced Business.	Canadian Business Written in 1899
North American	1881	$4,884,505
Sun Life	1871	3,996,865
Ontario Mutual	1870	3,965,509
Confederation	1871	3,839,469
Canada Life	1847	3,800,917

The above are the five leading Canadian Companies and although the North American is much the youngest in years, she is outstripping all her rivals in the Canadian field.

Mania for Operations

Among the Doctors. No Need of the Knife to Cure Piles. A Surer, Cheaper Easier Way, Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Dread of the surgeon's knife causes multitudes of people to suffer on year after year with piles, when they could be cured without risk, expense, or danger of an operation by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, the only preparation guaranteed to cure any case of itching, bleeding, or protruding piles.

Rev. J. A. Baldwin, Baptist minister, Arkona, Ont., writes:—"For over twenty years I was a great sufferer from itching and protruding piles. I used many remedies and underwent three very painful surgical operations, all without obtaining any permanent benefit. When about to give up in despair I was told to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and did so, finding relief at once. I used three boxes, and am almost entirely cured. The itching is all gone. I have advised others to use it, believing it would cure them as it has me."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only positive and absolute cure for every form of piles, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, JULY 17, 1900.

THE MOTIVE OF INTEREST.

The Review does not worry over the motive that prompted the Liberal Government to offer Mr. J. J. Foy, Q.C., M.P.P., a judgeship, for if the motive was a political one to get a strong opponent out of the way of the Ross Government it has been defeated. What is seen in the incident, however, that is interesting and encouraging is the motive that caused Mr. Foy to decline the appointment. He remains in political life, where he feels there is work for him to do. He will stand by his leader, Mr. Whitney, and after the next election will assist that gentleman in reforming the system of government that Ontario has had forged about her by the methods of Liberal rulers, who to-day hold power by virtue of the work done in behalf of its candidates by the machine. There is work for Mr. Foy to-day in assisting to overthrow the present corrupt system, and still more work for him to do in inaugurating the new order of things. It is indeed encouraging to see public men remain with the work they have undertaken as Mr. Foy has, and the Province, and the Conservative party especially, will do him honor for the decision he has made.

PRINCIPAL GRANT'S VIEWS.

The Toronto Globe has always shown a great weakness for "interviews" with Rev. Principal Grant, of Queen's, and has given these interviews great prominence, but the Toronto Liberal organ has not seen fit to give Rev. Principal Grant's views on the emergency scandal to its readers. The rev. gentleman, however, has sent them to the Queen's Quarterly, and here they are:—

The moral life of the country suffers from attempts at whitewashing Mr. Lemieux; but what language is too strong to apply to the emergency food scandal?

It was bad enough to send our soldier lads to Kingston in the depth of winter miserably shot; bad enough to keep others at Toronto for weeks without rifle practice, the rifles having been sent on to Halifax; but to give them an emergency food what was no better than pea meal cakes was like giving drowning men sham life preservers.

The offence deserves the penitentiary, as the premier said, but though the offence has been proved, will anyone be sent to prison?

Dr. Devlin has pronounced judgment on himself; but what of those whose duty it was to guard the public and care for the welfare of soldiers who represent Canada?

Gen. Hutton in such cases would probably have been "insubordinate;" and his fate has probably warned others against the crime of over-zeal.

Parliament is closing, and Tarte may come home now.

The Globe is now probably working over time on a special article in behalf of Dr. Borden. It gave Sifton a character in a special plea, and now the other discredited Minister should be treated likewise. It is up to Tarte and Borden.

The prorogation of Parliament will cause a vacancy in the news columns of the newspapers, for under Liberal rule the sessions have been dragged out to such length that one begins to feel that Parliament should be in session all the time.

Hon. David Mills in the Senate said he believed a fraud had been perpetrated on the Militia Department in the matter of supplying the emergency rations for the Canadian soldiers. Now, Hon. Dr. Borden says the Minister of Justice did not know what he was talking about, and he would see his colleague and post him. Probably Hon. Mr. Mills is too honest a man, for most people, all honest, to be muzzled or relieved of such ignorance, people, believe he spoke the truth in regard to that disgraceful scandal.

The Rest of Wisdom.

Some Liberal journalists persist in defending the unmanly report of the Emergency [illegible] committee. Others, more wise, are doing what they can to [illegible] the public in forgetting the whole business.

Johannesburg Foreigners Plotting.

Pretoria, July 16.—Three hundred and eighty foreigners have been arrested at Johannesburg in consequence of the discovery of a plot to create a riot and to join a Boer commando, with which they have been in communication. The foreign consuls have been notified. The suspects will be liberated if their consuls will answer for their good behaviours.

Col. Otter Showed Pluck.

London, July 17.—Members of the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry now in England, having been invalided here from South Africa, but who were present at the engagement near Bloemfontein, in which Col. Otter was wounded, say that their commanding officer, seeing that there was no other way to prevent his men advancing on the enemy's position, which it was impossible to take, rode in front of the regiment in order to get them to halt. Then he was wounded. Pte. Latimer, who was afterwards killed, rushed to Col. Otter's assistance, when the latter cried, "Back, men, you will only draw the fire."

Pte. J. F. McConnell of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, and a member of D Co., says that Mr. Burdett-Coutts, M.P., has good grounds for the statements he has made concerning the hospitals in South Africa.

NOTHING IN THE SCARE.

That Elections Are on Soon—Three Ministers and Their Families Going to Europe.

Ottawa, July 17.—In Conservative circles there is a small-sized scare on in expectation of an early appeal to the country. The fact that has precipitated the scare is that orders hav cipitated the scare is that orders have been issued to the Printing Bureau to push the printing of the voters' lists, even to the exclusion of other matters. But another fact is known that throws water on the scare. As soon as the House rises three Cabinet Ministers will take a trip to England. The three Ministers are Sir Louis Davies, Hon. Mr. Blair and Hon. W. S. Fielding. They will go direct to London, where business in connection with Canadian securities and the Pacific cable will engage their energies. But it is not merely on business bent that the trip will be taken, for each Minister takes his family with him. The whole party will number 15, will be away six weeks and will visit the Paris Exposition.

Sailor Drowned at Wiarton.

Wiarton, Ont., July 17.—J. Cowell, sailor, was drowned here Sunday night while going to his vessel in a small boat. It is supposed he was thrown into the water by the yawl striking against the vessel. The wind then blowing the yawl out of his reach, a line was thrown to him from the deck, but in the darkness he failed to get hold of it. The body was foubd yesterday morning. Cowell was unmarried and hailed from Damon, Mich.

Early this year, however, he lost his wife, and the shock to him was so great that he never recovered from it. A son, Edward, and five daughters survive, the eldest being Mrs. William Algie of Alton.

NO NEWS OF THE MASSACRE

An Apparent Direct Denial That There Was One.

Chinese Massing Around Pekin—More Warships Are Needed at Shanghai to Protect the Vast Supplies Recently Accumulated There—Chinese Have a Conviction that Powers Mean War—Check of Foreign Allies at Tien Tsin May Lead to General Anti-Foreign Rising.

London, July 17.—(3.53 a.m.)—Up to this hour there had been no fourther news of reported massacre at Pekin from any source. In the House of Commons last evening, beyond an admission that there was no ground for hoping that the report was not true, Mr. William St. John Brodrick, Parliamentary Secretary to the Foreign Office, had nothing to communicate. An unusual hush fell on the chamber when the subject came up. A few members doffed their hats, but otherwise there was no demonstration. No question was put to Lord Salisbury in the House of Lords, probably by a preconcerted arrangement, it being considered that at the present stage of affairs it would be only embarrassing to force the Premier to make a statement.

Seriousness Increases.

Telegrams from Shanghai and Che Foo indicate an increasingly serious state of affairs. It is alleged that the foreign consuls at Shanghai have cabled their Governments that there is urgent need of more warships to protect that port, owing to the menacing attitude of the Chinese and the temptation to loot the vast stores of merchandise recently accumulated there. It seems that the Chinese have already threatened to fire the great oil tanks on the Pao Tung side of the city.

May Be a General Anti-Foreign Uprising.

From Che Foo comes the report that the entire adult male population of the three Provinces of Chihli, Shansi and Shantung are massing to defend Pekin, in the conviction that the powers mean war. There is little doubt that a further check of the allies at Tien Tsin would be the signal for a general anti-foreign rising taruout China.

Impossible Before September.

The Japanese officials are still confident of their ability to reach Pekin before the roads become impassable, but the European commanders believe an advance will be impossible before September. Fighting is said to be imminent at New Chwang, where the Boxers are threatening the foreign settlement. The Russians have barricaded the streets and loop-holed the houses of the foreigners. Bank officials have removed their valuables to Port Arthur.

Will Extend to Ching Kiang Fo.

Perhaps the most serious among the many reports from Shanghai is the rumor that since the massacre at Pekin, five Chinese regiments have been ordered south with instructions to make Ching Kiang Fo at the head of the Grand Canal the objective point for the southward extension of the Boxer movement.

The Times says it is taken for granted in diplomatic circles that when the Chinese crisis is settled Great Britain will retain the right to nominate the inspector of customs.

A Report Discredited.

The Government discredits the report that in the relief of the Pekin column Admiral Seymour's wounded were killed by their comrades, in order that they might not be tortured by the Chinese.

Uncle Sam Holds Back.

Washington, July 16.—The decision of the Administration at the end of a most eventful day is that the United States is still not at war with the Government of China.

CONSUL GOODNOW'S CABLE.

A Direct Contradiction of the Pekin Massacre Reports.

Washington, July 16.—Consul-General Goodnow cabled to the State Department from Shanghai, under to-day's date, that there was nothing more to report since his cablegram of the 12th inst. That despatch reported the attack on the legations at Pekin as about to begin. Mr. Goodnow's statement is a direct contradiction of the Shanghai story that all foreign consuls were informed Saturday by Sheng that the legations had fallen and the Ministers had been killed."

War Office Bulletin.

London, July 16.—The War Office to-day issues a despatch from Gen. Dorward, dated Tien Tsin, July 11, which adds little to previous information. The Chinese, according to this despatch, attacked the station on the morning of July 11 and were repulsed after four hours' hard fighting, in which 300 of the enemy were killed. On July 9 Gen. Dorward, commanding a force of 900 Americans, [illegible] British and [illegible] Russians, and 900 Japanese, attacked the Chinese and took their positions southwest of the city, killing 350 and capturing four guns. American and Japanese troops subsequently rushed and took the western arsenal. Gen. Dorward adds that the honors rested with the Americans and Japanese. There were no casualties among the Americans or Russians.

Tuan a Real Devil.

Washington, July 16.—An unofficial report has come to the attention of the Chinese officials here to the effect that 2000 Chinese officials at Pekin petitioned Prince Tuan to protect the foreigners, whereupon Prince Tuan ordered all those who united in the petition to be killed.

Allies Forced to Retreat.

London, July 16.—The Evening News prints a despatch dated at Shanghai today, giving a detailed account of the attack of the allied forces on the native city of Tien Tsin, reported in the despatch to the Associated Press, dated Tien Tsin, July 13.

According to The Evening News' despatch, the allies were repulsed and compelled to retreat, with a loss of more than 100 killed, the British losing 40, and the Japanese 60. The Americans and the Russians also suffered heavily. Among the Americans killed were Col. French of the 25th Infantry and Col. Liscum of the 9th Infantry. A Russian colonel of artillery was also killed.

The despatch says that the Chinamen fought with great desperation, and their marksmanship was accurate and deadly.

THE ALLIES REPULSED.

Driven Back With Heavy Loss From Native City of Tien Tsin.

Washington, July 17.—The Navy Department yesterday received official confirmation from Admiral Remey of the reverse of the allied forces at Tien Tsin on the morning of the 13th. The despatch is dated Che Foo, July 16, and says:

"Reported that allied forces attacked native city morning 13th. Russians right, with 9th Infantry and marines on the left. Losses allied forces large; Russians 100, including artillery colonel; British, over 40; Japanese, 58; Americans, over 30, including Colonel French, 25th Infantry, and Colonel Liscum, 9th Infantry, killed; also Captain Davis, marine corps; Captain Lemly, Lieutenants Butler and Leonard wounded. At 7 evening allied attack on native city was repulsed with great loss. Returns yet incomplete; details not yet confirmed. (Signed) Remey."

Five Thousand Troops Daily.

Montreal, July 17.—It is understood that the C.P.R has intimated to the Admiralty authorities in London that it is prepared to transport 5,000 troops daily from Quebec to Vancouver, if the emergency should arise requiring their presence in China. The accommodation to be provided for the men will be of the best description, and they will be hurried across the continent in Imperial limited time.

Point of View.

The beautiful Griselda deprecated his passionate praise.

"I am but a worm, after all," she sighed, the traditions of her Puritan ancestry being strong upon her.

"But you look nice enough to eat!" protested the youth.

"Oh, you're a bird!" the shy girl faltered, as if to indicate that she deemed his attitude of mind largely a matter of point of view.—Detroit Journal.

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

"Your kindness to me I can never forget," writes Mrs. Josie E. Clark, of [illegible], Shelby Co., Mo. "I had despaired of ever getting well. I had been in bad health for twelve years. Had pains all through me, numb hands, cold feet, and everything I ate distressed me. Was constipated, was very nervous, despondent and discouraged. When I first wrote to you I thought I could never be cured. I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and my health is now good. You have my honest recommendation to all sufferers."

Every Kind of Backache

Yields to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, Because They Act Directly on the Liver as Well as the Kidneys.

Pains in the small of the back, over the kidneys, are usually due to derangements of the kidneys, and disappear when the kidneys are set right.

But there are other kinds of backache, by far the greater proportion, that can never be reached by treating the kidneys. Pains in the shoulders, through the centre of the back, and in the sides are caused by a torpid action of the liver, and can only be driven out when the liver is made healthy and active.

To reach the liver, as well as the kidneys, to set the filtering organs in working order and to cure every kind of backache, there is but one unfailing remedy, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is the only treatment that has this direct and combined action on both liver and kidneys, and the only one that positively and permanently cures backache, whether caused by liver or kidneys.

HAVE STUCK TO THEIR GUNS

Senators Do Not Care a Rap For the Kick of the Commons.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Says That the Case of the Quebec Judges is a Parallel Case to 1879, And That the Late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie Supported Them in Their Contention Then—Proceedings in the Commons.

Ottawa, July 17.—In the Senate yesterday considerable progress was made. The Elections bill, the railway subsidies, and the Railway Act were all reviewed and read a third time and passed.

The amendments to the Elections Act, made by the Senate, are pretty numerous, and will be closely scrutinized by the Commons, though the amendments do not arouse any controversial question.

Those Quebec Judges.

In the afternoon the Senate received a message from the Commons that the Commons refused to concur in the striking out of the clause in the Provincial Judges bill, providing for three new judges in Montreal.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell said that he had at first been in a quandary whether the Senate had done right or not in killing that clause, but, after reading, the discussion in the Commons, and after noting the discourtesy shown the Senate by the Ministers and the rank and file, he felt convinced the Senate had acted right. The action of the Senate was purely a constitutional one, and did not appeal to race prejudices.

A Sore One on Mills.

He paid attention to Mr. Fitzpatrick's statement that the Senate was "the House of rest for the rejected of the people." He illustrated this by noting that Hon. David Mills was the rejected on Bothwell. But he was an honor to any Parliament. Other prominent Senators were picked out to show how uncalled for were Mr. Fitzpatrick's words. He scoffed at the idea that the Senate wished to break the autonomy of Quebec, and declared the Senate were just as capable of judging what was fit for Quebec as was Mr. Fitzpatrick.

The Premier's Position.

He declared that the Premier's appeal to race prejudices was in keeping with the Premier's past actions, Sir Mackenzie said, "I am sick of these accursed appeals. I had hoped Anglo-Saxon and French would live happily without them." He referred to the vote in 1879 to increase the salaries of judges in British Columbia. This had been thrown out by the Senate, numerous Liberals voting for the six months' hoist, and Sir Alexander Mackenzie remarking that the Senate was not bound to fill judgeships immedaitely, because the Local Government erected the positions. The situation to-day was parallel to the situation in 1879. Sir Mackenzie Bowell said that if it was found the rural judges in Quebec could not do the work, then, perhaps, the bill to appoint three extra ones might receive better treatment next year.

The Vote 17 to 16.

Sir Mackenzie moved that the action of the Commons be not concurred in.

After a speech by Senator Kerr upon the question of Provincial rights and a constitutional address by Hon. D. Mills, a vote was taken on Sir Mackenzie's motion.

The motion was carried by a vote of 17 to 16.

Another Throw-Down.

On a vote the sequestration clause of Mr. Blair's Railway bill was thrown out. The vote was 17 to 13.

The Senate adjourned last night at 12. It was the latest session in two years.

THE COMMONS.

Considerable Cleaning-Up Business Done in the Popular Chamber.

Ottawa, July 17.—In the House yesterday morning a request was made that the French translators be given an extra allowance of $500.

Dr. Sproule was heartily in sympathy with increasing the indemnity of both translators and members of the House.

Mr. McMullen said he would not vote $500 into his own pocket, but said that the Government leader was not adequately paid when he got only $9,000 a year.

Several members strongly pressed the absolute need of increased indemnity.

Indemnity Should Be Increased.

The Prime Minister said, concerning the translators, that as a rule proposals from committees should be accepted. It was his opinion that the sessional indemnity of members should be increased. But he did not think that an extra indemnity should be made. Rather there should be a general law.

"If I have anything to do with this at a future period," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "I would suggest that the sessional indemnity should be increased to $1,200 or $1,500 or $1,800, not to be increased or decreased under any consideration. This may tend to make speeches short."

On motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier the debate was adjourned.

Troops For China.

Mr. Bourassa (Labelle) alluded to a newspaper article in favor of sending troops to China and asked whether this would be done without consultation with Parliament.

Sir Wilfrid said that the Government did not intend presenting any new legislation this session, and therefore no one need anticipate anything in the budget to cover any expenditure connected with the war in China.

"We do not intend to have any war or to send any contingents to take part in any way in the Chinese war, but should the occasion arise, which I hope there will not, because it is not to be supposed that all the allied powers of Europe will not be able to handle that business without our assistance, but should by any possibility any such occasion arise, and a feeling in behalf of our giving assistance arise in the country that would call for action, the Government, if Parliament were not in session when it would have the opportunity to pronounce on that question, would consider it its duty to call Parliament in order to discuss the advisability of our taking any action."

Same Treatment as Imperial Troops.

The Minister of Militia said that Canadian troops who have served in South Africa, as regards pensions, would be treated in the same way as Imperial troops. The Government has not yet considered, he added, whether anything was to be added to this by Canada.

Nice Treatment, This.

In answer to several members, Dr. Borden said that the wives of the men of the contingent killed or disabled in South Africa were being temporarily looked after by the Patriotic Fund. The Government is taking no special action except that already taken, giving allowance to wives and children. When a man was killed the allowance to his wife and family ceased,

House in Supply.

After a discussion on certain phases of prohibition and railway subsidies, the House got into supply at 1 o'clock.

Asked concerning the $20,000 to the Election Commission Sir Wilfrid said that the assistants to the counsel would be chosen by the commission itself.

Speaker Bain informed the House that the stationery for the Commons cost $15,300.

Many members objected to the quality of the stationery, and declared it was a disgrace to Canada.

Sir Wilfrid nodded his acquiescence.

A member of the Printing Committee defended that body by saying that it was intended to buy stationery next year equal to the Senate stationery. This was satisfactory.

A general condemnation of the franchise policy of the Government was entered into by the Opposition. Already $40,000 had been spent in printing the Provincial lists; yet the members have not got their statutory 20 copies each.

The item of $25,000 for the Glasgow Exhibition caused Mr. Fisher to state that the Canadian exhibit now in Paris would be utilized for the Glasgow Fair. The space to be taken by Canada was only 8,000 square feet, compared with 30,000 square feet at Paris.

The Census.

The census item is $100,000. Before it was passed, Mr. LaRivere asked the Government to see that more details regarding the origin of the population were obtained.

Mr. Fisher said he would look into it. He declared the census would be taken on the de jure system. He had no intention to depart from the customary day of holding the census, viz., April 5, 1901.

The item of $10,000 for the Paris Exhibition led to the statement that already this function had cost Canada $285,000. Mr. Fisher explained that the building itself cost $115,000. The bill for it had not yet been paid, and it was doubtful if it would be, in full.

In answer to a question, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "If Mr. Tarte comes back he will stay back."

Mr. Fisher said that he would be rejoiced to succeed Mr. Tarte.

An item of $20,000 for public health passed. This was due to the outbreak of smallpox. About 20 officers were employed along the border to inspect incoming travellers.

Mr. Sifton declared that no aid or inducement was being given Roumanain Jews to settle in Canada.

The Committee arose at 6 o'clock.

After recess $8,000 was passed for monuments for battlefields. Stony Creek will get a $1,000 monument.

It was agreed to pay a dozen civil servants extra money for services rendered in connection with the South African contingents. They will be paid out of the $2,000,000 set aside for the contingents.

The sum of $850,000 was passed to pay the 1,000 Canadians making up the Halifax garrison. This is the cost for a year. Each man costs 13 8-10 cents a day.

The railway estimates were gone through.

When the fisheries estimates were opened Sir Louis Davies announced that Great Britain had, within the past week, obtained from Russia a recognition of Canada's claim in regard to seizures of sealing vessels by Russian cruisers in the north Pacific in 1892.

An item of $8,000 for law costs was passed.

The bill to make the salary of the senior judge of the Circuit Court of Montreal $3,600, was passed through committee and read a third time.

Mr. Blair's railway bill from the Senate, with the sequestration clause cut out, was concurred in by the committee.

The House adjourned at 1 a.m.

A Cheering Crop Report.

Winnipeg, July 17.—The Northern Pacific crop report, received yesterday, is more favorable than ever. The weather could not have been better for growing crops than it has been in all parts during the past fortnight, and now the yields of wheat are estimated at from 18 bushels an acre to half a crop.

Miss Flora Henderson, a maiden lady, about 45 years of age, cut her throat with a knife, and died. She was despondent.

Si Lamb of Minnedosa was drowned in the Red River last night in three feet of water. He leaves a wife and three childten.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning; months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

TO YOUNG MEN

Their Duty to Take a Practical Interest in Politics.

Mr. Henry Carscallen, Q.C., M.P.P., in the Toronto News says this to young men:—

"It is the duty of young men to take a practical interest in politics. Look about you and observe what the young men are doing. In every calling of life the young man is making his mark, is winning grand success. In the church, at the bar, at the head of a great commercial or manufacturing enterprise, as inventors, artists, teachers and doctors, the young man is found doing his share towards pushing the old world along. Why, then, should the young man remain aloof from politics? Why should he not give his vigorous young mind to the great work of improving the condition of his fellows through the medium of the political party which is necessary to the forms of government adopted by all enlightened nations?

"I do not propose that the old men should be retired from active political life. These should remain as the experienced advisers of the young men, tempering the rash ardor which sometimes carries the young man too far, and being, in turn, influenced to modern ways by the up-to-date ideas of the progressive young man.

"The young man should take the burden of the work of the party. Being active and ambitious, he is able to stand, even thrive upon, work which would be a sad worry to one who has passed the half-century notch in life.

"Canada is now old enough to be able to have some politics of her own, and the young Canadian who desires to see his country prosper and progress should carefully study every political question that presents itself, whether it be a sweeping measure of reform or a minor matter of every public question, and having once decided upon his own action, he should lend his aid in endeavoring to shape the opinions of others, and point them in the right direction, that good to the country might result.

"There is room in Canada now for much work in the direction of purifying the political atmosphere. Above all things the young man entering into politics should insist upon political cleanliness in his party. Unfortunately for Canada, some very crooked work has been done in the conduct of election campaigns. An effort is being made to stamp out this evil, and if the young men of the country will but lend their aid, in a few years Canadian elections will be free from fraud and corruption, and that will be no short step in the direction of Canadian greatness.

"If he so chooses, the young Canadian can be a power for good in this goodly land. He can assist his party in making preparations for elections. He can do work for the sake of his party and his country, for which work it has become the custom to pay money—a practice which has led to many irregularities. He can assist in the establishment and carrying on of his political club, making endeavor to improve the minds of his fellow members that they may work and vote more intelligently. He can put an enthusiasm and vim into campaign work which is impossible to elderly men, and which makes much for the success of his party.

"Having all the opportunities, it is the bounden duty of the young man to take a practical interest in politics, for his own good, for the good of his own party, and for the good of his country. I strongly advise young Canadians to make themselves familiar with the political questions of the day; to take upon themselves a portion of the burdens of their fathers, and to do what they can to hasten the progress and shape the destiny of our glorious country."

The Same Reason.

(Montreal Gazette.)

The West Elgin commission, which was nominated by "the machine's" bosses, to investigate "the machine's" work, finds that half a dozen deputy returning officers were improperly appointed, some under fictitious names, and that Pritchett was among them. But it does not think that through these irregularities and frauds anything was done to actually affect the result of the election. There will be as large a proportion of dissentients from this view as there was from that of the partizans who drew up the Devlin-Borden emergency ration report, and for the same reason.

AT STONY LAKE

Service on Sunday by Rev. Prof. Huntingford.

Service was held at the Stony Lake pavilion on Sunday at eleven o'clock, conducted by Rev. Prof. Huntingford, of Trinity College, Toronto. The preacher took for his text "Woe is Me if I Preach Not the Gospel," on which he founded an excellent discourse. The day was fine and there was a large gathering for the service.

DIED IN DENVER

Death of Mrs. W. C. Dixon in Denver, Col.

Peterborough friends will extend the deepest sympathy to Mr. W. C. Dixon, formerly of town, upon the loss he has sustained by the death of his wife. The sad event is announced in the Belleville papers. The Belleville Sun says:—

"The sad news was received to-day of the death in Denver, Colorado, of Mrs. Mary Dixon, wife of Mr. Wm. C. Dixon, and daughter of Mr. J. T. Burns, instructor of printing at the Deaf and Dumb Institution. The deceased was well known here and was married last year and removed with her husband to live in Colorado. She was a most amiable young woman who had many friends. In church circles she was active and she was very prominent in Epworth League work in connection with Bridge-st. church. Her husband and a three weeks' old daughter survive her. Mr. Burns and his family and the bereaved husband have the heartfelt sympathy of all in their affliction."

The Old Reliable, for the Civic Holiday.

Rain or shine there is one outing that is an annual affair and which may be relied on as coming off on its date, the annual excursion of Court Littlejohn Foresters to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. For thirteen years this has been an annual event, and one that is now generally recognized as the banner trip of the year. Last night the committee met and closed up arrangements, and the public may now decide to go and arrange accordingly. Full particulars will be announced in ample time, and the rate is this year lower to Niagara Falls than ever before, being only [illegible] for the round trip, while the Toronto rate is very advantageous. Don't forget the date, and arrange to take it in.

Belleville's Snake Story.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"On Saturday a lady residing on North Front-st. purchased upon the market a chicken, intending to have the same for Sunday dinner. During the afternoon she was engaged in cleaning it and made a discovery which she will not soon forget. The crop had not been removed from the fowl and the lady in question in removing it was horrified to extract a live snake about six inches in length. The reptile appeared to enjoy its freedom very much and was exceedingly lively, but its life was of short duration. Needless to say, the chicken was not further prepared for the mid-day meal."

Brevities

—There was no session of the Police Court this morning.

—An umbrella and a lady's glove, picked up on the street yesterday, await their owners at the police station.

—A big excursion went through to-day to Lakefield from Omemee. It was a combination affair of three churches of Omemee.

—The annual excursion of the Matthews Co.'s employees is being held down the river per steamer Eclipse to-day. The Charlotte-st. Sunday school picnic is being held to Stony Lake.

—Thomas Carroll, of Emily, four miles north of Omemee, had his barns and outbuildings totally destroyed by fire yesterday evening. A fire had just been lit in the kitchen stove, and a strong wind blowing carried sparks to the straw stacks. Loss over $1,800; insurance $300.

GOLF.

There will now be a fine, comfortable and very distinguished chair at the Golf Club houser that will be known as the McHarrie chair, or probably it should be called the Garvin chair, but as it will be present at the club house at Mr. McHarrie's expense he probably will have the best claim on it. It reached the club house in this way: Mr. McHarrie made a match with Mr. Garvin for Mr. Napier, and if Mr. Garvin was defeated in the test he was to present the club house with a chair, and if Mr. Napier was the loser Mr. McHarrie offered to make the gift of the chair, Mr. Napier being Mr. McHarrie's choice from the club, outside of the scratch man, to try conclusions with Mr. Garvin. The match was played yesterday, being 18 holes. At the end of the twelfth hole, Mr. Napier threw up the play, when Mr. Garvin was 8 up, with six holes to play. Hence it is, that the McHarrie chair will grace the club house, and Mr. Garvin wears the smile of satisfaction at the successful manner in which he met Mr. McHarrie's choice.

The following is taken from the column for Sports and Sportsmen in the New York Daily Tribune, of recent date, and has been sent to the Review for publication. It reveals the strong tendency towards the better observance of the Lord's day on the part of players of golf across the line:—

"The matter is now receiving legal attention and pulpit recognition in a number of the States. The New Homewood Country Club, of Chicago, has caused a fresh outburst in the last week by announcing that the club house and grounds will be closed to the playing of golf and other games on Sunday. The fact that the club has recently purchased additional land at a cost of $25,000 and will probably become one of the most influential organizations in the west is perhaps one reason why its action has received such wide attention.

"It looks as though a reaction were setting in in favor of a more quiet Sunday. Several leases contracted recently contain stipulations regarding Sunday play. One especially noticeable one was refused renewing a few days ago unless it was specially provided that there should be no playing on that day.

"There is no doubt that golf has led to a more open Sabbath than before the game became popular. It was the Rev. Dr. Rainsford, an ardent golfer, who said in a recent church report that golf and the bicycle were leading to a looser conception of the Sabbath by the young people of America. The enforcement of the law in Massachusetts against Sunday sports has led the fashionable Brookline Country Club to post a notice in its club house calling attention to the fact that members who play golf on Sunday do so on their own responsibility.

"In New Haven a crusade has been in progress all winter against the use of the Whitneyville links on Sunday, and it is said that the officials of the golf club have agreed to a practical cessation of their matches on that day.

"Not only has the Homewood Country Club decided against Sunday golf, but it has passed a by-law forbidding the sale or use of intoxicating liquors in the club buildings or upon the grounds. In this state most of the clubs which have confined their liquid refreshment to 'soft stuff,' have no doubt been largely influenced by the high fees demanded for a club license, yet in a number of them the members have their lockers well stocked with liquors, and the result is practically the same. While there is likely to be no temperance crusade against golfers, the indications point strongly to a more rigid observance of Sunday than was the case last season."

Nicholas II is a voracious reader. He and the czarina get a great deal of pleasure from discussing new works together. Gossip has it that pretty Queen Wilhelmina is by no means free from girlish feelings. Formerly she was too strictly controlled to be able to indulge her natural curiosity in her neighbors, but now she has a keen delight in hearing from her ladies in waiting all sorts of petty details of the lives and affairs of her courtiers and subjects.

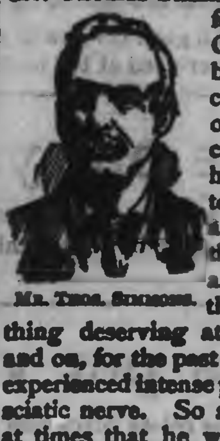
Could not Pull the Throttle



MR. THOS. SIMMONS.

When a reliable gentleman like Mr. Thomas Simmons, of Chaffey's Locks, Ont., steamboat engineer, comes forward on his own account and adds his testimony to the value of a medical cure, the public has assurance that there is something deserving attention. Off and on, for the past two years, he experienced intense pain down the sciatic nerve. So severe was it at times that he was unable to handle the throttle of the engine, and would be obliged to lay off for days. "Before the first bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure had been drained," said Mr. Simmons, "I could feel the beneficial effects; and by the time I had used four I was completely cured. Since last spring I have been entirely free from pain. Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure did it."

Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is put up in 50 cent bottles, containing ten days' treatment. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine. The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

CHAPTER V.

DARRENT MAKES AN ARREST.

If Herbert Darrent possessed one fault more than another, it was that of being a little too self confident.

In the profession that he had chosen to adopt and of which he was decidedly proud he had been phenomenally successful, partly owing to his own perceptive faculties and partly, he owned it himself, to good luck.

Although he was always ready to regard his clews from different points of view and test them well before he took decisive action, those cases that he had woven out of a single thread in the past had always proved his deductions to be so correct and well founded that, being still a young man, he was sometimes inclined to be led away by ideas of his own infallibility. He was invariably cautious, uniformly prudent and generally right.

What a comfortable feeling for a man until one day the awakening comes, and comes a little rudely!

In order that Policeman Thompson should gain no real inkling of the direction in which his thoughts were tending, he had that morning proved to him conclusively that the murderer could be none other than Astray Marsden and then, just as clearly a few minutes later, that he very probably was not, and now he smiled a quiet smile of amused self satisfaction at the perplexity into which he had thrown that worthy officer of the law. It was a harmless conceit, a little joke of Darrent's own, that he had frequently indulged in to the amazement of many whom he had chanced to meet—the building up of the most damning evidence from the very slenderest of clews and then, presto, the demolition of the whole thing, the crumbling away of the entire fabric as he placed a different interpretation upon each piece of evidence, and the whole thing faded into less than nothing!

A harmless sport enough this in itself, but a dangerous game when the stake was life or death.

The detective, comfortably ensconced in a seat of the train for Chicago, was reading over the notes that he had made in regard to the case and now and again glancing at one or other of the relics of the murder as he wished to confirm a point, whistling through his teeth the while a chorus from the latest comic opera.

It was not that Herbert Darrent was in himself callous of death or of murder, but when one's daily life is given to the constant handling of relics of crime they cease to be objects of awe, lose their gruesome associations and simply become clews that shall assist the chase.

The stained knife with which the deed was committed would doubtless freeze the blood of any favored visitor when it was added to a detective bureau's collection of criminal weapons, but to Darrent it formed only one important item in the complicated puzzle that he was putting together. He put it together piece by piece. It seemed to him to fit too easily. Everything pointed too much in one direction. What to an ordinarily constituted mind would have looked so exceedingly simple became to Darrent all the more difficult because of that very simplicity.

Every bit of evidence that he had collected pointed directly to Astray Marsden as the murderer. There was no getting away from it, for already the knife had been recognized. Astray was condemned by every circumstance and, more strongly than all, by the letter of the murdered man, the stained and crumpled letter that Dobson had tried to conceal.

Darrent could hardly keep from half wishing that old Marsden had not left the paper. He felt a little annoyed that what promised to be a big mystery, upon which he could exercise his talents, should turn out to be none and that he, the American Lecoq, should be sent down to discover the murderer, to trace him inch by inch, when a casual acquaintance on the ice had told him at once who had done the deed and a dunder headed fraud of a policeman had tried to conceal the actual paper that accused the murderer.

To a clever detective who had hoped for a tangled skein to unravel, which would add yet another laurel to the many which he wore, it was annoying, and when Darrent arrived in Chicago and took a cab to headquarters he was not in the very best frame of mind and really regarded himself as a little ill used.

At 10 o'clock next morning Darrent alighted from a hansom at a corner near the Royal hotel, and as he started to cross the street a tall bootblack accosted him.

"Shine, boss?"

The detective halted and slowly took off his glove.

"It's all right," the bootblack rapidly continued in an undertone. "He's still there. Theater last night; not out since." And he accepted with becoming humility the coin which Darrent dropped, at a respectful distance, into a very dirty palm.

"Send my card up to Mr. Marsden," was Darrent's instruction to the clerk at the Royal hotel, "and say that I must see him at once on important African business."

Astray Marsden, who sat idling over his breakfast and skimming the morning paper, glanced at the card which the smart page boy brought him and listened to the message. " 'The Honorable Rupert Grey.' Hum! Don't know the name, and I'm not used to calls from honorables, especially in this country. Very well; show the gentleman up."

"The Honorable Rupert Grey," he repeated. "Well, it doesn't matter, after all. I suppose I shall soon learn his business; bought a claim out there, perhaps. But how in the world does he know me or that I'm staying here?"

Rising from the table, he stood by the fire, with his elbow on the mantelpiece and his chin resting in his hand, awaiting the arrival of his visitor.

Astray Marsden was a fine, well built and tolerably good looking, half Americanised young Englishman, with the figure of a Hercules, but Dame Nature, in one of the many tricks she is so fond of playing upon her children, had given him an utterly weak disposition, which was betrayed by a glance at his face—a form of strength, a mind of weakness; a good fellow, but no backbone; ever ready to procrastinate, never ready to act. He was a man people would turn and look back on in the streets, as he towered above the passersby. The embodiment of strength without, they could not know how weak and vacillating he was within. He was simply the outcome of one of nature's little humors that prevent monotony in the human race.

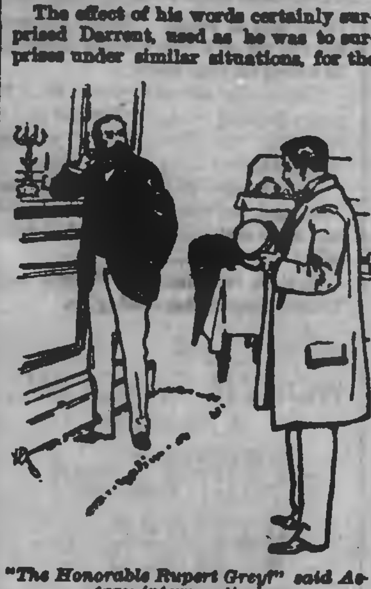
Herbert Darrent could scarcely repress a start as he entered the room. Astray Marsden was as he had himself described, as he had pictured him to the life even to the position in which he stood, the very position that the detective had conjured up as he stood in the library at The Grange.

It was only another proof of the wonderful accuracy of his deductions. It really seemed that the man had posed to complete the case which the detective from such tiny clews had woven so skillfully around him.

"The Honorable Rupert Grey?" said Astray interrogatively.

Darrent shrugged his shoulders and, taking the card from Astray's hand, quietly tossed it behind the fire as he replied: "Herbert Darrent of the Chicago detective bureau. One is obliged to use an alias sometimes. The enemies of the force usually do, so we're level on that."

The effect of his words certainly surprised Darrent, used as he was to surprises under similar situations, for the man seemed to utterly collapse before his eyes and fell back into a chair by the fireside, the very picture of abject terror and despair.



"The Honorable Rupert Grey?" said Astray interrogatively.

"Herbert Darrent, the detective?" Astray gasped.

Darrent nodded his head.

"You have come to arrest me?"

Again the detective nodded. He felt a bit perplexed. This was different from any of his previous captures, where the criminal had either lied or shown fight and attempted to escape.

"For the murder of my guardian, Josiah Marsden, eh?" Astray continued, his tongue wetting his parched lips.

"Yes, for the murder of Josiah Marsden on Jan. 12 at his country home, which he called The Grange, Norcombe, and I warn you"—

"I know what you warn me," the other gasped—"that whatever I may say may be taken down and used in evidence against me. Then use it. I am innocent. I swear it. I've been here, and now the worst has happened, and I shall be hanged—hanged because I can't clear myself, like many another poor wretch has been because fate was against him. Yes, I shall be hanged because a man in his hatred of me condemned me to death and then went with the devil's own sin upon his soul to face eternity. He hated me. He always hated me. When I left him that night, he cursed me, and as he died he conceived the vilest, most villainous lie."

"You had better tell this to your counsel."

"I want no counsel. The rope is round my neck already." He put his finger up and loosened his collar, as though he already felt the clinging grip of the hemp. "I can't escape when he himself condemned me."

"Shall I order a cab?"

"Why order a cab? Why not handcuff me and drag me through the streets of Chicago? Let the world see an innocent man who will be done to death to satisfy the law, the bloodhounds of the law, who yelp for vengeance, who must hang some one, because public sentiment shrieks for a victim."

Darrent shrugged his shoulders. He was beginning to feel more at home now that Astray had launched out into this tirade. He had been called a bloodhound so often by criminals he had traced and captured that it sounded almost like a confession of guilt.

"You're not condemned yet," he coldly answered. "You're only arrested on suspicion. If you can prove an alibi"—

"I can't! You know I can't."

"I know nothing of the kind."

"Look here, I'll tell you all."

"I strongly advise you, for your own sake, to wait until you're calmer," Darrent observed, pausing in the work of jotting down in a very prosaic way Astray's rambling statements.

"I mean to tell you all that happened that night, and you can do what you choose with it and bring me to the scaffold if you like."

"My dear sir, you are talking wildly. The law has no desire to bring you to the scaffold if you're innocent."

"I swear I am!"

"Then, if you are and can put me on the track of the guilty party, so much the better," Darrent replied, seating himself and preparing to listen to the weak story of defense, which he was sure would only be like many others that he had so often heard.

"On the night of the 10th of January, just a week ago, I returned to Chicago from South Africa."

"And traveled to Barnstaple by the 8 o'clock train next day," Darrent interjected.

"Yes; I hadn't seen my guardian for two years. When I left him in 1894, it was after a serious quarrel. He wanted me to marry one girl, and I wouldn't because I loved another," Astray continued, with a stronger look in his face than he had worn throughout the interview.

"Well?"

"I returned to The Grange, and he welcomed me."

"You entered the library and stood on the left hand side of the fireplace, as you were standing when I came into the room, with your elbow resting on the mantelpiece," Darrent continued, "and then you quarreled about the lady again. Your uncle asked you if you had outgrown your mad infatuation, and you answered 'No.' Then he asked, 'Will you marry the wife I have chosen for you?' and you said, 'No, no, no!' and emphasized each word by a blow of your fist on the mantelshelf?"

Astray glared at Darrent in astonishment. "How do you know?" he asked.

"Because I'm a bloodhound of the law," Darrent replied, sneering in his excitement. "Then you both got more and more heated in the discussion, and at last the old man, overwrought with excitement, became faint and asked you to reach him some brandy from the sideboard, and you did so."

"Yes; that's right."

"Presently he grew calmer, and you settled down and talked of other things."

"Yes, of my travels."

"He became interested and asked you to tell him more. You drew up your chair opposite him and lighted your pipe, meerschaum."

"Yes."

"It wouldn't draw. You took out your knife and cleared the dry, hard tobacco away from the bottom of the bowl, refilled it and tried again, but the stem was choked. Old Marsden offered you a cigar. You got out a box, a fresh and unopened box, from the sideboard, and pried it open with your knife, a Norwegian knife—this one." And Darrent suddenly displayed the knife, with the letter "A" burned into it, before Astray's eyes.

"Yes; it's true. That's it."

"I know it's true. I know this is the knife and that this knife killed old Marsden."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Reaction.

"Wat's de matter wit you?" asked Sauntering Sim. "You look like you had something preyin on your mind."

"I have," responded Tired Treadwell. "I done something today dat'll haunt me to me grave. I got so blamed hungry dat I done nearly half an hour's hard work for me dinner! Now I'll have to go through life hand in hand with a weight of remorse."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Whole Thing.

Cholly—You should have seen me in me new golf togs this afternoon. Bah Jove, if I do say it myself, I looked out of sight.

Miss Peppery—I suppose you looked the whole part.

Cholly—Ah, how d'you mean, "the whole part?"

Miss Peppery—"Out of sight, out of mind."—Philadelphia Press.

Memory.

"I suppose you find a good memory of great assistance in your work?"

"No, sir," said Senator Sorghum. "Remembering is all well enough in its way, but a good forgetter, who can change his opinions on short notice and not worry over promises is the man who gets on best in my part of the state."—Washington Star.

Not an Archer.

"Why don't you ever bring your bow and arrow with you, Mr. Gazzam?" asked Benny Bloombumper.

"My bow and arrow, Benny?" repeated Mr. Gazzam. "I'm no archer."

"But papa says you often draw the long bow. Won't you show it to me?"—Detroit Free Press.

One Who Thrives.

"The strike must be making all kinds of business dull," ventured the street car passenger with the valise.

The passenger sitting next to him shrugged his shoulders and discreetly said nothing.

He was a pawnbroker.—Chicago Tribune.

There Are Others.

Briggs—I see a Wisconsin court has granted an injunction against a young man whose friends don't want him to get married.

Enpeck—I wish to heaven my friends had been so thoughtful!—Cleveland

JUDGE HOKE'S COURT

AN IMPORTANT DECISION HANDED DOWN AT SANDY BEND.

Peg Davis Had Announced He Wanted Justice, and He Got It, but Not Exactly the Kind of Justice For Which He Hankered.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

"Hear ye! Hear ye!" shouted Judge Hoke of Sandy Bend as he rapped on his desk for order. "And while ye are hearin ye might ask yerselves if this is the twentieth century or if we hev not dropped back about 400 years. This court, not only as a court, but as Jim Hoke, owner of the leadin poker palace of Sandy Bend, has bin flimflammed, flipflopped and stood on his head, and as a consequence he ain't nowise sure whether he's afloat or a-horseback.

"I'm askin this audience who and what is a Chinnyman? Yer answer is that he's a squint eyed heathen from over the sea. He don't purtend to be no man. He's a sort of a varmint who's come over yere to work fur nuthin and board hisself. He hain't got sand 'nuff to squar' up a hoss fly. He expects to lay down whenever a white man yells at him, and the sight of a gun makes him shiver from head to heels. That's a Chinnyman as we all know him and as Peg Davis knows him, and if this yere court can't sit still in his cheer nor keep the tears out of his eyes it's all on account of the way his feelin's hev bin harrowed up.

"A week ago Peg Davis comes down from the O. K. mine. He has $6 in his pocket and a shirt on his back, but his toes stick out of both his boots. Like some high and mighty prince, he goes up to Wing Lee's cobbler shop and says:

" 'Hey, ye, John, fixee these holes and don't rub any polish off.'

"He didn't ask the price of the cobblin. He pulls off his boots and leaves 'em thar and then goes swaggerin around with his hat on his ear and steppin high. Of course he got drunk. I ain't sayin he shouldn't hev, but out of them $6 he orter hev saved 'nuff to pay fur the cobblin. He didn't, however. When he got sober, he remembers the boots, and he goes up to Wing Lee and begins to whine around that he's an unfortunate critter and the world's ag'in him. He wants to git the boots out on tick; he humbles hisself; he wigwags around like a dog coaxin fur a bone. What was the result? That Chinnyman grabs him by the neck and runs him out, and the disgrace won't be wiped off the American nation fur a hundred y'ars to come. If this yere court is yellin at the top of his voice and poundin on the table with both fists, it's bekase he feels the iron in his soul.

"Yes; Peg Davis is run out by the neck. Does he go off and borry a gun and come back and uphold the escutcheon of freedom, so to say? Nary a bit! Does he lift up the weepins that natur' has given him and wipe out the dishonor of a nation? Durn my buttons, but he don't! He comes sneakin down to my poker palace, which, I may say, is the only one in town runnin a squar' game, and thar was tears in his eyes as he says:

" 'Jedge, I'm beggin fur jestice.'

" 'What sort of jestice?' says I.

" 'Solid jestice. Wing Lee has got my two boots and won't gin 'em up.'

" 'Hev ye pulled a gun on him?' says I.

" 'Two of 'em,' says he, 'but he's hidin behind bar'ls and can't be routed out.'

"Peg didn't talk like a liar, and I issued a warrant in the interest of jestice. It was only an hour ago that I learned the real facts in the case. I was calkerlatin to gin that Wing Lee sich a dose of law that he'd take off his hat to a white man fur the rest of his life, but that idea is all busted. Jestice is fur all, whether it's the president of the United States or a squint eyed heathen. Peg Davis, stand up. Ye wanted jestice, didn't ye?

" 'I wanted my boots,' replies Peg.

" 'But ye didn't git 'em. A man as can't git his boots from a Chinnyman, pay or no pay, is no man at all. Ye not only didn't git yer boots, but ye let the heathen bluff ye. Ye are a jack rabbit of a feller, and the contempt of this court fur sich a critter is beyond tellin. As ye are dead broke and can't pay no costs and as Sandy Bend has no jail I'm sentencin ye to be booted out of town. Don't say nuthin back to me. Jest keep mighty quiet and prepar' to be kicked.' Wing Lee, arise. As Jim Hoke I hain't got no use fur a Chinnyman, but as a court I'm bound to see fa'r play. Ye mendee bootee fur Melican man?

" 'Yes; mendee allee nice, but he no payee me.'

" 'And ye laid hands on him.'

" 'Yes; I chuckee him.'

" 'And he didn't fight back?'

" 'He no fightee me.'

"That's it—that's the sort of a critter he is. However, a Chinnyman is entitled to his pay the same as any one else, and ye keep the boots until ye git yer money. Ye may go, and, as fur Peg Davis, I want him to lay it to heart that if he's ever found in Sandy Bend ag'in this court will encourage another kickin. If I'm yellin and poundin on the table ag'in, it ain't bekase I don't feel the dignity of this court, but bekase the spectacle of a freeborn American bein chucked out of a cobbler shop of a heathen is dancin before my eyes and raisin the ha'r on my back. The constable will now take Peg Davis up the trail and head him fur the O. K. mine, and when he swings his foot ag'in he wants to remember George Washington, the constitution of the United States and the battle of Bunker Hill." M. QUAD.

A Wonderful Event.

"That must have been a most wonderful event!" exclaimed Mr. Snaggs to his wife.

"What?"

"That whist tournament."

"What was wonderful about it?"

"Eighty-four women all together—and in perfect silence."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

TAKING THE REINS.

Blondie, 2:13½, recently trotted a quarter in his work at Dallas in 30¾ seconds.

George W. Norton's pacing mare Sally Hook is entered in $20,000 worth of early closing purses.

Penhorn, 2:24, owned by W. M. Reeves, Anna, O., has gone to pacing and is very fast at the gait.

Tom Keating worked Anaconda a half at Cleveland recently in 1:02, with the last eighth in 14½ seconds.

Athanio, 2:10, the Austrian horse, is considered better than ever and the best horse now in training in Europe.

Palo Alto farm will start Exioneer, the 3-year-old son of Boodle, 2:12½, and Expressive (3), 2:12½, in a few races in California this fall.

Carlyle Carne, 2:11½, the gray trotter from Oregon, has won the title of "king of the speedway" in New York by defeating the great gelding Cobwebs, 2:12.

The Airship, 2:11¼, is doing well for H. Y. Hawes at Johnstown, Pa. He recently stepped the half mile track in 2:22½, 2:20¼ and 2:22¼, and a last quarter in 33 seconds.

Bonnatella, the Austrian mare, is regarded as undoubtedly the best of the newer importations. She is improving readily, and her record now stands at 1:25 for the kilometer—about a 2:16 rate.

Giles Noyes, 2:05¼, the pacer that last year showed such unexpectedly good form for George West, Chicago's capable trainer, is going so well that a mark of 2:03 is predicted for him this coming season.

Tod Sloane, the American jockey, sustained a painful injury in the paddock in the race at Paris the other day. The ligaments of his side were so badly wrenched that his body had to be tightly bandaged. He was game, however, and rode the race.

All About a Signature.

Tellers and clerks of savings banks have a rare opportunity to study human nature. All sorts of people, with many strange notions of the methods and purposes of banks, come before them. A teller of a Boston savings bank tells a true story of a good Irishwoman who came to the bank to open an account.

"Please write your name on that line," said the official, pushing toward the woman a book and a pen.

"Do yez want me first name?" she asked, taking the pen in her hand.

"Yes, your full name and middle initial if you have any."

"Do yez want me husband's name?"

"Yes, his last name, but your own first name."

"Oh, me name before I was married?"

"No, your given name—Ellen or Bridget"—

"Sure, then, me name is nayther wan o' them!"

"Well, what is it then?"

"Sure, it's Mary."

"Very well. There are others waiting for you, so please hurry and write your name."

"Ah, sure, do yez want the 'Mrs.'?"

"No, never mind that. Now go ahead."

"Ah, sure, mister, I would, honest, but ye see I can't write!"—Youth's Companion.

He Saved the Bridge.

"At Harpers Ferry on one occasion the flood in the Potomac was so great that it threatened the destruction of the costly railroad bridge, which was seen to shake in its unsteadiness," said former Governor Thomas G. Jones. "When everybody present was looking each moment to see the bridge go down, President John W. Garrett of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad arrived upon the scene. Appreciating the necessity of instant action, he gave an abrupt order for a loaded train of freight cars standing on a side track to be run with the locomotive on to the bridge and kept there.

" 'But, Mr. Garrett, that is a trainload of silk,' said the local superintendent.

" 'I don't care; run out the cars!' commanded the great master of railroads. 'It would be easier to pay for the silk than to build a new bridge.'

"The 'silk train' was run on to the bridge, and the structure was saved. The silk was being sent by rail across the continent from San Francisco, at which port it had been received from China and Japan. Garrett was a great man, one of the greatest of those who have aided in the material development of America. In emergencies he was very resourceful, as was demonstrated in perhaps a small way by the Harpers Ferry incident."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cards on the Cars.

"Cards are not played as much on the cars as they used to be," said the commercial traveler. "A few years ago it was a common sight to see three or four games, whist, euchre, poker or seven up, going on in a car, and whenever four or five drummers were gathered together there was sure to be a lively game of draw in progress. Suburban trains were turned into whist clubs, and morning and night the commuters were engaged in a rubber.

"But all this has been changed. Nowadays it is the hardest thing in the world to get up a game of any kind in a train. Ask a stranger if he would like to take a hand at whist or euchre, and he will freeze you with a suspicious look. And, what is worse, he is entirely justified in his suspicions.

"In the last ten years the railroads of this country have been the harvest for gamblers, bunko men and short card experts. They have worked the field to the limit, from New York to California and from Vermont to Florida. They have worked all kinds of flimflam games, until now it is almost impossible for a man to flash a deck of cards in the smoking compartment of a Pullman without the atmosphere growing a dozen degrees colder. A man who has been bitten once doesn't care to have the experience repeated."—Rochester Post-Express.

Why So Many Young Men Fail.

"One trouble with many young men who start out in business is they try to do too many things at once," says Hetty Green. "The result is that they don't know as much as they ought to about any one thing, and they naturally fail. The trouble with young men who work on salaries is that they're always afraid of doing more than they're paid for. They don't enter into their work with the right spirit. To get on and be appreciated a young man must do more than he's paid to do. When he does something that his employer has not thought of, he shows that he is valuable. Men are always willing to pay good salaries to people who will think of things for them. The man who only carries out the thoughts and ideas of another is nothing more than a mere tool. Men who can be relied upon are always in demand. The scarcest thing in the world today is a thoroughly reliable man."

Changed by Circumstances.

"Where's your watch?" asked the observant man.

"Why, here it is," replied the man whose prosperity had slipped a cog or two recently.

"But that's a silver one. The one you used to carry had a handsome gold case."

"Well—er—circumstances alter cases, you know."—Philadelphia Press.

Prince Gustaf of Sweden and Norway, in whose favor, it is said, King Oscar may abdicate, is the heir apparent to the throne and represents a political party diametrically opposed to that which rallies about the present monarch. His majesty's recent expression of sympathy for Britain has aroused popular feeling in Sweden, where the masses are all for the Boers.

Friendly Suggestion.

"Where is the place they call the 'corn kitchen'?" inquired the stranger at the Paris exposition.

"I don't know of any such place," replied the young man in the white apron. "Won't an ice cream parlor do just as well?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Lake That Eats Boats.

A strange lake exists in the center of Sulphur island off New Zealand. It is 50 acres in extent, about 12 feet in depth and 15 feet above the level of the sea.

The most remarkable characteristic of this lake is that the water contains vast quantities of hydrochloric and sulphuric acids hissing and bubbling at a temperature of 110 degrees F.

The dark green colored water looks particularly uninviting. Dense clouds of sulphuric fumes constantly roll off this boiling caldron, and care has to be exercised in approaching this lake to avoid the risk of suffocation. On the opposite side of the lake may be seen the tremendous blowholes, which, when in full blast, present an awe inspiring sight.

The roar of the steam as it rushes forth into the air is deafening, and often huge bowlders and stones are hurled out to a height of several hundred feet by the various internal forces of nature.

A boat can be launched on the lake, and if proper care be observed the very edges of the blowholes may be safely explored.

Some idea of the strength of the acid saturated water of this lake may be gathered from the fact that a boat almost dropped to pieces after all the passengers had been landed, as the rivets had corroded under the influence of the acids.

THE CENTRAL PRISON

Work Done Towards the Reclamation of Prisoners When Released.

"The Central Prison officials are able to report the smallest number of prisoners just now that they have had in summer for at least ten years. The number now lodged there is 236, or 30 less than in the summer of 1899. This satisfactory state of affairs is ascribed to several causes. In the first place good times have a natural lessening effect on crime, when even the improvident and criminal element of the population may get a living without resorting to crime. Another cause, and on which since it has been developed in the past few months has worked surprisingly well, is the reclamation by the Salvation Army officers of those who are discharged. Last fall the prison population was at flood tide, and Warden Gilmour was at a loss to know what to do with all who were sentenced to the Provincial prison. The winter months always witness a heavy increase in those sent down, owing to the habit of County Magistrates sending vagrants where they will be maintained by the Province. They are liberated in the spring, usually, and this year the Provincial force have done a great work in driving the tramps all and singular out of the boundaries of Ontario.

"When the Salvation Army took an active hold of the work they found a wide field for their energy. Staff-Captain Archibald was put in charge, and he at once laid plans for the betterment of the conditions of discharged prisoners. These unfortunates have an uphill fight at any time, and he sought to make their life easier by removing them from the scenes of temptation. The energetic officer spent much time in the prison, where he went from cell to cell speaking to the distressed convicts, who longed for consolation. The sympathetic effort expended in this way required a good deal of heroic devotion, but the results well repaid the work. Revival meetings were held every night for three weeks, and sixty-eight cases of conversion were recorded. An account has been kept of those who have since left the prison, and only one is reported to have gone back into the ways of sin.

"In this connection the officers of the Salvation Army, who have had the encouragement and assistance throughout of the Prisoner's Aid Association, have done a praiseworthy work in obtaining places for the prisoners on leaving the Central. Arrangements have been made with parties in distant parts of the country for employment for discharged prisoners, where they may make their living removed from their old homes and avenues of temptation. No secret is made of the unfortunates' past life, but, on the contrary, they are received by sympathetic people who take an interest in the preservation to the path of virtue of those who have fallen. Many men have been helped in this way, and it is the belief of the army officers that if the system is kept up the number of prisoners can be reduced to 150, as they place that as the maximum number of habitual criminals in the Central.

"Staff-Captain Archibald is in constant communication with people who wish to aid in the reformatory work by giving discharged prisoners a chance to earn an honest living, and says the interest in the work proves that there is a very widespread desire to do good among the rural population if a practicable way can be shown. The men sent out are always competent for the work they are sent out to do, and it is required that they should be paid fair wages. Staff-Captain Archibald does not believe in the form of charity that employs a discharged prisoner because he may be induced to work more cheaply than some one else.

Some Timely Questions.

(Kincardine Review.)

Who led you to think that you would have been ruined by the accession of the Liberal leaders to office? Was it Tupper or Laurier, Foster or Cartwright?

Was your impression not formed by the utterances of Liberal leaders against protection as "the bane and curse of Canada" and against the protected manufacturers as legalized robbers, "rascals great and rascals small"?

Was it not due to the open advocacy by Liberal leaders of free trade as it is in England?

Do you not think that the blue-ruin predictions of the Conservative press would have been fulfilled if the Liberal leaders had carried out the policy they advocated in 1887, 1891, and 1896?

If you do not now believe the Liberals to be the foes of Canadian industries, is it not due to the fact that they went back on their free trade fad?

If you are favorable to the Liberals now, is it not because you know that they deceived you in 1896?

OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA LETTER

HON. MR. FOSTER'S MOTION TELLING HOW THE MONEY GOES

A Question of Subsidies—Lucky Bridge Builders—Costly Immigrants—Why Collector Wood Must Go—Mills Agrees With Monk.

Special Correspondence of the Review.

Ottawa, July 14.—The business of the session will close next week. Those members who remained here have been sitting morning, afternoon and evening, and money has been voted at the rate of millions per day. The House was divided on several matters, but the principal division was on the last want of confidence motion of the session. Mr. Foster proposed this motion, which was debated by himself, the Finance Minister, and Mr. Davin, in three short but rather brilliant speeches. The substance of the case made by Mr. Foster is given in the following condensed report of his resolution. It is worth clipping out for reference:—

MR. FOSTER'S RESOLUTION.

That the Liberal party sought the support of the electors of Canada, by making the most definite and solemn pledges to reduce the burdens of taxation and lessen the expenditure of the country.

That the following are examples of the pledges:—

"We cannot but view with alarm the large increase of the public debt and of the controllable annual expenditure of the Dominion and the consequent undue taxation of the people under the Government that has been continuously in power since 1878, and we demand strict economy in the administration of the country."—Liberal convention, 1893.

"The Liberal party says that several millions may be lopped off the present expenditure, without injury to the public service."—Hon. (now Sir) L. H. Davies.

"If we get into power we will follow the example of Mr. Mackenzie, and although we may not be able to bring the expenditures to what they were under him, we can reduce the amount, two, yes, three millions of dollars per year".—Hon. (now Sir) Wilfrid Laurier.

"I say that it is a disgrace and ashame to the Government that they come down to us and ask for an expenditure of $38,000,000 a year. Sir, the thing is utterly unjustifiable."— Sir Richard Cartwright.

"There is nothing to warrant this enormous expenditure of nearly $38,000,000, except the fact that we are burdened down with debt and with office holders, great and small".— William Mulock.

"In 1899, we were taking $6,115,000 more in taxes out of the people that we should, and we spent $7,571,000 more than we should. An era of economy should at once be entered upon."— William Patterson.

That the customs and excise taxation collected was:

In 1889-90...... ....$31,587,971

In 1894-95...... 23,446,198

showing in the five years of Liberal-Conservative rule a decrease of $8,140,873.

In 1895-6 $27,759,285; in 1898-9 $34,958,069; in 1899-1900 (as estimated by Finance Minister), $38,000,000, an increase in four years of Liberal rule of $10,240,715.

That the expenditures by the Liberal-Conservative party were as follows:—

Yearly average 1887 to 1891, $42,530,000; yearly average 1892 to 1896, $42,141,761; in 1896, $41,702,383, showing a decrease in the second period of five years and for the year 1896.

That the expenditures of the present Government were:—

In 1897, $42,972,756; in 1898, $45,334,281; in 1899; $51,542,635; in 1900, $53,050,000, showing an increase in the four years of $10,077,245.

That the estimates already brought down for the year 1901 are $56,312,526, and with the usual supplementary will reach the astounding sum of $61,000,000, and the actual expenditure will amount to at least $63,000,000.

That the liabilities actually incurred by the present Government in the sessions of 1897, 1899 and 1900, outside of the estimates were as follows:

Bridge and railway subsidies, 1898, $4,653,944.

Bridge and railway subsidies, 1899, $6,540,000.

Crow's Nest Pass Railway, $3,630,000.

Drummond Counties Railroad, $1,600,000.

Grand Trunk rental, ninety-nine years, $13,900,000.

Pacific Cable, Canada's share, $2,361,000.

Bridge and railway subsidies, 1900, $3,000,000.

Total, $36,444,944, of which about $30,000,000 are yet unpaid.

That the consideration of the estimates has been delayed by the procrastinating and unbusiness-like methods of the Government until the closing hours of the session, and has been further hindered by the absence from the session of two ministers charged with the administration of two of the largest and most important departments.

That the final estimates for 1900-1901 for the enormous sum of $7,234,000, including appropriation for over 800 items, was not placed on the table of the House until the session had entered the 150th day of its existence, and were not proposed for discussion until the 160th day of the session, when the large majority of the members had left for their homes, and the small minority remained under conditions which rendered any adequate consideration of these estimates absolutely impossible.

That this House desires, therefore, to place on record its emphatic disapproval of the cynical and open disregard shown by the present Government for its pre-election pledges and of the unbusiness-like delay and incapacity which have characterized the presentation of its measures to the House and rendered the intelligent discussion in many cases impossible; and to protest in the name of the taxpayers of Canada against the reckless and extravagant expenditure so plainly evident in every branch of the public service, and which are increasing in a ratio to startling, and on a line of outlined schemes so extended as to alarm every thoughtful and sober-minded citizen, and seriously affect the business and financial standing of the country."

This motion was rejected by a party majority of 44, but the financial statements contained in it cannot be voted down.

THE SUBSIDY BILL.

The railway subsidy bill—three and a half million dollars of them—went through second reading and committee all in one day. As a matter of fact the bill will probably be eight or ten millions, for some of the roads will receive double subsidies per mile, and in many cases the subsidies voted are for a short end of a much longer railway to be further subsidized in the future. Mr. Puttee, who usually votes with the Government but takes an interest in labor, did an unpleasant thing. Some weeks ago Mr. Mulock introduced a resolution providing in a general way that when Government contracts were given out it should be required of the contractor to pay the full current price for his labor. The Postmaster General made one of his most approved speeches to show that he had the cause of the laborer enclosed in his heart, and was bound to see that justice was done him. Then the debate was adjourned and the resolution was put away in the political cup-board, where it was intended to remain. Mr. Puttee dragged it out. He reminded the Ministers that their resolution provided that the builders of subsidized railways should pay full current wages, and asked Mr. Blair if it was not proposed to apply the condition to the public works subsidized under the bill before the House. Mr. Blair was surprised, and asked for a day to consider. The next day the Minister said nothing about it. Evidently it had never occurred to him and his colleagues that the Mulock resolution was intended for use.

HAPPY BRIDGE BUILDERS.

As remarked last week the subsidies give $230,000 toward the Grand Trunk bridge at Montreal. Mr. Blair explains that this bridge cost two million dollars. The country had paid $270,000 subsidy before, so that the total subsidy is $500,000. Besides the Dominion pays $40,000 a year for the privilege of running trains over the bridge, though the Intercolonial only has one train to the Grand Trunk's three. Then the Grand Trunk charges heavy tolls for foot and carriage passengers over the roadway. The result is that the Grand Trunk gets the bridge for less than nothing. This view is supported by the president of the company, who told the shareholders in London after the Drummond deal was completed that on account of the good arrangement made with the Government the bridge would be rebuilt and double tracked without a cent of cost to the company. He hoped that in addition the country would pay $300,000 or 15 per cent. of the cost of building it. He has got $200,000 more than he hoped for, and on his own showing the company has the bridge for nothing with half a million thrown in.

The subsidy bill also gives an additional subsidy for the bridge over the Ottawa at the capital. The bridge had previously been subsidized by the Dominion, the Province of Quebec and the city of Ottawa. The contracts had been closed and the structure is partially completed. The second subsidy is a gratuitous offering of a grateful and wealthy country.

THE COST OF IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. Wilson, of Lennox, has been looking into the cost and results of Mr. Sifton's immigration work, and reported the outcome of his enquiries in a closely condensed argument on Tuesday. Mr. Wilson finds that the present Government has in three years paid $1,267,863 for immigrants, while the late Government paid in the last three years $528,687. It does not appear that Mr. Sifton has got more immigrants, other than Doukhobors and Galicians, than his predecessor got with less than half the money. The expenditure has largely gone to retired campaigners, including Hug-the-Machine Preston, who costs $3,000 a year in salary and as much in expenses; Benjamin Davis, (brother of Sir Louis), who, according to Mr. Wilson, gets in salary and expenses, $9.71 per day; and E. J. Holmes, brother of the gentleman who sits for West Huron, who gets in salary and expenses, $13.33 per day. Mr. Devlin, ex-M.P., has charge of the work in Ireland, where $11,064 is expended to get 447 immigrants, making them cost $14.77 per head. In the United States the Government has now twelve salaried agents, and 250 agents soliciting immigration on commission. Mr. Davies and Mr. Holmes are among the salaried men. Mr. Wilson finds that the Government spends altogether in the United States over $90,000 a year, and the share of expenditure in Canada applicable to United States immigrants brings the cost up to $121,000. It is found on analysis that less than 6,000 immigrants were obtained at this cost, so that over $20 per head was paid for each man, woman and child who came in from the United States. The Gallicians and Doukhobors did not cost so much to get them in, but large advances have been made to them since. How many immigrants would have come in without the help of Mr. Sifton's officers cannot be guessed. But Mr. Puttee, before mentioned, took advantage of the occasion to urge the Minister to send his "able-bodied" pensioners about their business. The pensioners are the immigration officers, who are accused of filling in their spare time in political work.

THE CASE OF COLLECTOR WOOD.

H. W. Wood, Collector of Customs at St. Johns, Que., has become a national issue. Mr. Monet, who with Mr. Bourassa pleads the Boer cause in the Commons, thought it necessary to make a speech in the House, calling upon the Government to dismiss this officer. The crime of Mr. Wood is that he made an offensive retort and wrote an offensive letter. The letter contains the retort, and whole offending is in the following paragraph:—

"Living in a community where one-half of the citizens at least are Boer sympathisers, who have talked treason every day since the war in South Africa began, and have gloated over every misfortune that has befallen the British arms, it is not to be wondered at that a man who was born a loyal British subject, and has continued to remain so for more than half a century, should become enraged at continually hearing disloyal utterances.

After hearing one of these Boer sympathizers say that the Government had no right to send men to South Africa, that our brave soldier boys had no business there, and that he hoped they would all be shot and that not one of them would ever return, I made the remark to him that the British hung several like him in 1837, and that they ought to have hanged more.

Now, if the "cap fits" the editor of the "Canadian Francais," or any other man who reads this, he or they are at liberty to put it on.

My remark was intended for such men as the Boer sympathizers above mentioned, and not for such men as Major Pelletier, Dr. Fiset, and the other brave Canadian boys who went to South Africa, whose actions have been such that all loyal British subjects are justly proud of them."

MR. WOOD'S ACCUSERS.

For these utterances Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Monet and other Government supporters demanded the dismissal of Mr. Wood. They do not in the least object to Mr. Wood's charge that half of his community are Boer sympathizers. That pleases them. They have themselves said that the people of Quebec are not in favor of the British cause in Africa. But they construe Mr. Wood's words as meaning that he thinks all Boer sympathizers in Canada ought to be hanged. Sir Wilfrid Laurier seemed to take this view also, but he had not read the letter. The Premier promised to have Mr. Wood investigated, and had in the meantime condemned him. Mr. Foster spoke in a dignified and moderate manner, asking that nothing be done without a full inquiry, and pointed out that Mr. Wood had only suggested the hanging of men like the one who hoped the Canadian soldiers in Africa would all be killed. Clarke Wallace held that the members who had been spending so much time in denouncing Collector Wood, might have found breath to condemn the cruel and disgraceful words of Mr. Poitevin. No doubt Mr. Wood will be called to account, and before the Government is done with him he will be shown that it is unsafe to talk back when a good Government supporter rejoices over the slaughter of Canadian soldiers in Africa.

EMERGENCY FOOD.

The Minister of Justice has abandoned his colleague, the Minister of Militia. Mr. Mills spoke out in the Senate on Thursday and said that in his opinion a fraud had been perpetarated on the Government in the emergency food transaction. That is what Mr. Monk charged. The majority report of the committee strongly condemned Mr. Monk for making the charge, which it declared to be unfounded. All Mr. Mills' colleagues in the Ministry and most of his supporters in the House voted in favor of that report. They are now rebuked by the head of the Department of Justice.

REBELLION IN CHINA CONTINUES TO SPREAD

Prince Tuan's Military Arrangements are on a Large Scale--No Further News From Pekin--British War Ships Clear for Action.

THREATENING AT SHANGHAI

London, July 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Express, under date of July 17, cables: Prince Tuan has issued an edict to fix a definite date for a general rising. I cannot ascertain what the date is but it doubtless an early one, for Prince Tuan is stated to have ordered all despatch in view of the arrival of more foreign troops. A large body of Chinese to-night is reported to be moving from Hupel in the direction of Shanghai. The situation here grows more threatening every day. The city is still without any means of defence and the forts are held by Chinese.

SAYS IT IS RELIABLE

New York, July 18.—Prilchard Morgan, a member of Parliament, who yesterday received a despatch saying the Pekin foreign legations were standing July 9, is quoted to-day by the London correspondent of the World: "My information is absolutely straight but it would be fatal to my giving any further news if divulged the source of my information. I am convinced the legations were standing on the 9th of July dispite the circumstantial accounts of the massacre. The whole situation has been greatly exaggerated and Li Hung Chang's intervention will have a most salutary effect."

WARSHIPS CLEAR FOR ACTION

Shanghai, July 18.—The British cruiser Terrible and four other cruisers have cleared for action off the Sfan Hai Kwan forts.

TUAN'S MILITARY ARRANGEMENTS

St. Petersburg, July 18—A despatch from Che Foo says Prince Tuan has mobolized 950,000 men and divided them into different corps. The northern corps has been ordered to expel foreigners from Amus. The Pekin army is divided into four corps. The first to operate against Mukden and occupy the roads between Ekia and Shanhar Kuan. The second to concentrate at Tien Tsin, and the third at Pekin. from whence a column numbering 40,000 will be sent to Wi Hai Wi and Tsin Tau, while the 4th corps will concentrate at Nakin. There are now 23,000 Japanese troops in China. The Chinese fleet is concentrating in China Sea and hostilities are expected. A despatch from Nakin announces that Prince Tuan has ordered these great military movements owing to the appearance of the Japanese in China. The Viceroy of Nakin has informed the foreign consuls there that he cannot be answerable for events in Choo Sin, Ning Po and Chu Chan—The foreigners are fleeing to Shanghai. Their position is alarming. Sixteen foreigners have arrived at Naakin from Ning Po where the houses of foreigners have been burned and missionaries horribly maltreated. The rebellion has taken hold of Southern China. The foreigners at Chin Chow and in Chon have been attacked and are fleeing panic stricken.

MORE JAPANESE THOOPS

London, July 18.—A special despatch from Shanghai to-day says the disembarkation of 15,000 Japanese troops is proceeding at Taku.

HON. DR. BORDEN'S ONLY SON

Sad News Comes That He Has Been Killed in Action.

Lord Roberts Wired the Fact to Lord Minto, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier Broke It to His Minister, Who Was Completely Over Come—Col. Sam Hughes Relieved of His Command By Lord Roberts—War News.

Ottawa, July 18.—When a hero dies the whole country mourns. Another name was yesterday added to the long list of Canadian heroes killed in South Africa. A gloom fell upon the House of Commons, a shadow will fall upon Nova Scotia, and at least one home is made disconsolate. At 5 o'clock Hon. Dr. Borden sat in the House of Commons chatting genially with Hon. Charles Fitspatrick. A few minutes later he was called out of the Chamber to hear the saddest news that a father can hear.

The Sad Message.

At half past four yesterday afternoon His Excellency, Lord Minto, received the following cablegram:

"Pretoria, July 17, 1900.—Regret to inform Hon. Dr. Borden that his son was killed in action yesterday. (Signed) Roberts."

The message was sent to Sir Wilfrid Laurier with the request that he should break the news to his Minister.

Broke the Sad News.

Sir Wilfrid hurriedly left the House when the cable was handed to him, and in his private office, with Col. Pinsault and Col. Macdonald, Sir Wilfrid feeling told Dr. Borden of his great sorrow.

The doctor was overcome and was taken to his home by Col. Pinsault.

In the corridors of the House the news was received with more than ordinary melancholy, many a message of sympathy was sent to the Minister, while on every hand words of condolence were uttered.

A Promising Young Man

The late Lieut. H. L. Borden was 28 years of age and the only son of Hon. Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia. He was a third year student in medicine at McGill University, and had he become a doctor would have been the fourth physician in a direct line. He had been several years in the militia, being at the time of his enlistment in the second contingent; major of King's County Hussars, N. S. In the second contingent he was lieutenant of the fourth troop of B Squadron and an efficient officer.

A Favorite in Nova Scotia.

The deceased was a great favorite in Nova Scotia. He received his early education in Mount Allison College and Sackville University, took an active part in athletics and was known all over the province.

He was one of the handsomest men who went out with the second contingent. He stood six feet three inches, and weighed 198 lbs. The deceased sisters are spending their vacation at Canning, N. S.

Dr. Borden and Mrs. Borden leave for Canning this morning.

Was Thomas Mackie Wounded?

It was rumored yesterday afternoon that the son of Thomas Mackie, M. P., had been wounded in the same fight as Lieut. Borden was killed in. Mr. Mackie, however, had received no such news. The last word from his son was received last Monday, when he was in excellent trim. The Militia Department has no news of Capt. Mackie.

The News at His Home.

Kentville, N. S., July 18.—The news of the death of Lieut. Borden came as a shock here and in Canning, his home. Everyone was anxious to learn if it was confirmed. His sister is now at home in Canning, and is grief stricken. Mrs. Dr. Borden is his step-mother, but loved him as a son. He was popular here, and was an ideal soldier. He commanded the King's County Hussars at Aldershot one year, and was complimented for his work. He held a first class certificate of the Royal School of Cavalry, and was qualified for high rank in the second contingent. He left here with the best wishes of all, and he said on leaving: "I will not send those under me any place that I will not go myself."

He has done his duty to the credit of our country.

Sorrow in Halifax.

Halifax, July 18.—The sad tidings of the death of Lieut. Borden was received in this city with expressions ceived in this city with universal expressions of sorrow and regret. Lieut. Borden was very popular in Halifax. His work in connection with the organization of the Mounted Rifles had attracted much favorable attention; while his attractive personality and sterling qualities

"Our" Millions That are Going.
(Vankleek Hill Review.)

This reminds us of a story of an old highlander who travelled many miles to see one of the famous British battleships. He found it at the dock and at once boarded it and began to inspect. This finished, he asked to see the admiral. He was told the admiral was engaged. He replied, "Tell the admiral I want to see him."

His desires were about to be gratified and the highlander was asked, "Who shall we tell the admiral wants to see him?"

He straightened himself up and drew a long breath—"Tell him one of the owners is on board."

If we, as citizens of Canada, had more of that spirit and gave our Governments to distinctly understand that we are the owners we would get better value for our millions spent.

This is Serious.

Get a bottle at any drug store. You will be made happy. Ten and 25 cents a bottle.

Dare Not do it.
Hamilton Spectator.

Hon. Mr. Mills, Minister of Justice of Canada, stated in the Senate yesterday, that his own impression was that, in the matter of the emergency ration, a fraud had been perpetrated upon the Militia Department. It is as certain as can be that that is true, or that Minister Borden was a party to the transaction. Borden having been whitewashed, and the principal law officer of Canada having given his opinion that fraud existed, there is nothing for the Government to do but prosecute the person guilty of fraud. If that is not done the people of Canada will know that, notwithstanding the whitewashing of Dr. Borden, his colleagues are afraid to punish the perpetrator of the fraud lest something might leak out to do damage to some person connected with the Militia Department. It rests with the Government to show whether it fears to open the question.

A Journal of the "Broken-Promise" Party.
(Ottawa Citizen.)

While the Winnipeg Free Press is amusing itself writing down Hugh John Macdonald's redemption of his pledge to the prohibitionists and declaring that he has played the Sir Wilfrid Laurier trick with his cold-water allies, the Dominion Alliance executive has issued a manifesto to the electors of Manitoba emphasizing its satisfaction with the bill passed by the legislature.

And These are Liberals.

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator:

Name of Company.	Commenced Business.	Canadian Business Written in 1899
North American	1881	$4,834,505
Sun Life	1871	3,996,865

Nervous and Debilitated.

Almost a Victim of Nervous Prostration—Was Restored to Health and Strength by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. D. W. Crossberry, 10? Richmond street west, Toronto, Ont., states:—"My daughter, who sews in a white goods manufactory, got completely run down by the steady confinement and close attention required at her work. Her nerves were so exhausted and she was so weak and debilitated that she had to give up work entirely, and was almost a victim of nervous prostration.

"Hearing of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, she began to use it, and was benefited from the very first. It proved an excellent remedy in restoring her to health and strength. After having used four boxes she is now at work again, healthy and happy, and attributes her recovery to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

As a blood builder and nerve restorative, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of inestimable value. It makes the blood red, the nerves strong, and the whole system healthy and vigorous. 50c a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1900.

RIDICULOUS BOASTING.

The C.P.R. has notified the home office that the railway is prepared to send five thousand troops across the continent daily in the event of reinforcements being required in China. The great railway line which thus enables Britain to rush troops to the east in case of emergency was the achievement of the great Canadian and Conservative, Sir John A. Macdonald, who with his party pushed this great undertaking through with an unbounded faith in Canada and the Empire, and a foresight which marked him and the men associated with him as statesmen. This was done, too, in the face of the criticisms and opposition of the Liberal party and of many of the men who to-day boast that in four short years they have made Canada a nation. How ridiculous Liberal boasting appears when attention is called to the great things that were accomplished for Canada by the Liberal-Conservative party.

WHAT A RECORD.

The Liberal convention at Ottawa in 1893 viewed with alarm the increase in the public debt, and controlable expenditure and consequent undue taxation of the people under the late Government, remarks the Montreal Gazette in commenting on the Government's record.

Sir Louis H. Davies said about the same time that several millions could be lopped off the then expenditure without injury to the public service.

Mr. Charlton said the Liberal party on getting into power would effect savings to the extent of $5,000,000 per annum.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that in power the Liberals would reduce the expenditure "two—yes, three millions of dollars a year."

Sir Richard Cartwright cursed and said he considered a yearly expenditure of forty million dollars altogether too large. He added that it was a disgrace, and a shame to ask for $38,300,000 a year for federal purposes.

Hon. Mr. Mulock said there was nothing to warrant an expenditure of nearly $38,000,000.

Hon. William Paterson said the Conservative Government was taking $6,115,000 more in taxes out of the people than it should.

Hon. David Mills said the Government of the country might be carried on for a very much smaller sum than that which was being taken out of the pockets of the people.

Then, in 1896, the people put out the Government that had thus been condemned as extravagant, and those who had been condemning became themselves the Government.

The expenditure on all accounts had been running about $42,000,000 a year; in 1896 it was $41,702,000.

In 1897 it went up to $42,972,000; in 1898 it was $45,334,000; in 1899 it was $51,542,000; in 1900 it was up to $53,000,000, and for 1901 power has been taken that may run it up to $60,000,000.

Not $7,571,000 as promised by Mr. Paterson, not $5,000,000 as promised by Mr. Charlton, not three or even two millions as promised by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, not even the indefinite sum suggested by Mr. Mills, has been lopped off.

Over ten millions a year has been added on.

Then, when the Opposition called attention to the failure to keep the pledges the Ministers had made, and which their party had endorsed, the Liberal representatives in Parliament rose to a man and voted that it was, in their minds, proper for public men to disregard their promises, to kick over the platform they had been elected on, and to do themselves all the things they had condemned others for doing.

And on this record they will shortly appeal to the electors for a judgement.

Do you want four years more of Tarte and his misrepresentation of Canadian sentiment and loyalty.

If these stories of the massacres and torturing in Pekin and vicinity are not correct some great imaginations are at work manufacturing the war news in the east. That much of the news is unreliable is certain, but that some of it, yes, a great deal of it, must be true is also just as certain.

Several places in Canada have been welcoming home heroes from the fields in South Africa where the Canadian soldiers have made such a glorious name for themselves and for their Dominion. Right royal should these welcomes be to those who are thus invalided home, and will be denied the pleasure of returning with the regiments when they come back to receive the great national welcome which awaits them.

This, from the Montreal Gazette, indicates what the Liberals' reform of the Franchise Act amounts to:—"The latest in regard to the Laurier Government's tinkering with the franchise is that in some districts in this province voting at the next Parliamentary election will take place on lists made before 1896. It needed the Liberals' work to show how necessary the Conservatives' franchise legislation was."

Sir Wilfrid and the Blairs and Tartes and Siftons and Fitzpatricks cannot frighten the Senators from what they conceive to be their duty with threats or abuse. Mr. Tarte and Mr. Blair threatened when the Senate saved the people's money and lands by killing the Yukon steal and the Drummond County Railway deal, and Mr. Fitzpatrick abused the Senators when they refused the three extra judges to Montreal. But threats and abuse were alike ineffectual. The "rejected" do not scare easily.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell had rather the best of it in his rejoinder to the attack made on the Senate by Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick, who referred to the Senate as a "haven of rest for the rejected of the people." Sir Mackenzie showed that the Liberals appointed during the last two or three years had all been rejected men, and yet men who could hardly be sneered at by Liberal members of the Commons as regards ability. He named Hon. David Mills, Hon. Mr. Cox, Hon. Mr. Kerr and others. Sir Mackenzie also gave a severe and deserved rebuke to the Premier for his attempt to make a racial cry out of the action of the Senate.

A statement prepared by the Adjutant-General shows that the total strength of the United States Army in the Philippines on June 30 was 63,426 officers and men. Of that number 31,821 were regulars and 31,605 volunteers, thus distributed among the different arms:—Infantry, 34,363; cavalry, 3,492; artillery, 2,291; staff corps, 3,276. The total strength includes 1,131 officers and men of the Ninth Infantry, since transferred to China. And now the demand is made for more men, it being estimated that at least one hundred thousand men will be required to subdue the Philippines.

In the July number of the North American Review, Mr. Michael G. Mulhall makes a forecast of this year's census of the United States, in which he estimates a population of about 76,300,000, or an increase in twenty years of 53 per cent:—1880, 50,156,000, increase, 11,600,000; 1890, 62,622,000, increase, 12,466,000; 1900, 76,300,000, increase, 13,678,000. Mr. Mulhall assumes that the number of foreigners in the United States will be only 10,100,000, as against 9,250,000 in 1890, though the arrivals of immigrants since the last census will be as many as 3,543,000. Of the immigrants, the Irish exhibit the most enduring attachment to this country, only 13 per cent. of them having left during the last thirty years, to 14 per cent. of Germans and 33 per cent. of British. Mr. Mulhall points out also the significant fact that the foreign population constitutes a declining ratio of the whole, and that in spite of the tendency among the Irish and Germans to remain in the country the decline is most marked against those nationalities. Together they constituted more than 50 per-cent. of the foreign-born in 1890, but now he puts them at no more than 43 per cent. This table of the probable statistics of the foreign-born in 1900, as compared with the census of 1890, shows striking changes:—

Russians and Poles	330,000	700,000
Germans	2,785,000	2,610,000
Irish	1,872,000	1,780,000
Scandinavians	933,000	1,040,000
Austrians	394,000	700,000
Italians	183,000	605,000
French	113,000	120,000
Swiss	104,000	110,000
Chinese	107,000	110,000
Dutch	81,000	90,000
Canadians, etc.	1,307,000	1,030,000
Total	9,250,000	10,100,000

Li Hung Chang Also Denies the Story of the Massacres—Chinese Fire on Russians Steamers Carrying Ammunition—Allies' Victory at Tien Tsin—The Casualties Were Heavy, But the Allies Hold Town and Forts.

Washington, July 17.—The text of the despatch received by Minister Wu this morning is as follows:

"The utmost efforts have been made to protect foreign ministers, who were well on the 13th (Chinese calendar corresponding to our July 9). If Tien Tsin city should be destroyed it would be difficult to restore the same in 100 years. Request the powers to preserve it as the consequences would affect Chinese and foreign commerce. Earl Li Hung Chang is transferred to North China as Viceroy of Chi Li. Please transmit this despatch to the ministers at other capitals."

This despatch, which is dated July 16, was signed by Viceroys Liu Kun Yi and Chang Chih Tung of Nanking, and Wu Chang, respectively, and also by Sheng, the director of posts and telegraphs at Shanghai. It was addressed to the Chinese Minister in London, and by him transmitted to Minister Wu under to-day's date.

In accordance with the request contained in the cablegram, Minister Wu asked Secretary Hay to agree, with the other powers, to preserve Tien Tsin from destruction.

The secretary's answer was not made public, but Minister Wu fears that the destruction already has occurred. He regards the cablegram as perfectly authentic.

The reported massacre of the foreigners in Pekin occurred on July 7.

The Story Corroborated.

London, July 17.—William Pritchard-Morgan, M.P., to-day received by cable positive assurances from a source upon which he relies that the British Legation at Pekin was still standing July 9, and also that Li Hung Chang left Canton this morning to take supreme command at Pekin.

Li Hung Chang Denies the Story.

Paris, July 17.—The French Consul at Shanghai telegraphs, under date of July 13, that the Taotai of Shanghai had communicated to him a despatch from the Governor of Shantung, stating that the foreign legations at Pekin were again attacked July 7 by troops under Gen. Ting (Tuan), after a sortie by a European detachment, and that all hope of saving the foreigners seemed lost.

A second telegram from the consul, dated July 16, which arrived at the same time as the one given above, says that Li Hung Chang denies the news relating to massacres in Pekin.

Li Sails for Hong Kong.

Washington, July 17.—The State Department has bulletined the following:

"The Secretary of State has received a despatch from Consul McWade at Canton informing him that the viceroy, Li Hung Chang, sailed to-day for Hong Kong. He received an edict last night, appointing him Viceroy at Chi Li and commanding his immediate presence there. Fears are entertained at Canton that his absence may give occasion for disturbance of the peace French gunboats have arrived at Canton."

ALLIES CAPTURE TIEN TSIN.

Complete Rout of Chinese—800 Allies Killed and Wounded.

London, July 17.—The Shanghai correspondent of The London Daily Mail, telegraphing under date of July 17, says:

"The allied troops resumed the attack upon the Chinese walled city of Tien Tsin on the morning of July 14, and succeeded in breaching the walls and capturing all the forts.

"The Chinese were completely routed and the allies took possession of the native city and its defences.

"The total losses of the allies in the engagements of Thursday, Friday and Saturday were about 800 killed or wounded. The casualties were greatest among the Russians and Japanese."

Guns of Allies Did Much Damage

The guns of the allies did immense damage to the native city, causing many large conflagration, and finally silenced the majority of the enemy's guns simultaneously. Then 1500 Russians, assisted by small parties of Germans and French, assaulted and captured eight guns that were in position on the railway embankment and the fort, the magazine of which the French subsequently blew up.

Made a Sortie.

A body of American, British, Japanese and Russian troops then made a sortie and attacked the west arsenal, which the Chinese had re-occupied. After three hours of the hardest fighting yet experienced, the Chinese fled. When the arsenal had been evacuated by the Chinese, the Americans, the French, the Japanese and the Welsh Fusiliers advanced towards the native city and joined with the other attacking forces. The Japanese infantry and a mounted battery advanced to the foot of the walls, supported by the Americans and the French. Despite valiant attacks, the allies were able only to hold the positions gained outside the walls preparatory to renewing the assault in the morning.

Casualties Heavy.

The casualties sustained by the allies were exceedingly heavy, especially those of the Americans, the French and the Japanese.

Several explosions in the native city were caused by the bombardment.

The Chinese appear to have exhausted their supply of smokeless powder. They are now using black powder.

Eight Chinese Guns Captured.

Tien Tsin, Friday, July 13.—In to-day's combined attack upon the native city over 60 guns bombarded the Chinese position. The fighting was most determined and the allies' losses were heavy. Eight Chinese guns were captured and the Chinese were driven out of the west arsenal after a fierce cannonade.

A strong mixed force is now close to the walls, and it is expected that an assault will be made to-morrow.

ADMIRAL REMEY'S MESSAGE.

Says the Forts of Tien Tsin Are in Hands of the Allies.

Washington, July 17.—Admiral Remey this morning cabled the Navy Department that the city and forts of Tien Tsin are in the hands of the allies, his list of killed and wounded is somewhat fuller than yesterday's report, but still not entirely complete.

General Remey cabled the Navy Department:

"Che Foo, July 17.—To-day hope to get wounded from Tien Tsin, either in hospitals at Taku or aboard Solace. Communication very uncertain.

"Following casualties apparently confirmed:

"Marines—Captain Davis, killed; Captain Lemly, Lieutenants Butler and Leonard wounded.

"Army—Col. Liscum, killed; Majors Regan and Lee, Captains Noyes, Brewster and Bookmiller, Lieutenants Naylor, Lawton, Hammond and Waldron wounded.

"Total killed and wounded reported, 775; Russian and Japanese loss heavy. Our total loss reported, 215; about 40 were marines, but number believed to be exaggerated. Have officer on shore especially to get authentic number and names, which will be promptly telegraphed. City and forts now in the hands of allies. Admiral Seymour returned to fleet; ranking officer ashore is Admiral Alexijeff at Tien Tsin. (Signed) Remey."

This bulletin was received at the Navy Department early this morning, and was copied for distribution about 9 o'clock. Before it was given out it was decided to make some change in the copy, the nature of which was not disclosed, and the above copy was finally given to the public.

ONE FORT UNCAPTURED.

The Story at the German Foreign Office Does Not Say All the Forts.

Berlin, July 17.—An official of the Foreign Office to-day pointed out that Germany's news from the fight at Tien Tsin on July 13 was more favorable than the reports of the American admiral. Admiral Benjemann has reported that the attack upon the Chinese was successful, but not wholly so, one fort remaining uncaptured.

CHINA DECLARES WAR.

Celestial Empire Throws Down Gage of Battle to Russia.

London, July 18.—(4 a.m.)—The news of the Manchuria disturbances is not regarded as justifying the serious view attributed by The Daily Mail's advices. Amur, the boundary territory, between Eastern Siberia and Manchuria, has been the scene of local disturbances for a long time, owing to the provocative conduct of the Cossacks towards the 25,000 Chinese employed in the construction of the Russo-Manchurian Railway.

Serious Collisions Have Occurred.

Several serious collisions have occurred between the Cossacks and the Chinese troops. One happened several weeks ago, when two Russian officers and 16 men were killed. The extension of the Boxer movement to Manchuria has resulted in a great destruction of the railway, compelling the Russians to withdraw their officials.

Fired on the Michael.

The Chinese tried to stop the Russian steamer Michael carrying ammunition, and the steamer Selenga, with the Russian frontier commission on board, from passing up the Amur at Aigun. They fired on the steamers, wounding an officer and a few men, but the steamers reached Blagoveschensk. The local Chinese commander at Aigun seems to have sent the Russians a sort of ultimatum to quit Manchuria.

Another Massacre.

According to a despatch from Shanghai to The Daily Mail, dated yesterday, a massacre occurred on July 9, at Taiynen Fu, capital of the Province of Shansi, 40 foreigners and 100 native converts being killed.

China Has Declared War.

The Daily Mail publishes a sensational despatch from St. Petersburg, dated Monday, which asserts that there is no doubt that China has declared war against Russia.

Toronto, July 18.—The body of Rupert L. Lovell, who disappeared on Saturday last, was taken from the Bay yesterday at a point about 50 yards from where the empty boat was picked up.

Will Look After the Chickens.

Ottawa, July 18.—F. C. Hare, son of Rev. Dr. J. J. Hare of O.L.C., Whitby, Ont., has been appointed superintendent of the hennery department of the Experimental Farm.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over thirty years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is, of course, regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst imaginable cases. It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take his advice and be well.

Mrs. R. D. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., O., writes: "I drop you a line this morning to let you know that I have received the Medical Adviser, and how very much pleased I am with it. A crisp, new five dollar bill could not tempt me to part with it."

On receipt of 31 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of customs and mailing only, we will send free to any address a paper-bound copy of Doctor Pierce's great 1000 page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser." Or, the same book bound in fine French cloth will be sent for 50 stamps. This is a more handsome and more durable binding. Address World's Dispensary Medical Ass'n, Buffalo, N. Y.

Handshaking.

In the days of knighthood every man carried a sword and was ready to slash his neighbor upon the slightest pretext. When friends met, they grasped one another by the right hand, thereby indicating peaceable intentions, as each one thus gave up to the other his fighting arm. That is why we shake with the right hand.—Ladies' Home Journal.

In Agony With Pains in the Back—Sleep Impossible—Medicine of no Avail Until he got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Patrick J. McLaughlan, Beauharnois, Que., states:—"I was troubled with Kidney Disease and Dyspepsia for 20 years and have been so bad that I could not sleep at nights on account of pains in the back, but would walk the floor all night and suffered terrible agony.

"I tried all sorts of medicines but got no relief until I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They made a new man of me, and the old troubles seem to be driven out of my system."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have an enormous sale and owe their popularity to the fact that they can be absolutely relied upon to cure all ailments of the kidneys, liver and stomach. [illegible] Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

PROROGATION AT 3.30 TO-DAY

All the Items of Supply Duly Concurred In on Tuesday.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Announced That There Would Not Be an Increase in Members' Sessional Indemnity This Year—Criminal Code and Election Act Amendments—Regret Expressed For Lieut. Borden's Death.

Ottawa, July 18.—Yesterday was concurrence day in the House, and a wealth of business was put through. Concurrence simply means the passing in review of the items of supply already passed. By 5 o'clock the weary grind had ended, and all the estimates were wound up.

No Extra Indemnity.

In the morning Sir Wilfrid intimated that the members of Parliament would get no increase in their sessional indemnity.

At 5 p.m. the Criminal Code, with the Senate amendments thereto, was passed in review. Mr. Fitzpatrick said the only controversial amendment was the one refusing to make getting credit on false pretences a crime. The Commons agreed with this, so the Senate scores one.

Election Act Amendments.

The Election Act amendments were accepted by the Commons, all except those relating to the conduct of elections in Prince Edward Island.

The bill of the subsidies was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Mulock's resolution regarding the sub-letting of contracts and the payment of current wages was presented.

Mr. Davin said he would support the resolution if a bill would follow, but Mr. Mulock said no bill would be introduced.

The motion as amended by Mr. Clarke on March 22, was carried unanimously, after Mr. Mulock had announced that he proposed to make the resolution operative.

Lieut. Borden's Death.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on a motion to adjourn, confirmed the sad rumor that Lieut. Borden had been killed on Monday in South Africa. He was killed near Pretoria. He was ayoun killed near Pretoria. He was a young man of great promise and a model boy. The Premier paid a glowing tribute to the deceased and asked that all political animosities should disappear and that the House should unanimously express sympathy to the bereft parents.

Mr. Davin eloquently expressed the great regret of the Opposition. It was sorrow mixed with pride to know a Canadian had so grandly died.

The House adjourned at 11.50.

The House meets to-morrow at 11 a. m., but it will be merely proforma. The prorogation takes place at 3.30.

The Senate.

Ottawa, July 18.—In the Senate yesterday two sessions were held in the afternoon and in the evening. Business advanced for the prorogation.

SORE PROHIBITIONISTS.

Many Resolutions Passed—The Government Censured—Officers of the Current Year Re-elected.

Toronto, July 18.—The Ontario Council of the Dominion Alliance had a busy day yesterday, and passed a number of resolutions. Some of the resolutions passed yesterday may be summarized.

Government Censured.

The Dominion Government was censured for refusing to enact prohibition laws and prohibitionists were urged to oppose any government that failed to recognize the demand of the people.

The Ontario Executive was instructed to organize to secure the defeat of all members of Parliament who have ignored the mandate of the people.

The Ontario Government will be waited upon early next session, with the demand that legislation be passed prohibiting the sale of liquor in Ontario as far as possible and should the Opposition be returned to power the same demand will be made upon them.

The sale of alcoholic beverages in military canteens was roundly denounced.

The principle of woman suffrage was again commanded.

The Finance Committee reported $127 on hand. The officers for the current year were all re-elected, and are:

President, Rev. W. A. MacKay, D.D.; vice-presidents, Hon. A. Vidal, Hon. J. C. Aikins, Hon. G. W. Ross, Mrs. A. O Rutherford, Hon. G. A. Cox, George H. Lees and the provincial heads of the W.C.T.U., Sons of Temperance, Good Templars and Royal Templars; secretary, F. S. Spence; treasurer, R. J. Fleming.

The following names were added to the Executive Committee of 1899 in place of an equal number who have retired or left limits: Rev. S. S. Bates, C. G. Scott, E. Coatsworth, jr., C. G. Fraser, Mrs. E. S. Cummer and J. H. Carson.

A public meeting was held in the pavilion last night, when strong speeches were made.

Old Man Shot Two Boys.

Thamesville, Ont., July 18.—Yesterday afternoon the two sons of Dr. Duncan of Chatham, who are on a visit here, were shot by Samuel Goderich, an old pensioner, and severely wounded. The older one was shot in the back and legs, while the younger received wounds in the knee and foot. The shooting is said to have been without provocation. Chief Twigg promptly arrested Goderich and placed him behind the bars, where he awaits his hearing this morning.

Their European Jaunt.

Ottawa, July 18.—Sir Louis Davies, Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. A. G. Blair did not wait for prorogation yesterday, but started off on their European jaunt yesterday afternoon, leaving the finish of Parliament to Sir Wilfrid.

PEOPLE WHO SYNDICATE SORROW.

Not Apt to Be Popular With Their Fellow Men.

The most selfish man in the world is the one who is most unselfish—with his sorrows. He does not leave a single misery of his untold to you or unsuffered by you. He gives you all of them. The world becomes to him a syndicate formed to take stock in his private cares, worries and trials. His mistake is in forming a syndicate; he should organize a trust and control it all himself; then he could keep every one from getting any of his misery.

Autobiography constitutes a large part of the conversation of some people. It is not really conversation—it is an uninteresting monologue. These people study their individual lives with a microscope, and then they throw an enlarged view of their miseries on a screen and lecture on them as a stereopticon man discourses on the microbes in a drop of water. They tell you that they "did not sleep a wink all night;" they "heard the clock strike every quarter of an hour." Now, there is no real cause for thus boasting of insomnia. It requires no peculiar talent—even though it does come only to wide awake people.

If you ask such a man how he is feeling, he will trace the whole genealogy of his present condition down from the time he had the grip four years ago. You hope for a word; he gives you a treatise. You asked for a sentence; he delivers an encyclopedia. His motto is, "Every man his own Boswell." He is syndicating his sorrows.

Too Frank.

A clothing merchant in lower Broadway had a big lot of suits of clothes that he had bought at a bargain, and by putting a price of $15 on each he thought they would sell rapidly, for they were of exceptionally good value for the money. He put one of the suits on a form and set it in front of his store, with a sign about its neck which one of his smart clerks had painted on a piece of cardboard. This announced the price. Then he and his clerks prepared to do a rushing business.

The hours passed on, and no one came in to buy the suits. This caused the merchant to wonder, and at length he determined to go out and take a look at the sample suit and the sign. This is what he found on the sign: "These Suits $15. They Won't Last Long." Pedestrians passing by saw the sign and smiled at its frankness.

The merchant tore the sign from the suit, and the clerk who designed it started out to look for another job.—New York Mail and Express.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning; months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

AT STONY LAKE

A Large Crowd Attend the Charlotte-st' Sunday School Excursion.

The annual excursion under the auspices of the Charlotte-st. Sunday school was held yesterday to Stony Lake, and about three hundred and fifty happy excursionists enjoyed the outing immensely. The excursion was conveyed from Lakefield by the Sunbeam and scow, and the attention and kindness of Capt. White and his officers was greatly appreciated by the committee in charge.

The excursion ran to Burleigh, where a short time was sent. The sail through the lakes was greatly enjoyed on the way up, but on the return trip the storm broke over the steamer and the rain dampened everything but the spirits of the excursionists. Some of the party who had remained off to be with friends at islands had to be left behind as the steamer could not stop in the storm to pick them up.

Home was reached safely at about 10.30.

Court Peterborough, No. 29, C. O. F.

The members of Court Peterborough, No. 29, C. O. F., are urgently requested to attend a special meeting to be held on this (Wednesday) evening, at 8 o'clock, in their hall, Simcoe street, for the purpose of making arrangements for the funeral of our late brother Matthew Johnston.

EMPLOYEES PICNICKING

The Geo. Matthews Co. Employees on Their Annua Outing.

The sixth annual outing of the employees of the Geo. Matthews Co. was held yesterday, when some three hundred of the employees, their wives, families and friends enjoyed a day down the river. The Company give their employees an annual picnic, bearing all the expenses and giving the men the day for holidaying together. This year's outing was most successful, and was unmarred by the slightest unpleasantness, except the rain storm which caught the excursionists about the Bensfort bridge on the homeward journey. But the rain did not interrupt the enjoyment for long, and the whole day was enjoyed thoroughly by all present. Mr. T. F. Matthews accompanied the picnic.

The excursionists were conveyed by the North Star, and the Eclipse and scow. Music was provided for dancing, and the sail down was most pleasant. Jubilee Point was reached at noon, and after dinner a programme of sports and games was run off, furnishing first-class amusement. The prize list included about $35 contributed by the men of the works. A game of baseball, umpired by Mr. Matthews, was a great feature, and excited much interest among the employees. The contest was between nines chosen from the trimming room and the packing room, and was won by the latter with a score of 19 to 13.

The trip home was safely made, notwithstanding the rain storm, and all voted the day a grand success.

Excursion to Stony Lake.

HAS ARRIVED IN ENGLAND

Trooper Adam J. Hall Invalid to England From South Africa.

Mrs. Adam J. Hall has received word of the arrival in England of her husband, Trooper Adam J. Hall, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles. He has been invalided to England from South Africa after an attack, it is supposed, of enteric fever.

He expects to be home soon. He arrived in England on the 5th, and cabled his wife, but the message, while it reached here was never delivered on account of the address being vague. The news came by letter from the soldiers' relief corps.

THE RAVAGES OF THE FEVER

TROOPER TRUSLER TELLS OF THE DEATHS IN SOUTH AFRICA

He is in Norval Point Hospital Recovering From Enteric—How the Other Peterborough Boys are Getting on.

The following interesting letter has been received from Sergt. Trusler, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles:

Norval Point, South Africa,
June 4th, 1900.

Mr. J. A. Jordan, Peterborough,

Dear Friend,—I thought, having a chance, I would write to you a few lines, hoping that you are well. I have been very sick with enteric fever, but I am getting better. I am at Norval Point Convalescent hospital, where, you will remember, the bridge over the Orange River was blown up by the enemy. Fever is very bad here just now, and the way it is carrying the troops off is something terrible. They are dying at Bloemfontein at the rate of twenty-five per day. About 22 of the first contingent are buried there, who have died from fever, and quite a number of our squadron are sick with it, no less than 11 out of our troop. I have seen as many as nine carried out and placed in a wagon at once, and buried without a coffin, simply being wrapped in a blanket. I shall never forget it. It was a sad sight. I am very thin at present. I only weighed 115 pounds when I came out of Bloemfontein Hospital. I think the war will soon be over, according to reports, and the boys are more anxious to get home than they were to come here. The days are very warm here, but the nights are cold and we have had frost on several occasions. It is almost mid-winter here now. I don't expect our regiment will get home for about 3 months yet, although those who have had enteric fever are to be sent home as soon as possible, but I don't want to go before the rest of our troops, but of course I will have to obey orders. I have not heard from Spence or Price, but Hall was sent down from the front very sick with ague and fever, and Jack Smith is not able to walk, being used up with rheumatism. He is at Bloemfontein. I did not see him, but some of the boys were telling me. Our boys are right up at the front and are under Gen. Hutton, and are giving a good account of temselves, and I am sorry I am not with them.

Remember me to all the folks at home, and to all the boys. Hoping to see you all again, I remain, respectfully your friend, for Queen and Country,

ALFRED TRUSLER,
3rd Troop A. Squadron,
Canadian Mounted Rifles,
Field Force, South Africa.

SERGT. LEBAR ON GARRISON DUTY

ATTEMPT OF A SMALL BOER PARTY TO RAID HIS POST

Has Entirely Recovered From Enteric Fever and Now Has Charge of a Command on Garrison Duty—Deaths in Bloemfontein—Private Vanderman's Death.

Color Sergeant LeBar writes to Mr. Felix Brownscombe as follows:

Ferreira Siding,
Orange Free State,
June 12, 1900.

Dear Mr. Brownscombe,—I take pleasure in dropping you a few lines to let you know how I am getting along and what I am doing.

When last I wrote you I was very ill, but thank God I am again able to be at duty. I returned to Bloemfontein from Naauport Hospital on 4th inst., and I assure you I was greatly disappointed on arriving to find that it was utterly impossible for me to rejoin my regiment, but was to be attached to a provisional Batt. that was being formed for garrison duty. I have nothing to growl about, though, as I have been appointed to a very important duty, and have been given a position that was sought after by almost every N. C. O. in the Batt., viz., "Ferreira Siding Guard." I came here on the 6th inst. with a party of 24 men and 3 corporals. The siding is about 10 miles south of Bloemfontein on the Government railway, and is used as a re-mount depot for the cavalry and mounted infantry at the front. There are over 3,000 sick and wounded horses in hospital here at present and about 2,000 fresh horses ready for the front when they are wanted.

There has been a small commando around here for several days, as it was feared they intended to blow up the bridge again, so the guard was sent down

STRUCK DEAD BY LIGHTNING

MR. MATTHEW JOHNSTON'S SUDDEN DEATH IN BURLEIGH TOWNSHIP

His Party Took Shelter Under a Tree Which Drew the Lighting – Joe Matthews Also Injured.

The dead body of Mr. Matthew Johnston, one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of North Monaghan, was brought home this morning without a word of warning having been imparted to his friends to prepare them for the shock of the news of his sudden end. Mr. Johnston left home on Monday morning to purchase cattle in the northern part of the county. Having finished this business he joined a huckleberry party and was with them when the sudden storm came up yesterday afternoon. With three other men, James Matthews, Joseph Matthews and Robert Little, he took shelter under a tree. The tree was struck by lightning. The electric bolt struck about ten feet from the ground and took a strip about three inches wide down the tree. Mr. Johnston was lying closest to it. The current struck him on the left side of the head and ran down the left side of the body, killing him instantly. Its course was marked on the body. A small hole was bored by it through a watch Mr Johnston carried in his pocket.

Mr. Joseph Matthews, who was next in position to Mr. Johnston, was also struck and was stunned. For a few minutes he lay unconscious, and then he partially recovered and was assisted by his brother and Little to the shore of Stony lake, about a mile distant, where two men named Hamilton, who were on the lake in a boat, took him to Crowe's store, further down the lake. He was in a dangerous condition when left.

The accident happened in Burleigh township, between Jack and Eel creeks, about three miles down from the head of Stony lake. It was about 4.30 o'clock. The lightning or thunder did not appear to be more severe than in other places.

After getting his brother out to a place of safety Mr. James Matthews, who is a farmer residing in the first concession of Dummer, about nine miles from Lakefield, instanced back and the body of Mr. Johnston was brought out. It was pouring rain and growing dark, and the tramp over the rocks and rough country was an unpleasant experience. Mr. Matthews then hitched up and drove all night to bring the body down, stopping only for a short rest at his own place. He arrived in town with the body about 8 o'clock this morning.

THE DECEASED.

Matthew Johnston, who met his death in such sudden and shocking manner, was one of the old residents of North Monaghan, and was widely known not only in his own township and in the town, but throughout the entire district. He was a son of the late Matthew Johnston, and was born in Kingston in 1845. When a child he came here with his father, who settled in North Monaghan. The deceased had therefore lived in that township practically all his life. He took an active interest in township affairs and was for a number of years a member of the Township Council and had served as treasurer of the municipality. In these capacities he gave faithful and efficient service. A few years ago he opened a butcher shop in the south end of the town, and later had charge of the Kennedy meat market on George-st. In all his relations with his fellow citizens he was scrupulously honest and straightforward, and was highly respected throughout the district. His sudden death will arouse the deepest regret among his many friends and acquaintances, and the sincerest sympathy will be extended to his bereaved relatives. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary Gow, daughter of the late Charles Gow, of Ashburnham, and his second wife, who with several children survive him, was Miss Sarah Donnelly, of North Monaghan. In politics deceased was a Conservative. He was a member of Court Peterborough, Canadian Order of Foresters.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock from the family residence, lot 14, North Monaghan.

LIGHTNING'S FREAK

Residence in Asphodel Struck by Lightning.

During the thunder storm on Sunday afternoon lightning struck the residence of Mr. Charles Foux, Birdsall, Asphodel, completely demolishing one of the chimneys and creating considerable havoc in the bedroom below, the ceiling being torn open, the plaster torn off, and brick, shingles and soot thrown over the room. Fortunately Mr. Foux at the time was pumping water for his horses, and the instant he noticed the chimney on fire he ran up a ladder which was standing at the side of the house and extinguished the flames.

When a reliable gentleman like Mr. Thomas Simmons, of Chaffey's Locks, Ont., steamboat engineer, comes forward on his own account and adds his testimony to the value of a medical cure, the public has assurance that there is something deserving attention. Off and on, for the past two years, he experienced intense pain down the sciatic nerve. So severe was it at times that he was unable to handle the throttle of the engine, and would be obliged to lay off for days. "Before the first bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure had been drained," said Mr. Simmons, "I could feel the beneficial effects; and by the time I had used four I was completely cured. Since last spring I have been entirely free from pain. Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure did it."

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"Go on, hang me! You mean to!"

"You quarreled again. Old men always get back to the same topic, and he brought you back. You got angry, lost all control of your temper and"—Darrent shrugged his shoulders.

"And left. I swear it. I left in a rage, turned the wrong way by mistake"—

"And you know the country by heart."

"I was blind with rage. I did not know where I was walking. I walked for miles. Then the snow came down, and I took shelter in a shed and when the storm was over went back to the village hotel."

"At a quarter past 2. Next day Chief Dobson called and showed you the paper. You said you would see him later, and then you fled."

"Yes; that's true. At first I meant to come to some arrangement with him—it looked as if he held my life in his hands—but afterward I grew frightened and came to Chicago. You're only just in time. I intended to start for Africa tomorrow."

"You would not have reached New York."

"You mean I have been watched?"

"Certainly, every step, every movement. Was running away the act of an innocent man?"

"I was dazed when Dobson showed me the paper. It took all the life out of me. It doomed me to death. There, in Marsden's own handwriting, was my condemnation, and so all my courage vanished as soon as he had gone, and I sought refuge in flight."

"Without even bidding farewell to the girl you had promised to marry."

"I felt I should be pursued. I dared not go to Bideford. Chicago was my only chance, and then, if I could escape, Africa. What more can I say?"

"You have said too much already, Mr. Marsden," the detective answered quietly as he made a note that Astray's fiancee lived at Bideford. "You should have reserved this statement for your counsel. For the present you must consider yourself under arrest. I think we may as well be going."

In half an hour the arrest of the Norcombe murderer was known all over Chicago. The papers came out with extras and sensational headlines, and Herbert Darrent's name was on every one's lips. The American Lecoq had scored another triumph, and every evening newspaper lauded him to the skies. It was nothing less than their duty to praise one who at a time of stagnation, when there was absolutely no news to help the sale of the papers, had placed columns of a great sensation within their grasp.

Rarely had a crime received so much publicity. For weeks the excitement was maintained at fever heat and fed by descriptive and imaginative reports.

The preliminary police court proceedings filled more columns. The great trial was given verbatim day after day, and all the while louder and louder swelled the chorus that sang the praises of that prince of all detectives, Herbert Darrent.

CHAPTER VI.

THE FATE OF ASTRAY MARSDEN.

The last day of the trial of Astray Marsden for the murder of his uncle one of the Chicago evening papers contained the following:

NORCOMBE, Feb. 26, 9:30 a. m.—The court is crowded—more crowded, if possible, than it has been for the past two days, for the last act of the drama will be reached today, and the verdict of the jury will be given, the verdict that shall condemn Astray Marsden to an awful death or shall set him free among his fellow men.

Never before in the history of this country have the people experienced such a condition of suppressed excitement as that which permeates the courthouse this morning. Even the cold blooded, phlegmatic court attendants cannot, try as they will, escape the contagion that pervades the swaying audience awaiting the final act in the great sensational trial.

Like all others in the building, carried away by the suppressed excitement of the moment, they hold their breath and wait.

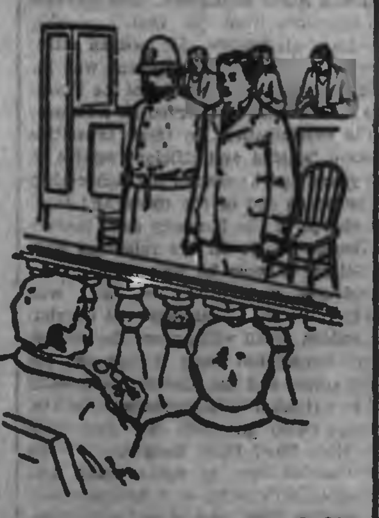
The minute hand of the clock slowly travels to the hour of 10. One by one the lawyers enter and take their seats, chatting as idly as though the matter to be tried is not of the gravest import in the whole wide world—life or death. Think of it! Within a few hours the decision will have to be given—guilty or not guilty, life or death!

10 o'Clock.—Dismally the ten strokes of the court clock sound, echoed a few seconds later by ten deep notes from the belfry of an adjacent church, and the judge enters the court, takes his seat and opens his book.

The monotonous voice of the court crier demands silence, and the indescribable murmur inseparable from a body of people overwrought with intense excitement subsides, dies away like the sound of a retreating wave as the water flows down the beach.

Astray Marsden, the prisoner, enters the court, looking paler and more haggard this morning than ever before, and, almost overcome with nervous anxiety, grips the rail in front of him as he faces the crowded court.

Then his eyes wander to a woman, closely veiled, sitting near his attorney's table, where she has sat throughout the whole of the trial, a woman whom it is whispered Astray Marsden has promised to marry, but she has been called as a witness by neither side.



The prisoner enters the court, looking paler and more haggard than ever.

For a single instant, for the first time during the trial, the girl raises her veil, and the prisoner catches a glimpse of a pale but beautiful face. A tremulous smile of encouragement hovers for a moment around her quivering lips, and then the veil is lowered again, and the man braces himself for the final ordeal.

The Summing Up.

10:45.—The judge commences his summing up. "Gentlemen of the jury," he says, "you have today entered upon the last stage of your labors in a case which to me has proved at once the most painful and the most obvious in all my experience of criminal trials. It only remains for me, as impartially as lies in my power, to review the whole of the evidence that has been placed before you both in favor of and against the prisoner, Astray Marsden, and to leave it to you to decide upon that evidence whether he is guilty or not guilty of the crime with which he stands charged—the willful murder of Josiah Marsden.

A REAL GOOD LAUGH.

IT IS MORE BENEFICIAL THAN A DOSE OF MEDICINE.

Yet the Laugh That Jars or Chills Is Heard More Often Than the Genuine, Spontaneous Expression of Unfeigned Enjoyment.

Laughter makes good blood.—Italian Proverb.

It would be a sadder and drearier world were there no laughter, and yet the real thing is only too rare among us. There are the laugh that cheers and the laugh that chills, the spontaneous expression of unfeigned enjoyment, of hearty gladness, of real joy, as opposed to the faint smile of simulated pleasure, the hollow, mirthless laugh that tries to drown the misery of an aching heart, the harsh, grating sound that accompanies the triumph of malignity.

What is so joyous, so inspiriting, as the happiness of little children, which finds boisterous expression in their ringing peals of laughter, and what so sad, so chilling, as the outbursts of reckless levity that nightly jar upon the ear in the streets of our great cities?

Nothing is more characteristic of the human being than his laugh. It has been called "the cipher key wherewith we decipher the whole man." The schoolgirl, in her transition state, whose faulty manners are more often than not born of nervousness, is given to tittering behind books and exchanges chuckles in corners with her dearest friend over matters which are, as a rule, kept secret. The "society miss," whose social standpoint is open to question, is far too refined for a hearty laugh, even if her dressmaker had allowed room for it, so she sniggers behind her fan something like the schoolgirl, and her companion of the masher tribe emits shrill, cackling sounds, provided his collar permits and he is not feeling too languid to be amused.

Perhaps one of the most trying laughs is that of the nervous person. Such a one greets you with the same stereotyped sound upon all occasions. Whenever you meet, you know the nervous, mirthless laugh will be heard before you can exchange a word, and, whatever be your mood, it will recur with painful persistence throughout the interview.

There are those who always want to laugh at the wrong moment, and what a ghastly sensation it is when the tragedy of a human heart has been partly unveiled before you, and, because it contains that fatal touch of comedy that treads so closely on the heels of tragedy, it is all you can do to choke down that mad, hysterical impulse to laugh.

The loud guffaw of the perpetually funny man, who thus announces the fact that he has made what he calls a joke, is apt to produce bad rather than good blood, just as the meaningless, ceaseless ripple of some inane feminine laughter gets on the nerves and induces a morose desire for solitude.

There are the birds of evil omen who croak their way through life—the pessimist, the hypochrondriac, the bored and blase of both sexes—who are too cynical to be amused, and those who, posing as profound critics, fear any show of enthusiasm, lest it should be mistaken for ignorance that is easily pleased. These do not laugh.

"Laugh and grow fat!" says rare Ben Jonson, and there is a contagious cheeriness in the hearty, somewhat wheezy laugh of our stout, comfortable friends. They seem to have no awkward corners either in mind or body, and their irrepressible good humor acts as a mental tonic on their surroundings. Carlyle tells us that "no man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether, irreclaimably bad," and experience teaches us to trust those with an honest, hearty laugh.

How different is the jeer of mockery, the callous sneer of cynicism which turns some cold with rage and drives others to the verge of violence, or the rude laughter reserved for the moment when your back is turned and you can no longer see, but only hear, and draw your own conclusions.

The happy gift of humor can soften many a black look and silence many an angry word by a laughing reply that has an honest ring in it. But it must be the right sort of laugh. The least touch of contempt brings home the galling fact that the angry man is making himself ridiculous, and an excessive hilarity betrays a want of sympathy with the cause of his anger. It is the laugh that comes from a kindly heart, unwilling to give or take offense, that acts like a charm in restoring equanimity to the ruffled breast.

We know that with children unbridled laughter is often the forerunner of tears, and in later life "laughter is akin to weeping, and true humor is as closely allied to pity as it is abhorrent to derision." It softens the heart and quickens the emotions, making them susceptible of a sudden revulsion of feeling if but a word, look, a memory awaken a responsive chord.

To the human race alone has laughter been accorded as an expression of delight, and, though we talk of the laughing hyena and our dogs seem to smile with their eyes to the accompaniment of wagging tails, we may listen in vain for anything common to the rest of the animal creation that corresponds to our accepted method of expressing amusement and lightness of heart.

The hollow, metallic laugh of the parrot is but a mockery of true mirth. It is a mere imitation, painfully like the laugh of some human beings in its very emptiness. It is no expression of real feeling. It is more like the triumphant chuckle of an evil spirit than the wholesome "laughter that makes good blood."

It is from the sound mind in the sound body that we get true mirth, the sunshine of life, the oil that eases the wheels of human intercourse. It comes from those who laugh with and not at their fellow creatures. It is the privilege of reason, the gospel of kindliness, one of the joyous notes in the psalm of life. It must not be excessive nor ill timed, lest it lose the sweetness of sympathy and become tedious by reiteration; lest it be degraded from the rank of a health giving medicine to take its place among noxious drugs and mental irritants.—St. Louis Republic.

Breaking the News.

Mrs. Bingo (severely)—I should like to know where you were last night?

Bingo—Well, if the truth must be told I was playing chess with Kingley, and, my dear, the last game I bet him a new bonnet for you against a new bonnet for his wife.

Mrs. Bingo—Yes, my dear, and who won?

Bingo—Well, you just wait until you see his wife next Sunday!

A Fisherman's Trick.

"One day I was talking fish with a number of friends," said an old fisherman, "and I made a bet that I could catch more perch than any other man in the party in a given time. The crowd picked out the most experienced fisherman in the lot, and we set a day to try our luck. The day before the match I got a large glass jar, filled it with water and put some minnows in it. Over the mouth of the jar I put a piece of parchment in which I had made some small holes. Then I went to a point just east of the waterworks, picked out a likely spot and sank the jar in the river, first attaching a cork float to it by which I could locate it next day.

"We went out for the fishing match the following afternoon, and I soon found my float and anchored there. The other man located a short distance away, and we began. The perch were just beginning to run, and in a little while I had pulled in 180 perch, while my opponent got only 24. Then he gave up, and I won my bet.

"I showed the boys the trick before we left the fishing ground. You can always in that way make a good catch of fish that will swallow minnows. The sight of the bait in the jar always attracts a crowd of fish and seems to put them in good biting humor."—Detroit Free Press.

Plausible, but Failed.

The cunning of children is well recognized to be of a very superior kind, and it is seldom if given a chance that they cannot inveigle their elders into seeing things their way. The following is an instance of where a little girl slipped up on this by not taking into consideration that her mother had had enough experience with children to have an insight into their nature.

The girl's birthday was a couple of weeks off, and her parents had told her that they were going to give her a handsome present upon that occasion. She had been counting "the minutes" for several days, but thinking she could not possibly await her birthday without knowing what her present would be she stole softly up to her mother and begged her to show her the present.

"Why, it wouldn't be right to show it to you now," her mother answered, "because we want to surprise you on your birthday."

"Oh, that's all right!" exclaimed the little one. "I'll forget what it is before then."

Baby's Overplus of Brain.

"Oh, John," exclaimed the fair young mother, "I am glad you're home. I have been so worried."

"Why, dear," he asked, "what's the matter?"

"It's about the baby. I tremble to think of it. You know they say children that are too smart never grow up."

"Yes, yes," he cried; "go on. What is it? Where is our darling? What has happened? Go on."

"John," she said, putting her arms around his neck and sobbing upon his breast, "he said, 'Da, da,' today, and he is only 9 months old."—London Tit-Bits.

JEALOUS OF THE JUDGE.

Ma's 'lected justice of the peace, an pa has got a case
Of what you'd think was rheumatic a-drawin up his face;
Just sets around an comes at the cruel hand of fate
That led him here to settle in this wimmen sufrin state.
He talks about the crowin hens an what they call advance,
A-crowdin men fallin from the right to wear the honored pants,
An says the time's a-comin fast when men'll be but slaves—
Be ruled by tyrant wimmen from their cradles to their graves.

Ma laughs to hear him goin on, an sometimes says she'd ort
To sock him with a heavy fine for sich contempt of court
An tells him he'd better stop an mind his p's an q's
Or her official dignity'll h'ist him from his shoes,
An then she'll spank his ole bald head with sort of loving hand
An say there ain't a better man in all this western land
An that in all domestic things he yit kin be the boss,
An pa he'll heave a sigh an say he'll try to bear the cross.

Pa asked her s'posin he's arranged before the judgment seat
Fur takin in sufficient booze to tangle up his feet,
If she would cork him in the jug, an ma just told him flat
A judge's husban wouldn't drink to sich excess as that.
She says he'd ort to swell with pride an satisfaction fur
The great judicial honor that had bin conferred on her,
An pa he fetched another sigh from down inside his breast
An said he'd shortly try to hope it all was fur the best.

I pity pa a-goin round with sich a achin face
An actin like he was a strange trespasser on the place;
Just cuts me like a weepen every time I hear him sigh,
But ma says he'll recover from his tantrums by an by.
I know jest what's a-ailin him; it's only jealousy;
It rips the stitchin of his pride to figger out that she Will be "her honor" an "the court" an sort of rule the town,
While he'll be what he allus was—jest plain ole Jimmy Brown.

Discharge of Col. Sam Hughes.

Ottawa, July 18.—Col. Samuel Hughes, M.P., has been discharged from the command of the South African Light Horse. Gen. Lord Roberts has done the deed in his accustomed uncommunicative way. The world will have to await Col. Hughes' facile pen to know full particulars.

Yesterday Lord Minto received a cablegram from Gen. Hutton, announcing that Col. Hughes had been relieved of his command by Lord Roberts.

No other information was conveyed.

In the House yesterday afternoon Dr. Sproule asked if Col. Hughes' removal had taken place.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied, ovacularily: "I have no official information whatever."

Hon. Dr. Borden said: "I have no official information on the subject."

Herchmer a Hutton Victim.

Ottawa, July 18. — Lieut.-Col. Herchmer, who has just returned from South Africa, had a long interview with Dr. Borden. He presented the Minister of Militia with a report, in which he points out the causes which gave rise to his dissatisfaction with the treatment accorded him by Gen. Hutton. He was ready to resume the command of his regiment, after his illness, but Gen. Hutton would not permit him to do so. He was offered a position on the line of communication, or three months' leave of absence. He accepted the latter, and is now arranging to get through with the Militia Department, so that he may return at once to Regina to his old position as Commissioner of the Mounted Police. Lieut.-Col. Herchmer also laid his case before Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Premier has charge of the Mounted Police Department.

How Our Contingent Has Suffered.

Toronto, July 18.—Dr. G. Sterling Ryerson, writing to an officer of the Queen's Own from South Africa, under date of June 10, says that only 325 men of the original 1,186 of the first Canadian contingent are now on active duty. He says the sick and wounded are being taken care of in the most careful manner.

They Are All Welcome Home.

Smithville, Ont., July 18.—John Cartwright, who volunteered with Canada's first contingent for service in South Africa, and was invalided home, reached here last evening, and our little town went wild.

Windsor, Ont., July 18.—V. E. Marenettee, who was wounded at Paardeberg, arrived home at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was received with cheers and enthusiastic greeting by friends. A large crowd met him at the station. He rode in a carriage with Col. Guillot, his father and brother. Last night a reception was tendered him.

The Insured Canadians.

Montreal, July 18. — The Star's special cable from London says: Sir Charles Tupper, who is now in England, requests the publication of the following:

> To heirs and friends of members of First Canadian Contingent killed and wounded in South Africa:
>
> Those making application for the insurance effected with the Ocean Accident & Guarantee Company, whose head Canadian office is in Montreal, will facilitate settlement of claims by having their identity fully established as the rightful receivers of the insurance. By taking this precaution and furnishing authentic descriptions of those killed and wounded delays will be avoided.

GENERAL MOVEMENT IS ON.

Canadians Are in the Midst of the Work East and West of Pretoria.

Montreal, July 18.—The Star publishes the following special cable:

Pretoria, July 16.—A general movement of the troops is on the tapis.

The column under General Hamilton advanced to Donderboom, west of Pretoria, this morning, and drove the Boers from Pyramid Hills. The column bivouacked at Waterval.

D Battery of the second Canadian contingent is with the force.

General French's cavalry advanced from the camp at Derdepoort, north of the town, and engaged the Boers, who retired. The enemy had several pieces of artillery.

General Hutton's mounted infantry division is at Bronchoest Spruit, some distance to the east of Pretoria.

The Hospital Inquiry.

London, July 18.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, announced as additional members of the Committee of Inquiry on South African hospitals, David Richmond, Lord Provost of Glasgow, and Mr. F. Harrison, general manager of the London and Northwestern Railroad.

COOMASSIE IS RELIEVED.

British Column Under Willcocks Has Accomplished Its Mission.

Fumsu, July 17.—Coomassie has been relieved by the column under command of Col. Willcocks.

Relieved on July 15.

London, July 17.—The Colonial Office announces the receipt of a cablegram from Col. Stout, from Cape Coast Castle, saying that an apparently authentic message confirms the reported relief of Coomassie on July 15.

Bought Pulp From Clergue.

Montreal, July 18.—The coming of the English papermakers to Canada has already produced good results. Mr. Marsden has, it was stated here yesterday, purchased 500 tons of chemical pulp from the Clergue Company at Sault Ste. Marie, and this sale will no doubt be followed by many others.

An Editor Shelved.

Ottawa, July 18.—Editor Daly of The Catholic Freeman, Kingston, has been made Collector of Tolls in Canada, to succeed Collector Battle, lately deceased.

Patrice—I told Will if he kissed me I'd scream.

Patience—And what did he say?

"Oh, he said he thought I had a very musical scream."

Jill—Where would he be? Why, he'd be right in the front when the men were on the retreat.—Yonkers Statesman.

Ostracism.

The ordinary society woman met the trust magnate's wife at the threshold.

"Back!" cried the ordinary society woman. "I did not invite you! I am ostracizing you!"

The trust magnate's wife drew a document from her bosom.

"I have here," she said, "a mandamus from the federal court directing you to cease ostracizing me on the ground that in ostracizing me you interfere with interstate commerce."

Thus again had law operated to fortify wealth in the bastions of privilege.—Detroit Journal.

Home Life in Porto Rico.

To one unaccustomed to tropical conditions the furnishing of the Porto Rican home would at first sight seem meager, but it is quite ample. A short residence will demonstrate that nearly 500 years of experience with the unpleasant features of life in the West Indies have been crowned by a survival of the fittest in house furnishing as in other matters.

Austrian bent wood furniture and also wickerwork and willow ware constitute the main equipment of the parlors and living rooms. Upholstered furniture is unknown and undesired, little or no attempt being made at decoration except in the matter of embroidery and fine handmade lace work. Hundreds of yards of crochet work are used in the embellishment of a single canopied bed. This work is the chief delight of the Porto Rican housewife.

The walls are for the most part bare, but here and there a painting of merit may be seen. The sofa pillow is the one great feature of the home. It is everywhere, in every conceivable size, shape and material. Ferns of gigantic size and exquisite formation, as well as broad spreading palm leaves, are used to festoon the walls and arched doorways. Cut fresh from day to day, they render the dark, cool rooms inviting and attractive. Potted tropical plants in great variety abound within and without the house.—Harper's Bazar.

They Omitted This.

Mr. Dukane—It seems to me that the British neglected one thing which would have helped them to win sooner.

Mr. Gaswell—What is that?

HIS MONEY WAS STOLEN

And a Young Man Known in Peterborough is Under Arrest.

The Toronto News says:—"In the arrest last night at midnight of Willis McKinnon by Detective Slemin the department of police believes that it has solved the mystery of several peculiar thefts which have been reported from the Palmer House in the past month or so. McKinnon has been employed there as a night clerk, and is a young man of rather swell proclivities. One of the episodes upon which the arrest was based occurred a short time ago. A gentleman named Albert Bogan, who was on his way from Cleveland to Peterborough to visit with friends, came to the Palmer House late at night and was shown up to his room by the accused. He retired, putting his money under his pillow. In the morning $35 had been stolen. He reported the theft to the detective department, stating that he suspected McKinnon, but it was not regarded as advisable to arrest him then. A watch was set, however, and it is now claimed that the authorities have evidence to show that he has been caught in two instances of retaining money paid by guests to the house. The prisoner was arraigned on all three charges and remanded until the 24th."

Bogan is a Peterborough man now working in Cleveland. McKinnon was formerly employed at hotels in town.

to avoid further damage. The day we came down we had a sight of the commando, but they did not come within range of us. We did not take the trouble to give them chase. We saw nothing of them until last night. While sitting in the guard tent about 12.30 the sentry asked me to come out with my glasses. I went out and found that several mounted men were coming towards the bridge. I had all my men turn quickly out and take position for defence. When they were about 25 yards from us I called to them to surrender, as I had them all covered and would fire on them if they did not dismount and hand over their arms. Three of them at once did so, but the other five at once wheeled their horses and started off. I gave the order to fire on them. The result of our night's work was four prisoners and one of the enemy killed, while one of my men was slightly wounded through the right forearm.

I am going down to Cape Town tomorrow with the prisoners, who, we have found out, are some rebels who went to Bloemfontein some time ago and gave up their arms and were allowed to return to their farms after taking the oath of allegiance.

I received the parcel sent to me by some kind friends in Peterborough and must say I am very thankful to all who contributed. I went direct to No. 9 Field Hospital and gave most of the contents to the patients there. I reserved for myself the pipe and about half the tobacco, also the hasrack. The recipients all join with me in thanking the givers.

It is simply heartrending to visit the hospitals in Bloemfontein. The number of deaths there is almost incredible. For instance, take the official returns for May—540 deaths in one month and that in only one town. This has been an awful campaign.

I have another very painful thing to tell you of. That is the death of an old Peterborough boy, Pte. Fred Vanorman, who passed away on Friday night last in hospital at Bloemfontein after several weeks' illness. I was with him at the last, and am very pleased to say he was prepared to meet his God. His last words were to ask all his chums at home to meet him in Heaven.

Regards to all enquiring friends,

FORMERLY PASTOR HERE

Death of Rev. Jas. Brock at Kingston at a Very Advanced Age.

One of the oldest Methodist ministers of Canada, and one who had been located for a time in Peterborough, died yesterday in Kingston in the person of Rev. James Brock, whose son was employed in the electric works. A telegram yesterday afternoon announced the father's death, and the son left for home to attend the obsequies.

The Kingston News thus records the death:—

This morning the oldest Methodist minister in Canada, and in all possibility the oldest minister in America, passed away in the person of Rev. James Brock, at his residence, 261 Queen-st. He had been ailing for some time, and at his extreme age, ninety-six years, the end was not unexpected.

Born in the county of Longford, Ireland, in 1804, he came to this country when about twenty years of age. He was ordained and entered the Methodist ministry in 1830, his first station being at Perth. In 1837 and 1838 he was stationed at Ottawa, then called Bytown. Later he went to Gananoque, Quebec, Stanstead, St. John, Huntington, Ottawa, Brockville, Guelph, Peterborough, Prescott, St. Catharines, and lastly at Lindsay. At several of these places he spent the full term of three years. This list by no means includes all the localities at which he was stationed.

Mr. Brock was one of the delegates to the Canadian Wesleyan Conference meeting in 1853, with a view of obtaining a union with the Canada Eastern District, which then belonged to the Methodist church of the United States. He was also delegate to the first General Conference of the Methodist church, held in Toronto in 1874. He was chairman of the Ottawa district from 1855 to 1858, of the Brockville one from 1858 to 1861, at Guelph from 1861 to 1864, at Peterborough from 1864 to 1868, at St. Catharines from 1868 to 1871, and at Lindsay from 1871 to 1875. In the year last named, while at Lindsay, and after being on the list of active ministers for forty-five years, Mr. Brock was superannuated.

With his death passes away the last of the old British missionaries in America.

Deceased married a daughter of Major Beach, who at one time had charge of Tete du Pont barracks.

One brother, Mr. A. Brock, of Missouri, and one son, Mr. Arthur M. Brock, of Kingston, are the survivors.

At the time of the memorable battle of the Windmill Mr. Brock was the clergyman that acted as chaplain to a number of the prisoners that were hanged shortly after the battle.

Mr. Brock was a member of Sydenham-st. Methodist church. The funeral will occur from 261 Queen-st. to Cataraqui cemetery at 2.30 p.m. to-morrow.

A Good Thing.

(Montreal Gazette.)

No less than ten members of the House of Commons, who ordinarily support the Government, voted against it in the division on the motion to adopt the report of the majority of the committee of enquiry into the emergency food contract. It is a long time since anything so unusual has been recorded in connection with a parliamentary issue. The effect will not be lost for a long time. The vote will stand as a danger signal to all Ministers against risking their reputations for the sake of a party supporter who has offended the public sense of right. That is what Dr. Devlin did. The evidence was clear from beginning to end. The wrong was established beyond doubt. The public recognized this and many of the more independent Liberal newspapers pointed it out, and intimated their idea of the Government's duty in the matter. The least that Dr. Borden could be held guilty of was neglect, and neglect in a matter that touched almost every individual in the country. To needlessly imperil a soldier in war is a grave matter; to do it for the sake of a money-grabbing contractor is a crime. The Liberal majority of the committee were blind to this, blind to their duty to the soldiers, to the country, to the Government, and to justice, and the Ministers they were foolishly trying to serve had not the sense to set them right. The majority's report was an affront to the intelligence of the people; it was an attempt to ram a lie down the throat of Parliament. It succeeded in a sense, but it would have been better for the cause its framers had at heart had it failed. The judgment of the minority, recorded by their votes against the result of the report, will be many times more effective than the ukase of the majority. It may not affect this Government's conduct, for it is so wedded to its idols that it may not leave them, but it will make future Governments more careful of their honor, whatever their complexion may be. It is a good thing.

CLEAN MEN IN POLITICS

A Timely Article on the Bad Influence in Politics.

Addressing the alumni of Toronto University the other day, Sir William Meredith said there were too many who spoke of politics as a dirty stream which no decent men ought to enter—adding that if the stream is dirty it is because the men who ought to keep it pure permit it to be so. The case could not well be more tersely put. The majority of men who enter public life—which is politics—do so with honest intentions, so far as they are personally concerned. The average member of Parliament or of the Legislature is a man of worth and good standing, which he does not lose by gaining such a mark of the confidence of his fellows as election to represent them confers, and the average elector is not a boodler, nor a man looking for his price. Between the elector and the representative there is, however, a class, comparatively small in number, who are "on the make," who assert an influence they do not possess, and whose effrontery imposes on both voter and member. They are corrupt and corruptionists, and by their efforts create the demand for campaign funds which they dissipate where they do not grab them. To these "the machine" is the acme of political organization, and when they persuade the better class of men into their way of working there are scandals that make the whole country ashamed. These rascals are not wholly unsupported in high quarters. They could not continuously flourish except the strength of some men of influence were exerted in their behalf; and it is in this fact that their chief power of mischief lies. Nobody would care what happened to a Pritchett or a Bole, or any other worker of iniquity in election contests; but men allow themselves to be persuaded to care for the men for whom a Pritchett or a Bole worked, and they offer a passive or visible resistance to the efforts to punish an active criminal that might also bring shame on some whose outward standing it is deemed desirable to maintain. Allied to this gang of evil doers are men who are looking for little jobs of financial benefit to themselves. One gets a contract without tender, which he exploits for profit; another cheats in army supplies; another does some other dirty job. Then reputable men whose conscience is offended by the venality take the burden of protecting the grabbers on their shoulders, and make the whole party seem responsible for the crime or the weakness of the few. Such action is neither good morality nor good politics, and those who alone profit by it are those who should be driven into the obscurity from which they should not have emerged. They may now and again be Ministers, and now and again members of Parliament, but generally they do not rise to such dignity, and none but themselves would suffer by their opportunities being destroyed. Each party has them and each party would be better off without them. The way to get rid of them is simple. The force to be employed against them can best come from within the party to which they are fastened. It can be exerted best quietly, by the straight men, who are the majority, giving it to be understood that they will neither support crooked work nor screen crooked men. The country has lately seen some action on this line, and the result has been good. There is strong reason to hope that it will see more, and that the effect on the stream of politics will be so great that not even the unthinking will say that clean men are out of place in public life, which is politics. There is nowhere that clean men are more needed, or where it is more needed that clean men should assert themselves. —Montreal Gazette.

COL. DENISON'S LETTER

An Argument for Raising Revenue by Means of Tariffs.

Lt.-Col. George T. Denison, of Toronto, who has been in England for some time, writes in the London Daily Mail as follows:—

When one considers the enormous armament and military preparations of all the great nations—and see the extraordinary efforts that are being made in many of them to increase their naval power, one cannot help wondering what is the ultimate object.

The German Emperor made a significant speech on last New Year's Day to his generals, in which he said, "The navy must be equal to the army, then I shall be able to procure for Germany the place among foreign nations which she has not yet obtained." France and Russia are also devoting earnest thought to the same question.

Our Empire must not shut its eyes to all this. No one can feel certain that peace will continue, and it is the duty of every Englishman, as well as every Colonist, to consider carefully what can be done to protect our Empire in case war should unfortunately break out.

Rifle clubs would be an important element of strength in case of invasion; but if we lost the command of the sea there would be no necessity for an enemy to invade us, for if they simply cut off all supplies of food, they could under present conditions starve the United Kingdom into surrender in six or eight months.

In 1781 a sudden combination of the French, Dutch and Spanish fleets enabled them to secure the temporary command of the sea, which caused the surrender of Lord Cornwallis and the loss of the American colonies. In another war the man directing the navy may not be infallible, and the fortune of war might for a time be against us. Should we then be in a position to hold on and fight on until the Empire got a chance to pull itself together again? There is only one sure way for the mother country to make certain of defending her freedom and independence as a nation, and that is to grow on her soil as much food as it is capable of producing. It is folly for a great and wealthy nation to be dependent upon possible enemies for the food to feed her people. No nation can be independent unless self-dependent.

Lord Roseberry said at the beginning of the war that "we should muddle through the war somehow." He was counting on the dogged obstinacy of a race that never knows when it is beaten, but fights on and on until it succeeds.

This quality of persistent endurance, however, cannot overcome starvation except for a few days only—it will be at once admitted that a nation could not muddle through starvation.

It must not be forgotten that the complete and absolute command of the sea does not guard against loss of the food supply, for an embargo by the two great food exporting countries would necessarily be followed by an embargo in all food importing countries at once, and in all exporting countries as soon as their surplus was exported. There are very few nations that would allow their people to starve in order that they might give us food. In fact, it is certain, there are none.

In view of all the dangers that the future may bring forth, the resources of the whole Empire should be organized for the common defence. An Imperial Conference should be called soon to consider how far we can all agree to work together, and a small duty should be levied at every port in every part of the whole Empire on all foreign products to raise a fund for Imperial defence. This would provide the necessary means, would give mutual trade benefits that would bind all together, and would tend to increase the production of everything the Empire needs upon its own soil.

There is a deep-rooted prejudice in the minds of some against raising revenue by tariffs. It is urged that it destroys trade, and is ruinous to the country that adopts it. England has adopted one policy, and her exports have remained at a standstill practically for the last 30 years, in spite of the fact that she has opened up immense new territories during that time, which should have largely increased her trade. Other nations who have not been afraid of levying duties, and whose ruin has been for years predicted, go on prospering and increasing their trade marvellously. For example, the United Kingdom's exports in 1870 were £244,000,000, in 1899, £265,400,000, and diagram published by the "Commercial Intelligence" on March 10 last shows that during the intervening years the average was below both the above figures. Germany and the United States have adopted a different fiscal policy, and their exports have largely increased, Germany's in 1873 being £116,000,000, in 1899, £207,500,000, or almost double. The exports of the United States rose from £78,000,000 in 1870 to £265,000,000 in 1899; and these experiences were under systems which theorists predicted would certainly bring ruin upon them.

If the Empire can increase her own internal food supply, provide funds for Imperial defences, and bind all the parts together by mutual trade benefits simply by raising war taxes by duties, no trade theories which in other countries have been proved to be fallacies should be allowed to stand in the way.

WEEDS IN WALKS

A Certain Method by Which They May be Destroyed.

A correspondent, signing himself "One of Your Subscribers," writes to the Mail and Empire as follows regarding a matter of interest to Peterborough residents in common with those of other places:—

Feeling sure that thousands of subscribers to your valuable paper would like to know how to prevent weeds from growing up through flat walks and in other similar places, or, for that matter, in gravel walks, may say, I have found that the most satisfactory way to remedy this trouble is by using a solution made with one tin of Gillett's lye to about four gallons of water. For use between slabs in walks, it is necessary to be careful not to get any of the solution on the paint or woodwork. It must be poured down between the slabs carefully, and the result will be that the weeds and grass will be killed, and in this way hundreds of nice lawns in this city and elsewhere can be made still nicer in appearance, as, to my mind, nothing looks worse than to see a walk uncared for. For use on a gravel walk or road, the solution can be sprinkled on with an ordinary watering can.

Mr. Foy Remained With His Party.

(Toronto Telegram, Ind.)

There is not a Liberal in Ontario who will privately pretend to say that J. J. Foy, Q. C., the life-long Conservative, would have received the offer of a judgeship if his presence in the Ontario House had not been dangerous to the Ross Government.

The offered judgeship, in intent and in effect, was a bribe to take a lion out of the path of Hon. G. W. Ross.

There is no moral difference between the Government which attempts to bribe an able and distinguished lawyer away from his party with a judgeship and the heeler who attempts to bribe the needy and the greedy voter away from his party with a $5 bill. This offer to Mr. Foy was proof that the Ross Government feels its weakness, with all its boasting about North Renfrew, and was proof also that the Laurier Government was prepared to use judgeships as the heelers of both parties have used $5 bills.

It is not to the purpose to argue that Mr. Foy's distinguished abilities entitled him to promotion. There are other lawyers, Liberal and Conservative, whose distinguished abilities entitle them to promotion; a promotion which is not offered to them, and which would not have been offered to Mr. Foy if the interests of the Ross Government had not demanded his removal from the Ontario legislation.

PEKIN MINISTERS ARE SAFE AND SOUND

This is the Official Report at Paris--Russia Said to be Secretly Negotiating--Sir Francis Grenfell to Command British in China.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY

Victoria, B.C., July 19.—Details received here tell of awful tortures inflicted on Rev. V. C. Norman, a missionary who was killed by Boxers. A Tien Tsin Correspondent writing on July 17 says he fell into the hands of Li, the head man of a Town near by who had vowed vengeance on missionaries. Li had him stripped, bound to to a post, an iron collar placed around his neck. He was then prodded and stabbed. Molten lead was poured on his naked body and he was then hacked to pieces.

RUSSIA DECLARES WAR

New York. July 19.—The London Correspondent of the Journal and Advertiser asserts that, having satisfied itself that the Imperial government of China is not only countenancing the acts of the Boxers but also directing their movements and regular Chinese troops wiil have invaded Siberia the Russian Covernment yesterday handed the Chinese envoy at St. Petersburg his passports and requested him and the members of his mission to leave the country.

VICEROY OF NAKING AS EMPEROR

London, July 19.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Express cables under yesterday's date: The Consuls acting as representatives of the powers have unaminously agreed that Lien Kau Yeip, the Viceroy of Naking, shall be regarded as the emperor of China, so far as the collection of the revenue is concerned. Liew Kaw Yeip has always been friendiy towards foreigners and the consuls believe they may place implicit confidence in him. The Express correspondent at Tokio cables: The Japanese government fears that Russia and Germany may not accept the command of Japanese senior officers who would necessarily take charge of the army corps, and desires assurances on this point before giving orders for the embarkation of troops. This may make a further delay of several weeks.

MINISTERS AT PEKIN SAFE AND SOUND

Paris, July 19.—An official telegram from Shanghai, dated July 13, states that according to the governor of Shan Tung, the foreign ministers and their families at Pekin are safe and sound but that danger is still very great. The viceroy according to the despatch informed the consulate Carpo that he had telegraphed to Pekin urging the protection of the foreign legation.

SIR FRANCIS GRENFELL WILL COMMAND

London, July 19.—A despatch from Shanghai received here to-day reports that the losses of the Chinese in tbe fighting at Tien Tsin was upwards of 3,000. It is understood that Lieut.-Gen. Sir Francis Grenfell, at present Governor of Malta, will have command of the British forces in China. In connection with the story that Prince Tuan's forces have been ordered to march to Wei Hai Wei, it is considered as significand that Indian troops arriving at Hong Kong have been ordered to proceed to Wei Hai Wei. A Shanghai despatch reports that Russia has been making secret negotiations with Prince Tuan's government with the connivance of Li Hung Chang.

RUSSIA'S BIG PREPARATION

London, July 19—Burn. Murdoch Careau, agent of Pritchard Morgan, in Pekin, who has just reached London after a 60 days journey by way of Validostock, over the Trans-Siberian Railway to Moscow, says that Russia, before he left, was actively mobolizing troops in central, east and west Siberia. The Trans-Siberian Railway was conveying 30,000 men toward Manchuria.

Parliament and Provincial Rights.

(Montreal Gazette.)

There is a debatable question in the issue raised by the Senate's action on the bill providing for the appointment of three new judges for this province as to whether, a good and economical rearrangement of judicial duties being impracticable in view of the state of public opinion or prejudice, it is well to leave Montreal with an insufficient number of judges to its work. There is no question about the right of either House of Parliament to discuss in all its phases any demand for the payment of extra judges that may come up. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier defended the measure which the Senate had amended, on what he called the "broad ground of provincial rights," he was saying nothing for the thing that any Canadian needed to care about. Provincial rights are proper enough to maintain within their sphere, but it is no right of a province to tell Parliament what it shall do in regard to any measure that is brought before it. The criticism that this particular bill has been subjected to both in the House of Commons and the Senate has been proper and in the public interest. Its effect is calculated to be good, while that of such declarations as Sir Wilfrid Laurier made is only mischievous. The Parliament of Canada is not a tail of any provincial kite, though this Government seems ready to assume the dependant position.

POWLEY'S FEARFUL DEATH.

Electric Current of 2200 Volts Took Away His Life.

He Put His Hand on a Shelf in the Carborundum Works at Niagara Falls, Ont., and Was Killed Instantly — He Ejaculated "Oh!" and Was Limp in Death When Released a Minute Later.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 18.—William Powley, locomotive fireman, G.T.R. yards here, left his vegetable garden, where he had been working, and went into the Canadian branch of the Carborundum works, situated on Buttery-avenue, north of the G.T.R. yards, to get a drink of water at 2.45 o'clock this afternoon. He entered the works in the main building after getting his drink. He passed out thru the furnace room, where two men, James Coppin and Charles Hatt, were busy attending to the furnaces. Powley stopped to speak to Hatt, whom he was acquainted with. In doing so he placed his hand on a wooden bracket shelf, on which sat the metallic vat holding the water rheostat.

No sooner did Powley place his hand on the shelf than the 2200 volt current drew him up close and killed him instantly. The men heard him cry "Oh," and ran to his assistance. Coppin grabbed hold of Powley and was knocked out of the door, Hatt tried to shove him off, but was knocked against the wall. They grabbed a wood-handled spade and pried him off.

The men say Powley was less than a minute in contact with the current, and was limp when released, and just breathing. Dr. Kellow was telephoned for and arrived within 10 minutes, but life was extinct. The men worked hard to resuscitate the man, but to no avail. The hand that came in contact with the current was badly roasted on the finger tips and palm.

FIGHTING THE DEMON DRINK.

Prohibitionists Say They Will Not Stand Defeat By Parliament.

Toronto, July 19.—The program of the Dominion Alliance, expressed in their convention at Richmond Hall yesterday, was largely a reiteration of the principles adopted by the Ontario Council on Tuesday. President J. R. Dougall of Montreal presided. The treasurer's statement was presented by Mr. William Orr, and showed the expenditure for the year to have been $833, leaving a balance due treasurer of $176. Reports were presented in the afternoon. The report of the Committee on Parliamentary action and Legislation, called upon all citizens throughout the Dominion to resent the injustice done by the Dominion Government in failing to recognize the mandate of the electorate in the plebiscite of 1898, and urged them to organize to secure the return only of men who can be relied upon to help knock out the demon drink.

The recommendation was adopted, and the Council reaffirmed the action of the Ontario Alliance of Tuesday, in deciding to organize immediately to secure the defeat of the approaching general elections of all members of Parliament who voted against carrying out the will of the people.

The selling of liquor in military canteens was again denounced and the authorities called upon to abolish the practice.

The cigarette habit was also denounced and the anti-crusade of the W.C.T.U., looking for the total prohibition and sale in Canada of cigarettes and material for manufacturing the same, was endorsed.

The principle of Women suffrage was again approved, and will be promoted by the council as far as possible.

A resolution by M. Auger, ex-M.P., of Sheppard, Que., to have the question decided at the next general election by vote of the people, the law to take effect one year from the vote, if favorable, was laid under the table.

Officers of the Year.

The officers and Executive Committee were appointed for the current year: Hon. President, Hon. A. Vidal; president, J. R. Dougall; vice-presidents, two for each province; corresponding secretary, J. H. Spence; recording secretary, J. H. Carson; treasurer, W. H. Orr.

The convention then adjourned.

The Japs' Inner Circle.

The Japan Daily Mail said recently: To eat with chopsticks and sit on mats and wear big sleeved coats do not bring a man any nearer to genuine intimate intercourse with the Japanese people. The language is also needed. Yet, even when the language is added, something still remains to be achieved, and what that something is we have never been able to discover, though we have been considering the subject for [illegible] years. No foreigner has ever succeeded in being admitted to the inner circle of Japanese intercourse.

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator :

Eczema on the Scalp

Would Itch and Burn until the Child Screamed with Agony—A Wonderful Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The case recorded here is one of the worst ever brought to the attention of Toronto's best physicians, and when doctors gave up all hope of recovery, Dr. Chase's Ointment was successful in producing a perfect cure.

Mr. James Scott, 136 Wright avenue, Toronto, states:—"My boy, Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of Eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original sores dried up, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment is putting it very mildly."

THE SESSION IN BRIEF.

At last Parliament has prorogued. What a record for the Government has been made during the session.

Two Ministers against whose management of important departments charges were made, were absent from their places enjoying life in Europe.

Ministers were weeks and weeks behind in their work, thus delaying business and wasting the people's money.

The blundering and incompetence which has marked the course of the present Ministers all along was again evidenced on many occasions and in many ways.

Demands have been made for an unprecedented expenditure, although the men now in office promised to reduce expenses.

Railway subsidies have been voted by millions, by those men who called them "bribes" and condemned them generally.

Scandals have been exposed, but investigations demanded have been refused or the guilty ones have been whitewashed in such disgraceful manner that even the Liberal members deserted their leaders.

The Ministers have been unable to make proper defence for their course, and continue to endeavor to make out a strong case for themselves by much large talk of what they have done and by abuse of their opponents.

The session has not strengthened the Government, as it has been characterized by unbusinesslike methods in the conduct of affairs and by a desire merely to make material for an election campaign.

It has been the record of politicians in office, not that of statesmen.

ANOTHER GOOD REASON.

The Mail and Empire gives another reason why the Laurier-Tarte-Sifton Government should go. It is No. 11 and is as follows :—

The mistake that was made in admitting Indian corn free is one of the reasons why they should go.

By the late Government it was held that the United States should not have Canada as a free market for corn without some reciprocal return, as, for example, freedom for our barley in the United States market.

Mr. Fielding, however, placed corn on the free list without receiving any reciprocal return whatever, and in the face of the Dingley additions to the United States duties on Canadian products.

By Mr Charlton a strong protest was entered against this action. Mr. Charlton said corn was one of the keys to the situation, and we ought not to take the duty off until the United States gave us an equivalent concession.

In spite of Mr. Charlton's warning the duty was removed.

Now the men who came to office promising to reduce or remove the United States duties on Canadian produce have removed Canadian duties on United States produce instead.

In addition there are higher United States duties against Canadian produce, and our Government has voluntarily destroyed the lever which would have opened the American market to our barley, our hay, and our potatoes.

It would be a decided change to have the next war in a country where places have names that are pronounceable and somewhat intelligible. South African names were bad, but Chinese Foos, Chings, and Tsings are even more confusing.

Tom Lewis, who has figured in the "machine" and crooked election work, has been given an appointment by the Dominion Government in the Customs Department. Thus the Government of "the party of purity" "reward virtue and punish vice." What do the honest people of Canada think of the men who said they did not know and had no connection with the wicked men of "the machine?"

It is not necessary for anyone to pretend a great knowledge of China, for ignorance regarding that country seems to be a pretty common complaint even in well-informed circles. Here is what Lord Salisbury said on the subject:—"In discussing the utterances of statesmen and the writings of correspondents, one must remember that they are to gauged by the standard of comparative ignorance, rather than by comparative knowledge. No European really knows anything about China. Some know less than others, but that is about all that it amounts to."

HARD FIGHTING.

Boers Made Determined Attack on British Positions Near Pretoria—Gallant Work of Canadians.

London, July 19.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 17.—Yesterday the enemy made a determined attack on the left of Pole-Carew's position and along our left flank, commanded by Hutton. The posts held by the Irish Fusiliers and the Canadian Mounted Infantry, under Lieut.-Col. Anderson, were most gallantly defended. The enemy made repeated attempts to assault the positions, coming in close range and calling to the Fusiliers to surrender. The enemy suffered severely. They had fifteen killed and fifty wounded, and four taken prisoners. The British casualties were seven killed, including the Canadian Lieutenants Borden and Birch, thirty wounded, and twenty-one missing.

"Ian Hamilton's column advanced to Waterval yesterday unopposed and to-day proceeded to Haman's Kraal.

"Fifteen hundred Boers, with five guns, managed to break through the cordon formed by Hunter's and Rundle's divisions between Bethelehem and Ficksburg. They were making towards Lindley, closely followed by Paget's and Broadwood's brigades."

J. M. A. Wolmarans Arrested.

Pretoria, July 18.—J. M. A. Wolmarans of the Transvaal Executive Council, has been arrested at his house within the British lines near Hatherley. British gold worth £6,-found cokgmm mm mm mm mm mm 000 and a quantity of arms were found concealed in the house.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S SYMPATHY.

Wires the Details of Lieut. Borden's Death to His Father.

Ottawa, July 19.—Lieut. Borden died whilst leading a gallant attack against the Boer flank. The following telegrams from Lord Lansdowne to the bereaved father speaks strongly for the courage of the young Canadian officer:

London, July 18.—Lord Roberts telegraphs that in a hard-fought engagement near Pretoria on the 16th inst., in which the Canadian Mounted Infantry behaved with the greatest gallantry, Lieuts. H. Borden and J. Birch were killed. If, as I fear, the former is a kinsman of yours, please accept my deep sympathy. (Signed) Lansdowne.

"Dr. Borden, Ottawa: Continuing my telegram to-day, following is extract from telegram from Lord Roberts: "The two young Canadian officers were killed while gallantly leading their men in counter attack on enemy's flank at critical juncture of assault upon our position. Lieut. Borden has been twice before brought to my notice in despatches for gallant and intrepid conduct."

"I deeply deplore loss you have sustained. (Signed) Lansdowne."

Came From St. Catharines.

St. Catharines, July 19.—Lieut. Birch, who with Lieut. Borden was killed in the engagement near Pretoria, belonged to the 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines. He went with the second contingent as an attached officer for duty.

Canadian Captured By the Boers.

Ottawa, July 19.—Lord Minto has received the following cable message from Sir Alfred Milner:

"Cape Town, July 17.—Regret to report that 211, Trooper Sydney MacLaughlin, 2nd Battalion, Canada Mounted Rifles, was taken prisoner at Reitvlei, July 13th."

The missing trooper was formerly a member of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Not a Widow After All.

Toronto, July 19.—After wearing widow's weeds for about a month and mourning the loss of her husband, Mrs. De Rochejocquillin of 106 Shuter street, has received word that he is not dead after all. The news came in the form of a letter, dated June 8, at Bloemfontein, from her husband, who had been seriously wounded, and was about to be conveyed to England to be operated upon.

168-DAY SESSION PROROGUED

Three Thousand People Attended to See Parliament End.

Governor-General in Royal State and the Military Pageant—The Block Between the Senate and the Commons Had Been Bridged Over—All Signs of Friction Wiped Out—The Governor's Speech From the Throne.

Ottawa, July19 .—Yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock the House prorogued, after a 168-days' session. There was a small gathering of Ottawa society in the Senate when His Excellency Lord Minto read his speech, but outside, in front of the main entrance to the House, fully 3,000 persons were gathered to see the red-coated Governor-General's Foot Guards and the mounted, lance-holding, brazen-helmeted Princess Louise Dragoons. The soldiers, headed by the Guards' band, marched up the hill at 3 o'clock. Fifteen minutes later the Governor-General and suite appeared, and the royal salute was given with a flourish. The band played "God Save the Queen," and the function of prorogation was begun by the firing of a salute from Nepean Point.

The Election Act.

The House of Commons met yesterday morning, but did nothing. In the afternoon the amendments to the Election Act, made by the Senate, were considered by the Commons. The Senate had in the morning killed the Election Act, because the Commons refused to concur in the P. E. I. amendments. But between 1 and 2 o'clock, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick had had a conference, and the Senate agreed to pass the Election Act provided that the N. W. T. amendment were accepted and the amendments re P. E. I. were incorporated in the Dominion Controverted Elections Act. Hence, Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced a bill at 2.15 to amend the Controverted Elections Act, providing for a scrutiny of ballots by a Superior Court Judge within 20 days of the election. The Commons agreed to this. The bill was read a third time and passed. The Senate concurred in it, and all signs of friction between the two Houses were wiped out, when it was announced that the Quebec Judges' bill was killed.

Then, at the bidding of Black Rod, the Commoners assembled in the Senate, where the military pageant, headed by His Excellency, greeted their gaze. In both languages Lord Minto read the following:

Speech From the Throne.

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In relieving you from further attendance in Parliament, I desire to thank you for the diligent attention which you have given to the labors of an exceptionally protracted session. When Parliament opened in the month of February last the thoughts of the whole Empire were centred on the war which was then raging in South Africa. The marked successes which have since attended the British arms, and in which our Canadian volunteer soldiers have taken a conspicuous and glorious part, justify the hope that peace will soon be restored in that distant land.

The large number of private bills, with industrial objects, considered and passed is a good indication of the great expansion of the business of the country.

I desire to congratulate you on the buoyant state of the revenue. The large receipts have enabled my Government to provide liberally for the public service and to maintain Canada's strong financial position.

A marked feature of the session has been the adoption of many important measures which must beneficially affect the future of the Dominion. The improvements in the act relating to the banks will tend to perfect a system of banking of which Canada has reason to feel proud. The extension of the British preference in our tariff will tend to reduce the burden of taxation and stimulate the growth of every trade with the mother country.

The measure you have passed respecting the admission of Canadian inscribed stock to the list of securities in which trustees in Great Britain may invest, is being followed by similar legislation in the Imperial Parliament, which will, in due course, consummate this very important improvement in the financial affairs of the Dominion.

There is reason to believe that the legislation of this session will have important and favorable results. I particularly congratulate you upon the passing of the Conciliation Act, which, it is confidently hoped, will not only improve the condition of the industrial classes, but will also better promote the relations which ought to exist between capital and labor.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons—I thank you for the liberal provision which you have made for the public service.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate: Gentlemen of the House of Commons—It affords me much pleasure to observe that the prosperity of Canada continues unabated, and I pray that Divine Providence may continue to look with favor upon this Dominion.

The assemblage rose as Lord Minto went out to his carriage at the main Commons door, guarded by the red coats, the Nepean Point guns fired their customary salute, the procession formed, the band played, prorogation was consummated.

At Chicago both the Postal and Western Union Telegraph Companies have decided to abandon their Board of Trade quotations after July 31. It is said this will affect bucket shops fatally.

THE MASONIC GRAND LODGE

Delegates Welcomed to London For 45th Annual Convention.

London, Ont., July 18.—When the forty-fifth annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Canada, A.F. & A.M., opened in the Opera House here this afternoon M W Bro E T Malone, Q C, Toronto, Grand Master, presided.

After the seven hundred delegates had assembled, Mayor Rumball and members of the City Council were introduced, and cordially welcomed them to the city. The city lodges also tendered an address of welcome, in which reference was made in

The statistics from the 18 districts show an increase for the year of nearly 1250, giving a total active membership in the province of about 26,200.

The reception and welcoming of delegates having been concluded, Grand Master E. T. Malone delivered his annual address. He pays tribute to the loyalty of his deputies, to whose work he attributes the prosperity now noticeable.

Receipts the past year have exceeded those of any previous one; the membership has increased 1238, and the total membership of the Grand Lodge is now 26,195.

Touching reference was made to the gaps in the fraternity due to death.

The Endeavorers in London.

London, July 18.—Fully 50,000 persons attended to-day's meetings of the World's Convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the special feature of the program being the delivery of messages from the churches. Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, president of the Wesleyan Conference, said he conveyed from 3,000,000 Methodists of Great Britain the desire to form an alliance with every true soldier of Christ.

Right Rev. Mandell Creighton, Bishop of London, extended to the Christian Endeavor Society the heartiest welcome of his diocese, and assurances of the sympathy with this work of the large body of Christians he represented.

Dr. Parker of the City Temple urged American Christian Endeavorers to nominate Rev. Francis E. Clark and Rev. Charles M. Sheldon for the highest offices in the United States, as Christian men should be at the head of things.

Three Bylaws Voted on, Two Carried.

St. Catharines, July 18.—There were three different bylaws voted on here to-day, two of which carried and the third was defeated. The first was to aid by bonus the Welland Vale Manufacturing Company, Limited, to the amount of $4000 per year for 15 years; carried by 869 majority. The second to fix the taxation on the Kinleith Paper Company at $21,000, carried by 950 majority. The third was for $25,000 to build a new collegiate institute, defeated by 400. The Welland Vale works, which were destroyed by fire a few months ago, will now be rebuilt.

She Was Pale and Languid

Too Nervous to Sleep, and Daily Grew Weaker and Weaker—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restored Health and Vigor.

Mrs. E. McLaughlin, 85 Parliament street, Toronto, states:—"My daughter was pale, weak, languid, and very nervous. Her appetite was poor and changeable. She could scarcely drag herself about the house, and her nerves were completely unstrung. She could not sleep for more than half an hour at a time without starting up and crying out in excitement.

"As she was growing weaker and weaker I became alarmed, and obtained a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. She used this treatment for several weeks, and from the first we noticed a decided improvement. Her appetite became better, she gained in weight, the colour returned to her face, and she gradually became strong and well. I cannot say too much in favour of this wonderful treatment, since it has proved such a blessing to my daughter."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a blood-builder and nerve restorer of most universal merit. In pill form, 50c. a box, at all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.

MASSACRES IN CHINA

Massacres in the Past That Have Stained the Pages of Modern Chinese History.

The pages of modern Chinese history are stained with blood—the blood of helpless and defenceless men and women. Since the days when Europeans first went to the Far East, but especially during the past forty years, there has been a constant succession of brutal murders—murders usually brought about solely by the passionate hatred of the yellow man for the white.

One of the most characteristic of these was the Ku Cheng massacre on Aug. 1st, 1895. The Church Missionary Society has a very successful enterprise in that city. There were many converts, and no one dreamed of any danger. Five lady missionaries lived in one house on the hills beyond the city during the summer heat, and close to them lived Mr. Stewart, the missionary in charge, his wife and five children.

AN AWFUL BIRTHDAY.

Aug. 1st was the birthday of one of the children, so early in the morning three of his brothers and sisters got up and went out on the hills to gather flowers. Hearing horns and drums, they ran to look at the procession. One Chinaman seized the eldest girl by the hair and beat her. She tore herself free from him and made for home, to find the house occupied by the mob. She caught a glimpse of her father making for her mother's room, and then no more was seen of either of them. Seeing the house burning, she got her little brothers and sisters and dragged them off. The baby she pulled from under the body of its dead nurse. Her two brothers and her little sister were all wounded.

An American missionary, hearing the riot, rushed up to help, but he was too late. In the brief time nine had been murdered, and two of the children soon died. The story of the death of these brave girls, one of whom, Miss Marshall, was the daughter of a Blackheath vicar, went with a thrill of horror through the land.

Why were they murdered? A proclamation had been issued among the people as follows:—

> Notice is hereby given that at the present time foreign barbarians are hiring evil characters to kidnap small children, that they may extract oil from them for use. I have a female servant, named Li, who has personally seen this done. I exhort you, good people, not to allow your children to go out. I hope you will act in accordance with this.

The mob did act on it.

WHAT LORD LOCH ENDURED.

The experiences of Lord Loch and his companions in 1857 present a tale of horror rarely equalled.

Henry Loch, then a young man of 30, was attached to Lord Elgin's punitive mission in China. Messrs. Wade and Parkes, the English interpreters, were sent forward to Lord Elgin, under a flag of truce, to arrange the terms of peace with the Chinese, and for part of the way Loch accompanied them. They saw that things looked threatening, so Loch tried to get back to the allied English and French generals, to tell them of the danger. He and Mr. Parkes, who were together at one spot, were seized, their arms bound, and they were led out to be beheaded in an outer court. A sudden tumult gave them a respite. Every possible indignity was inflicted on them. They were threatened, mocked, tightly bound, tortured. Swords were waved over them to frighten them. Last of all they were heavily manacled, shoved in a rough native cart and driven to Pekin.

The tortures of that ride were indescribable. At the best of times, with every comfort, it is a misery to ride on that rough road. But to see these men, bound, bruised, expecting instant death, it was torment beyond degree. Forty years afterwards Lord Loch would never recall it, the memories were so painful.

At Pekin they were hurried into the native prison, separated from one another, and left dependent on the kindliness of the Chinese criminals around them. The 13 French and 23 English who had been with them before their capture were also seized and placed under a strong guard.

When the English and French armies got to the gates of Pekin, some of these miserable captives returned.

THE BUTCHERY OF THE NUNS.

On June 21, 1870, came the infamous Tien Tsin massacre. The French Catholic missionaries and Sisters of Mercy had established a mission in Tien Tsin, and one of their agencies was an orphan home. A report got about among the natives that the Sisters were killing the children to use their hearts and eyes in the manufacture of some medical specific, much sought after in Europe.

Everybody knew that a storm was coming, and the French Consul was urged to take such steps as would show the slander to be false. But the consul thought such a request was a slur on his dignity, and refused to listen to it. The consul paid for his dignity with his life. No one fully knows what happened, for every European on the spot was fully done to death. The defenceless Sisters were butchered after nameless barbarities, and French cathedral and orphanage were set on fire. Twenty foreigners, including a Russian and his young bride, who were mistaken for French, were slain.

VICARIOUS SACRIFICES.

For the moment it seemed that a general uprising, such as that of the present hour, must follow. But in the end the Chinese authorities subdued the uprising, and executed a score of rioters. It was believed that the men executed were purchased victims, and that the real criminals escaped.

In 1875 came the murder of Mr. Margary, between Bahamo and Manwyne. Mr. Margary was pushing on from the Burmese territory, to make a journey for the British Government to Hankow. He had hardly crossed the frontier, when bands of native troops fell upon him and murdered him and his attendants. The treachery of the native officials who planned the murder brought on them very heavy punishment.

During the past few years the attacks on missions of every kind have been so frequent that to chronicle all of them would make a wearisome list. The Chinese, it is important to note, have mostly attacked the missionaries, not because of their religion, but because they are foreigners. In the north, French and German missionaries have been especial victims, though the mobs are not particular as to the nationality of the white man when they once set to work.

MONSTER ARMY OF A MILLION

Prince Tuan Mobilizes Them Into Many Different Corps.

This Great Military Movement Is On Account of the Appearance of Japanese Troops in China—Foreigners Fleeing to Shanghai—Tuan Also Issues An Edict for a General Rising—Li Hung Chang Leaves Canton to Anarchy.

St. Petersburg, July 18.—A despatch from Che Foo says: Prince Tuan has mobilized 960,000 men and divided them into different corps. The northern corps has been ordered to expel foreigners from Amur. The Pekin army, divided into four corps, was the first to operate against Mukden and occupy the roads between Pekin and Shan Pai Kuan; the second to concentrate at Tien Tsin and the third at Pekin, from whence a column numbering 40,000 will be sent to Wei Hai Wei and Tsin Tau, while the fourth corps will concentrate at Nankin.

There are now 23,000 Japanese troops in China.

The Chinese fleet is concentrating in the China Sea, and hostilities are expected.

A despatch from Nankin announces that Prince Tuan has ordered these great military movements, owing to the appearance of the Japanese in China. The Viceroy of Nankin has informed the foreign consuls there that he cannot be answerable for events in Chao Sin, Ningpo and Chu Chau. The foreigners are fleeing to Shanghai. Their position is alarming. Sixteen foreigners have arrived at Nankin from Ningpo, where the houses of foreigners have been burned and missionaries horribly maltreated. The rebellion has taken hold of southern China. The foreigners at Chu Chau and in Chan have been attacked and are fleeing panic-stricken.

EDICT FOR GENERAL RISING.

Situation at Shanghai is Growing More Threating Every Day.

London, July 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Express, under date of July 17, cables:

"Prince Tuan has issued an edict to fix a definite date for a general rising. What the date is I cannot ascertain, but it is doubtless an early one, for Prince Tuan is stated to have ordered all despatch in view of the arrival of more foreign troops. A large body of Chinese to-night is reported to be moving from Hupei in the direction of Shanghai. The situation here grows more threatening every day. The city is still without any means of defence and all the forts are being held by Chinese."

ALL DEPEND ON LI.

Canton Merchants Wept as Li Hung Chang Left For Pekin.

Hong Kong, July 17.—Li Hung Chang, disregarding all attempts of Europeans and Chinese to persuade him to remain, left Canton this morning for Pekin. Prior to his departure Chinese merchants and gentry of Canton strongly appealed to the Viceroy not to leave, and presented a petition setting forth that Canton, so long the prey to the depredations of robbers and pirates, had become peaceful during Li Hung Chang's Viceroyalty; that disturbances had been repressed with a strong hand, and the people enabled to live without being panic-stricken when dogs barked. The petitioners, this morning, it continued, learned with trembling that their protector was proceeding north and they wept as at the loss of a parent. The absence of rebellion and piracy being solely due to the presence of Li Hung Chang, the merchants were ready to cast themselves before the wheels of his chariot to prevent his departure.

Li Hung Chang at Hong Kong.

Brussels, July 18.—The Belgian consul at Hong Kong telegraphs that Li Hung Chang passed thru that city to-day on his way to the north. Before his departure the viceroy had a long interview with the Governor of Hong Kong.

The secretary of the legation at Shanghai telegraphs to-day that according to Chinese information the foreigners in Pekin have taken refuge in the palace of Prince Ching.

THE ALLIES INHARMONIOUS.

Although the Area of Rebellion in China is Continually Extending.

London, July 19.—(4 a.m.)—While evidence accumulates daily that China has long been preparing a formidable military organization in anticipation of the present conflict, and that the area of rebellion is continually extending, harmony among the allies, which is necessary to meet such a grave situation, is still deplorably lacking. The Russians have refused Admiral Seymour's request to hand over the restored Taku-Tien Tsin Railway to the English company, and it is rumored that Germany purposes taking a serious independent step, namely, to patrol the Yangtsekiang with German men-of-war. Such a step would be greatly resented by England.

Is Germany Grabbing, Too?

Still more alarming news has been conveyed to The Daily Express from Tokio to the effect that the apparent reluctance of Germany and Russia to consent to a Japanese commander for the army corps has led the Japanese Government to delay the forwarding of the division already mobilized.

What The Standard Says.

The Standard, in an alarmist editorial, says: "It is useless any longer to hide from ourselves the fact that China has declared war on civilization, and has plunged into the conflict with rabid frenzy. It is equally futile to discuss whether the hostilities are being waged by the Chinese Government inasmuch as it is evident that an administration of some kind exists, and is directing the anti-foreign movement. Unless unmistakable evidence exculpating the Pekin Government is promptly forthcoming the powers should treat China as a belligerent state, and act accordingly."

Germany's Course Applauded.

A similar line of comment is taken by the other morning papers. All applaud the course of Count Von Buelow, German Foreign Secretary, in stopping cipher telegrams from the Chinese Legation in Berlin; and all urge the other powers to follow Germany's example.

Russia Denies It.

The Russian general staff denies the report that the Chinese have captured Blagovestchensk, capital of the province of Amur, and it is reported from Irkutsk that the Russians have taken Aigun.

Killed at Tien Tsin.

A special despatch from Tien Tsin distributes the number of those killed at the capture of the native city as follows: Russians, 100; Japanese, 57; British, 40, and Americans, 37.

Boxer Proclamation at Shanghai.

The first Boxer proclamation has made its appearance in Shanghai. It declares that Kwan, the war god, desires the blood of foreigners. The Governors of the provinces of Hunan, Pupi and Honan have now openly joined Prince Tuan, and are marching overland with their armies to Pekin.

It is announced from Shanghai that Gen. Nieh has been killed, but there is no confirmation of the rumor from Tien Tsin.

Sir Robert Hart's Successor.

The consuls at Shanghai have agreed to regard the Viceroy of Nankin as the chief authority, so far as the collection of revenue is concerned. When the Viceroy was informed of this attitude, he appointed Mr. Taylor, statistical secretary of customs, to be inspector of customs ad interim, in succession to Sir Robert Hart.

ADMIRAL SEYMOUR'S ACCOUNT

Of the Capture of Tien Tsin Read By Mr. Brodrick in the House.

London, July 18.—In the House of Commons to-day Parliamentary Secretary Brodrick read a despatch from Admiral Seymour, dated at Taku, July 15, giving an account of the capture of the native city of Tien Tsin by the allied forces. According to this despatch on the morning of July 14 the Japanese blew up the gate and entered the city, the others following. On the right the Russians captured a battery on the bank of the Liu Tai Canal, consisting of 12 small guns. The other troops all engaged on the left. About 8000 in all were engaged, and over 700 were killed or wounded, the Japanese being the heaviest losers. The British had 20 killed and 93 wounded. The Chinese troops fled, in what direction is not known.

Germany Shuts China Off.

Berlin, July 18.—It is semi-officially announced that Baron Von Buelow, the imperial Minister of Foreign Affairs, has notified the Chinese legation here that until further notice it cannot be allowed to send telegrams in cipher or secret language and that telegrams in plain language must be submitted for approval.

CAPTURED 62 GUNS.

German Admiral Tells of Great Work Done By the Allies.

Berlin, July 18.—Admiral Von Bendemann, commander of the German squadron, in his account of the fighting at Tien Tsin on July 14, says:

"When the citadel was captured 62 guns fell into the hands of the allies."

Railway is Repaired.

The German commander says also: "Regular railway communication between Taku and Tien Tsin will be opened on July 18. It was decided to-day that the senior officers on the station should have military control of the line until it could be handed over to the ordinary authorities. The British admiral wished it to be handed over at once. The Russians have repaired the line and now occupy it."

CHINA IS AFTER RUSSIA NOW.

Work on the Manchurian Railway Has Been Stopped.

St. Petersburg, July 18.—Reports have been received by the Russian general staff from the Amur district showing that the Chinese have made serious preparations there and are now concentrated on the railway line from Aigun to Saghalien. They are well supplied with artillery and have large quantities of munitions. The Russian general, Cribovski, after reconnoitering the district, returned to Blagovetschensk, capital of the Province of Amur, on Monday.

Charbin in a Critical State.

Other official reports confirm the serious news of the stoppage of work on the Manchurian Railway, owing to the Chinese attacks, especially at Charbin, where an attack by 400 Chinese was repulsed on July 9. Charbin is in a critical state, being cut off from the west, south and north.

Russia Sent Troops.

Russian troops have been sent from different points to protect the railway. The Chinese, however, are still working on the eastern section of the line, which gives hope that energetic measures may succeed in restoring order.

Russia Will Command Allies.

In the opinion of the general staff the chief command of the allied forces at Tien Tsin will eventually devolve upon the Russian vice-admiral, Alexejeff, in conjunction with the Japanese commander-in-chief.

WANTED TO RING JAPAN IN.

China Made a Proposal to Japan to Destroy European Influence.

London, July 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express asserts that he has ascertained from an unimpeachable source that when the question of an alliance between China and Japan was under consideration last autumn the Empress Dowager sent a commissioner to Tokio with secret proposals to the Mikado.

"These proposals," says the correspondent, "contemplated the conclusion of a secret treaty, having the object of destroying all European and American influence in both China and Japan, the wholesale massacre of foreigners and the division of the whole of Eastern Asia from Burmah to Siberia between China and Japan. The special commissioner took a code prepared by Li Hung Chang and Sheng for secret communications between the Empress Dowager and the Mikado.

"The Japanese Emperor utterly declined to entertain the proposals."

Killed at Tien Tsin.

Toronto, July 19.—Mr. J. A. T. Lloyd, one of the masters of Upper Canada College, received a cablegram yesterday announcing that his brother, Lieut. Hy. T. Lloyd of the British cruiser Aurora, was killed in the fighting around Tien Tsin. The Lieutenant was 28 years of age, and was commissioned in 1891. The cablegram gave no details.

ANOTHER SESSION.

Latest Ottawa Rumor Says Another Will Be Held in November

Ottawa, July 18.—(Special.)—The latest rumor in the Liberal circles is that there will be a session of Parliament in November, when the Distribution bill will be introduced. A census will be taken in January, and the House will prorogue in March. An election will be held in June. A Cabinet Minister made a significant statement to a messenger to-day. The messenger asked for a position in the next Parliament. The Minister said, "Oh; I don't know! but that we will have another session. We are not sure of it among ourselves."

Cholera Killed Lieut. Carsley.

Montreal, July 18.—(Special.)—A cable to the family of Mr. S. Carsley yesterday afternoon contined the sad news of the death, in India, of Lieut. Edwin Carsley, fourth son of Montreal's well-known merchant. The message states that the young officer was attacked with cholera at Poona, India, and died in a few hours. The deceased was 20 years of age. He was educated at Clifton College and Sandhurst, for the Indian service, for which he left last April. He was attached to the Shropshire Regiment, light infantry.

Bust of Sir John Thompson.

Halifax, N.S., July 18.—A memorial bust of the late Sir John Thompson, erected by the Nova Scotia Bar Society, in the County Court House, this city, in memory of the departed jurist and statesman, was unveiled this afternoon by Lieut.-Governor Malachi Bowes Daly, in the presence of a goodly company of lawyers and friends of the late Premier of Canada.

Police Magistrate Harper of Whitby has sentenced William Wood to three months in the County Jail.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

A PRESENTATION

To Mr. M. A. Sorsoliel by Members of Charlotte-st. League.

On Monday evening last a very enjoyable time was spent by the members of the Charlotte-st. Epworth League. It was the occasion of the last of a series of addresses given by Mr. M. A. Sorsoliel on one of the books of the Epworth League Reading Course, "The New Citizenship." They were most ably given, and were appreciated by the large audiences every Monday night. After the address Mr. A. B. Cunningham stepped forward, and, after briefly going over the subjects and their practical value, presented Mr. Sorsoliel with a handsome present as a slight token of the appreciation of his hearers. Mr. Sorsoliel was completely surprised but replied most fittingly. Refreshments were served and a couple of chouruses by the choir closed a pleasant evening.

This event will prove a bonanza of bargains, as the goods offered are all new and bought for cash before the rise in prices. COL. HUGHES HAS BEEN WOUNDED

A LETTER TO ONE OF HIS LINDSAY COMRADES

He Received Injuries in Foot and Forehead That Are Not Yet Well.

The following letter from Colonel Sam. Hughes to Captain Williamson, of Lindsay, is published in the Watchman-Warder:—

Griquatown, 10th June, 1900.

My Dear Comrades,—From Faber's Put I think it was, you had my last letter. That is now a memorable spot. On June 3rd we left there and advanced towards the Carp mountain. That ridge runs from near the Orange river skirting the plains of the Vaal river for forty or fifty miles. There are only five passes up the precipitous ridge. Once on the top, the tableland extends for mile on mile as far at least as this town.

We advanced to the Tweefontein (Two Fountains) pass. The enemy had held the heights above, at Knoffelfontein, but we first took the heights at each side; banged a few Canadian shells into the rocky ridges; saw some of the enemy running and then Warren's Scouts and Intelligence Corps, under my lead, with Capt. Mackie, of Pembroke, at my side, dashed full gallop along the roadway for two miles, chiefly under cover from the enemy, to the position. The enemy fled. Six or more were seen on a kopje a few hundreds yards off making quick time. To us was given the honor of leading the way, with a squadron of Imperial Yeomanry under Capt. Kemp, M.P., to Campbell. That beautifully situated town lies at the head of Campbell "Kloof," or pass, about 18 miles north of Douglas. The kloof or pass is fully one and a half miles long, and leads from the plain below to the tableland above. Fifty men there could defy ten thousand. The enemy did not anticipate our getting in their rear, but I have found on every occasion that no Boer can stand a crack in the flank or rear. Therefore, as we advanced on Campbell from the east and north, our friends, the enemy, ran, and at 12.10 Campbell was entered, your humble servant leading, and Capt. Mackie a close second. The loyal people, Mrs. Hofmeyer, Mrs. Finley, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Voss and family, and others, had not heard of our approach until we galloped into the place. They then rushed out and many of them cried like children. I had several times had messengers in to Campbell through the enemy's lines, and Mrs. Hofmeyer was the one who had given me very reliable information. Therefore, I was glad to meet that good lady and her fellow loyalists who had borne such privations, endured such disabilities and suffered such persecutions as they had months.

The kloof has in many places overhanging sides. From the rock crevices and nooks honey combs of the so-called tame bee hang in hundreds. Our stay in Campbell was very pleasant. But we were all impatient to be onward. So on Thursday, 7th, in the evening I left Campbell in command of the Cape Police under Major Lnow, the Munster Fusiliers under Lieut. Tyrrell, Warren's Scouts under Captain Mackie, and a detachment of D.E.O.V. rifles under Captain Gregory. I gave Turpin charge of the transport, and let me assure you the way he got his array of mule waggons, carts, etc., along was really splendid. He can life a whole line by a few cuss words and threats to the nigger drivers.

That night we encamped at Doornfontein, the residence of Mrs. Schmit, widow of the field cornet killed at Faber's. It seeded so odd; there we were singing songs in the house of and with the family of the poor devil we had bowled out the week before. The widow and family had always taken the British side, however. I gave her a pass to go to Faber's Put and get her husband's body. He is the one the fellows credited me with making sure of.

The next day—Friday—I arrived here soon after noon. A Boer commando was coming up from the south, about three miles off and their advance guard was close on us before we were noticed. They ran back, crossed the mountains six miles south, and travelled all afternoon and night to get past us to the north. I had scouts out but the enemy did not come nearer, in their race to escape, than five to six miles on the west. The mountains overlooking the town were also dotted with their spies before our advent. Then several in the town as well as the lot on the hills ran as fast as horse flesh could carry them and did not fire a shot. The town is badly rattled, the loyal shops and houses being damaged. However, many loyal women and children remained as well as a few men—the latter in hiding. The Dutch who stood loyal deserve very great praise. Last night Gen. Sir Charles Warren came in. To-morrow at six a.m. we set out for the north—Postmasburg and Kuruman. But the game is nearly over.

We found from evidence left in their flight from here, by the Boers, that, out of 175 in their central or the orchard attack on Faber's Put, all who remained, but six, were wounded or killed. Of that lot 15 were killed. Their killed at other parts of the field were 12, and two wounded have since died.

At one farm where we called the

A VICIOUS BEGGAR

One Legged Man From Port Perry Uses a Stick Effectively.

The police station was converted into an emergency hospital last evening while Dr. King put in nine stitches in a big cut in Pat Lavery's nose and five in his forehead and dressed other wounds about his face. The damages were inflicted by a one-legged tramp, who gave his name as Thomas Martin, and his address as Port Perry. The weapon he used was a cane. It appears that Martin, who was begging, accosted Lavery near a down town hotel and asked him for money, and from this the trouble ensued, the peg leg striking Lavery across the face with his stick a couple of times. He was brought before the Magistrate this morning and sentenced to six months in gaol as a vagrant. He was also charged with assault, and on this elected to be tried by jury.

Fined for Selling Fish.

On Saturday Joseph Larush, of Otonabee, appeared before Magistrate Thackery at the village of Harwood for selling ten maskinonge on the 18th June to one James Howard and was fined $10 and costs, $9.30, to be paid forthwith or 30 days in jail. This may be taken as a warning to fishermen in this locality. Maskinonge cannot be sold for three years, or more than four in one day be taken without the risk of the above fine, it being the lowest that can be imposed along with the costs.—Hastings Star.

The Omemee Excursion to Lakefield.

The Omemee Mirror says:—"Though the weather did not seem to be very inviting for an outing, yet a goodly number of people availed themselves of the Union churches' excursion to Lakefield on Tuesday. The G. T. R. had provided a special train to be at the disposal of the excursionists, and, it is estimated that about 300 people boarded the train. Lakefield is a beautiful village of about 1,100 inhabitants and, the surrounding scenery is very picturesque. On arrival of the train the people went to a grove near the river, where tables and seats were provided for the accommodation of the guests. Quite a number went sightseeing, visiting the various churches, factories and stores. The train left Lakefield about 5.45 and arrived at Omemee at 7. All were united in the opinion of having spent a happy day. The Omemee band was in attendance and made the outing the more pleasant. Indeed, Omemee can justly be proud of its band.

HORSE SAVED

One of Dickson Co's Horses Went in off a Drive.

The crew of the Empress and some of the passengers on the down trip from Stony Lake last evening saved a horse owned by the Dickson Co. from drowning. The horse was one of a team on one of the cribs that is with the drive that is just coming into Clear lake. The men on the drive were at tea and the horses were alone on the crib, and got restless, pulling against each other, when the harness broke and one of the horses went into the water. The accident was seen from the Empress and the steamer ran into the crib, and after much difficulty the men on board succeeded in getting the horse out of the water.

Excursion to Stony Lake.

The non-commissioned officers of the 57th Regiment are holding an excursion to Stony lake and Burleigh Falls, on Saturday, July 28th. The committee who have the arrangements in charge are sparing no pains to make the excursion pleasant for all who take it in. Music will accompany the outing, and the beauties of the lake and the Falls can be viewed under most enjoyable surroundings by remembering the date and going with the non-coms.

Success on the Stage.

The New York Mirror (a dramatic paper) contains a fine portrait of a young lady of Campbellford, and one who is well-known in Peterborough, and makes reference to her in two items as follows:

"Marie Hunt, who is now playing Julie de Nortalle in a Day of Reckoning, at the Star Theatre, is a young Canadian who has done some excellent work in the various stock companies. Her impersonation of Julie has received the endorsement of the press wherever she has appeared. Her gowns have called forth the envying praise of the ladies and her appearance at all times has been remarked as one of refinement.

"Marie Hunt has been engaged by Harry Corson Clarke to originate the leading female role in his new farce, What Did Tompkins do. Miss Hunt will sail for Paris this week to secure the latest things in Parisian gowns."

The young lady referred to is Miss Minnie Callaghan, daughter or Mr. Thos. Callaghan, the well-known manager for the Rathbun Co. She is known in the theatrical profession as Miss Marie Hunt.

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

TENNIS.

The Millbrook tennis club visited town yesterday and played a match with the Peterborough club. The result all round was a tie. The score was:

(Singles.)

Kerr beat C. Needler 6-2, 6-3.
Poussette beat Mulligan 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.
White beat H. Burnham 4-6, 6-6, 6-3.
Dr. Needler beat Hollingshead 6-3, 8-6.

(Doubles.)

Kerr and Poussette beat C. Needler and White 8-6, 6-3.

Dr. Needler and Mulligan beat Burnham and Hollingshead 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

GOLF.

After his victory over Mr. Napier Mr. Garvin is meeting all comers and expects soon to have the scalps of all except the scratch men. To-day he is playing a match with Mr. Sam Ray and to-morrow he plays Mr. Peter Campbell. The club expects him to develop into a world's champion.

J. H. Taylor, the golf expert who defeated Harry Vardon in the Scottish championships, may come to the States and try to pick up some of the $200 and $250 exhibition game plums which Vardon has been picking up lately. Could Vardon have made as much money at home it is needless to say America would probably never have witnessed the marvelous work of the former world's champion upon American links. Vardon contemplated a trip to America for many months before he at last decided to sail, and it was only after several guarantees from the manufacturers of golfing goods in this country that the Englishman arranged his plans and purchased his ticket for a trip across the big herring pond. Soon after he reached here there was a general scramble for the purchase of his name; in other words, the firm making the best offer backed him in the establishment of a large factory for the manufacture of golf sticks and balls, and without any labor on his part he receives a price for every stick and ball that his name is stamped on. As a guarantee to the public he has a representative to inspect all the goods stamped with his name. It's very easy money for him.

It is claimed that Taylor has been offered a neat sum by a rival United States firm to visit the country and allow them to use his name as a trade mark. Taylor has denied the rumor, but his friends do not seem to put much faith in his denial. It will not, therefore, be a surprise to the golfing world to see Taylor on the American links within the next two months. Should Taylor come, however, it will be to the regret of the domestic professionals, for they do not look upon these foreigners with favor. In Vardon they recognize a rival, and if Taylor is Vardon's superior he can be nothing but an enemy. Should Taylor come he and Vardon will not be likely to come together in a hurry in match play, for it would spoil business for one or the other, and they would likely dodge each other as persistently as the fighters do. If the two men were willing to meet personally the manufacturers would lose no time in making their power felt unless they each had a blind confidence in their representative and hoped to double profits.

LACROSSE.

Toronto Telegram:—Billy Patterson, the father of lacrosse, dropped in from Sudbury the other night, wearing evidences of all kinds of prosperity. He says he is in a red-hot lacrosse centre, Sturgeon Falls, Sudbury and Pembroke all having strong teams. As to the quality of lacrosse up among the miners, he thinks it is as good as elsewhere, though they lack a little of what experience teaches. In this respect it is safe to say Sudbury will not long be a sufferer, for Billy never coached a team in his life that did not make a success. There is many a player in senior company to-day who owes the best part of his lacrosse education to Billy Patterson.

ILLICIT STILL CASE

Information Laid Against Mortimer Healey, of Asphodel.

In County Magistrate Edmison's court to-day Mortimer Healy, an Asphodel farmer, was charged with having a still in his possession contrary to law. Officer Floody, of the Inland Revenue Department, has been in town some days in connection with the case. The still was found on Healy's farm some weeks ago, but he emphatically denies the possession of it. The case was enlarged till the 31st inst. without any evidence having been taken. Mr. W. O'Connell appeared for the defence.

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"The evidence that has been placed before you, gentlemen, is, with one exception, but that is a fearful exception, of a purely circumstantial character, and it will be for you to say whether the series of circumstantial facts that have been detailed to you and which the defense has ingeniously endeavored to explain away are sufficient to justify you in returning a verdict of guilty and by that verdict ridding society of as cold blooded a scoundrel as ever breathed or whether there is sufficient and reasonable doubt in your minds to justify you in giving to the prisoner the benefit of the doubt.

"Gentlemen, let us look at the evidence. On the morning of the 12th of January Josiah Marsden was discovered in the library of his country home, called The Grange, Norcombe, stabbed to death with a Norwegian clasp knife, which weapon you have had produced. There is no dispute that the murder was committed with that knife, and equally the defense does not attempt to deny that up to the very night of the murder that knife was in the possession of Astray Marsden.

The Stained Paper.

"In the hand of Josiah Marsden was found this paper."

The judge pauses impressively and takes up the blood stained paper that has caused such a sensation throughout the trial.

"This paper," he solemnly continues, "was found in the dead man's stiffened fingers. Death had overtaken him before he could frame his thoughts in words, and so his last message is only a broken one. 'I am dying,' he wrote, 'murdered by Astra'—a—s—t—r—a— and his life departed.

"The prosecution has told you that he intended to write 'Astray Marsden.' The defense has been unable to deny it. The prosecution has said he wrote so that justice might be meted out to his murderer. The defense has hinted, only hinted, gentlemen—even they have not dared to do more than whisper—that Josiah Marsden hated his ward or son and did what he did in revenge, faced eternity with the foulest sin that man could commit upon his soul, died with a lie in his heart, that a young man might be hanged. The defense has hinted that this is why the paper was written. I will not venture to express my own opinion of such a method of defense. Let us look at the matter dispassionately. If we are to believe that Josiah Marsden committed this loathsome deed as his last act on earth and that Astray Marsden did not murder him, then that murder was committed by some unknown enemy of the old man.

"Has the defense been able to hint at any such person? No. Has the defense been able to assume or deduce that any other person was in the house on that night? No. It has simply contented itself with a categorical denial of everything and a plea as surprising as it is abominable.

"The value of that plea, gentlemen, I leave for you to decide. Let us pass again to the circumstantial evidence and deal first of all with

The Norwegian Knife.

"This knife has the letter 'A' branded upon its handle. The knife was in the prisoner's possession, it is agreed, until a few moments or a few hours before the murder. It is admitted that Astray Marsden was with Josiah Marsden on the night of the murder. It is also admitted that he used the knife to open a cigar box in the presence of his guardian and then left it behind him ready for the murderer, who, we are told, entered the house after the prisoner had left it. The value of that plea, gentlemen, is again for you to decide.

"The murder was first discovered by the woman Margaret Gadsden, who was in the habit of going daily to attend to the domestic requirements of the deceased. On the morning of Jan. 12 she went, as usual, and gained admittance at the side entrance by the key she always had in her possession.

"You will recollect that between the night of the 11th and the morning of the 12th there was a phenomenally heavy fall of snow, and the woman noticed that there were footprints leading to the front door of the house, but none leading from it.

"Becoming alarmed at the unusual stillness which reigned through the house and unable to get any answer when she knocked at Josiah Marsden's door, Margaret Gadsden hastened to the police station and returned with Chief of Police Dobson.

"That man, gentlemen, you have had before you. He has told you himself of his attempt to blind the aims of justice by withholding the most important piece of evidence in this intricate case, the paper that Josiah Marsden left behind him. Dobson has expressed his contrition and regret for the disgraceful course which he took, but whether that contrition will absolve him from the penalties of his action I very much doubt. I cannot refrain from referring to the supreme and utter idiocy manifested throughout by Chief Dobson in relation to this case and cannot too warmly applaud the indefatigable energy, the zeal and acumen, of Mr. Herbert Darrent, the official who took charge of the case and was fortunately able to retrieve all the errors—I will content myself by calling them errors at present—which Dobson committed prior to his appearance on the scene. Returning to the events of Jan. 12, you will remember that Dobson and the woman returned together and upon entering the library found Josiah Marsden lying dead upon the floor, stabbed to the heart. By his side was the paper which has had such an important bearing upon the case, the paper which Dobson retained, showing it only to the prisoner, Astray Marsden. You have heard Dobson's account of that interview—that the prisoner turned pale and trembled and then promised to see him later in the day.

"It is for you to say whether Dobson is a man whose evidence can be relied upon or not. But, setting that upon one side, was the action of Astray Marsden that of an innocent man? He sought refuge in flight. It is urged that he became the prey to a spasm of fear, but an innocent man should have no such cowardly emotion. Why did he not defy the blackmail of Dobson and, knowing his innocence, rest contented on being able to prove an alibi? Why? Because, gentlemen, he could not; because he was bound to admit that he was at The Grange on that night. He owns he was at The Grange, but pleads that he left before the snowstorm and left Josiah Marsden alive.

"If the defense could prove that fact, could account for the period that elapsed between the prisoner leaving The Grange and being met by Policeman Thompson, there might be some grounds for the plea, but not one single witness has been called to substantiate it, and we are asked to believe that he walked about for hours in a blinding snowstorm. That has been put before you in contradistinction to the theory of the prosecution that he entered the house after the snowstorm, leaving his footprints up to the door; that the old standing quarrel which it is admitted on both sides existed was renewed and that he left by the secret passage on to the frozen river, a passage that was known only to those who had lived at The Grange.

"Astray Marsden was met by Thompson soon after 2 o'clock in the morning of the 12th in a very excited condition, still chafing, the defense says, under the insults he had just heaped upon him—chafing, gentlemen, after several hours' walk.

HANS TRIES A NEW SCHEME TO DRAW TRADE.

He Follows Faithfully the Advice of His Friend the Tailor, but For Some Reason the Experiment Is a Dismal Failure.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.]

Vhen I goes by dot little tailor und tells him peesness vhas awful poor mit me, he shakes his head und says:

"Hans, sometings vhas wrong mit you. You doan' seem to catch on. Look at me und my shop, und see how prosperous she vhas. Der money keeps rolling in, und purty soon I vhas a rich man."

"Vhell, I like to find oudt vhat vhas wrong," I says. "My work vhas good, und my prices vhas cheap, and I can't see how she vhas."

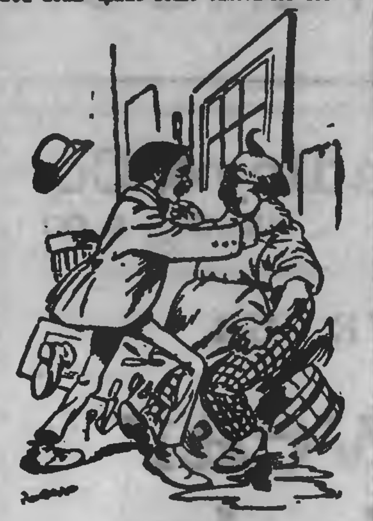
"Maype I can tell you. If I vhas a customer in your shop how vould you speak to me?"

"I should say it vhas feefteen cent for a cement patch on your shoe."

"Und no more?"

"Vhell, maype I says he vhas a hot day or I don't feel vhell."

"Ah, I see! Dot vhas der whole secret. You doan' make some customers feel at home. You doan' show some interest in 'em. You vhas cold und distant, und peoples pelief you vhas some icicles und doan' come back no more. Hans, you must do deeferent."



"HE GRABS ME."

Und he tells me how he does to build up his big peesness, und it looks so easy to me dot I goes home feeling tickled all oafer. Next morning I begins mit dot new plan. Der first customer vhas a doctor who likes to haf his heels fixed oop. As he comes in der door I stands oop und bows und holds out my hand und says:

"I vhas glad to see you. Take a seat und feel at home. How vhas der wife und children today, und you vhas looking ash bright ash a young man of 20. Sit down und haf some talks mit me about Dewey for president."

"Look here, cobbler," says der doctor ash he keeps his eyes on me, "doan' you git drunk purty early in der mornings?"

"But I vhas sober," I says.

"Vhell, den, you vhas a fool. Vhas it your peesness about my wife und children and how I look?"

"But I like to take some interest in you."

"Oh, you do! Vhell, you can take some interest in my coattails."

Und he goes avhay, I speaks to my wife und can't make it out. She says dot tailor vhas in America so long he ought to know, und maype der rest of der peoples vhill be deeferent. Der next who comes vhas a womans. I bows to her und shakes hands und says:

"Come in, madam, und be sure I vhas charmed to meet you. He vhas a lovely day. Vhas der husband und children vhell?"

She looks at me und doan' say nottings, und I keep on:

"You vhas looking troubled dis morning. Maype it vhas sickness in der family, or like enough your husband vhas out all night. If you like to tell me about it, I shall sympathise mit you."

Dot womans doan' speak one word. She goes avhay mit a slam of der door, und purty soon a big man mit a red face comes in und yells at me:

"Cobbler, vhat der deffels you mean by speaking dis vhay to my wife? Vhas you drunk or crazy?"

"I likes to make her welcome," I says.

"Welcome, welcome! Do you haf to welcome some folks to a cobbler shop?"

"Und if she vhas in troubles I like to show my feelings und help her out."

"Oh, you would! Vhell, I shall gif you some troubles of your own to look out fer."

Und dot man he grabs me und bangs me against der wall und kicks oafer my bench und throws me about, und in two minits I vhas wrecked. He says to me vhen he goes out dot if I speak to his wife some more he vhill break all der bones in my body und pull me out ten feet long. I haf three bumps on my head und a black eye, und I goes by dot little tailor und says:

"Vhell, you see how she vhas."

"By Shorge," he says, "but you vhas a beauty! How you make sooch a mistake, eh?"

"I doan' make some mistakes. It vhas all like you told me."

"Did you welcome der peoples?"

"I did."

"Vhell, I see how she vhas. I vhas a tailor, und you vhas a cobbler. If a man comes in here to get a coat cleaned, he expects to be welcomed und sympathised mit. If a man comes into a cobbler shop, he expects you to shut oop und say nottings. Hans, it vhas der vhay in America, und you better get some raw beef for dot eye und say you vhas run oafer by a street car." M. QUAD.

They Struck It Rich.

It was a grand thing for this community that such an enterprising firm as J. Lynch, secured the Agency for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, the wonderful remedy that has startled the world by its marvellous cures. The furor of enthusiasm over it has boomed their business, as the demand for it is immense. They give free trial bottles to sufferers, and positively guarantee a cure in Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, and all Throat and Lung troubles. A trial proves its merit. A WOMAN

We smile and laugh when aching heart
With every throb proclaims a smart;
We pass the careless, jesting word,
When, aye, if only could be heard
Its echo true, a cry 'twould be
Of wild despair and mockery.

We dance and seem to quite forget
That burning tears our pillows wet.
The throng know not; lo, if they knew,
Of all that press our hand, how few
Would understand—beget one thought
With sympathy and kindness fraught.

LIONS BRED IN CAPTIVITY.

They Develop Ferocity and Are as Healthy as Wild Ones.

There is a current tradition that wild animals born in captivity do not attain the savageness of those bred in their native jungle and that the teeth of such animals do not develop as they do in the wild state. The superintendent of the zoo, whose experience with wild animals has been almost lifelong, says that he has not found these assertions to be true.

However innocent and apparently tame the cubs may appear, he says, there is a time when they attain savageness apparently from instinct and show all the characteristics of the animals whose home has always been the forest or the plain. As for the development of teeth, the superintendent points for illustration to full grown lions which were born and reared in captivity and may be seen any day cracking bones of meat with which they are fed with evidence of possessing the most sound teeth possible.

The only way in which wild animals in captivity usually suffer with their teeth is that when they are fed they may grab at the meat which is pushed through the bars with a big iron fork and break a tooth on the fork or they may in jumping against the bars injure a tooth and suffer afterward from its loss.

The little lions when baby cubs are shy at first, then become as playful as kittens. For the first year of their life usually they may be treated as domestic animals. At the age of about 12 weeks the cubs are taken from their mother, but in the meantime she has taught them to eat meat. At first the cubs suck a bone or a scrap of raw meat, which the mother tears off for them. Often they may be seen gnawing upon a bone which the mother lion holds in her jaws and paws.

When first taken from their mother, the cubs are given finely chopped meat, the pieces being gradually made larger until they are given bones, upon which they sharpen and develop their teeth. In time the lions can crush the bones with ease. From 12 to 14 months of age the young lions are, it is said, so cross as to be almost unmanageable. At the age of 18 months or 2 years the cubs are taken in hand by the trainer, and then, having reached their growth, they are ready to be perfected in their tricks and to be exhibited.

It is said by those familiar with lion taming and training that lions which have been brought up as pets are the hardest to train for performances. They do not seem to take the training seriously and are not so easily mastered as those which have grown to maturity without petting.

Toothbrush Caused Cancer.

"Cancer of the lip," a physician stated recently, "is caused more frequently than one would think by the toothbrush. Let me illustrate this by a typical case which I am treating now. John Blank smoked a good deal, and to keep his teeth white he cleaned them hard three times a day with a brush whose bristles were like wire. He brushed a little patch of skin from his lower lip. Afterward he was careful, and the sore spot healed. But then he forgot, and the spot became sore again.

"This went on a year or so. Two days out of the seven this one place in Blank's lip was sore. Finally it began to pain him. It hurt all the time. It smarted even when apparently healed. He would awake in the night with the sharp, pinching pain there, and the pain was like the clutch of a crab's claw, for he had cancer now—cancer due to the irritation which he had applied thrice daily for a year to that one spot with his stiff bristled brush.

"No wonder he had cancer, and no wonder there are many such cases. People won't learn that tooth cleaning may do harm. They are proud of it, as of bathing, and they can't believe that any little pain or irritation due to it can be other than of benefit."—Philadelphia Record.

Chinese Bicyclists.

According to the Chinese habit of doing most things backward a visitor in Shanghai says he fully expectetd to see the first Chinese cyclist he came across pedal backward. "To our astonishment," he wrote, "he rode forward in the proper manner. His attire was such as is not easily forgotten. The baggy trousers were hauled up over the knees, disclosing a pair of shinny sticks swathed in dishrags or something. This was done to prevent his trousers from tearing in the chain. Bare feet on rubber pedals, a big yellow balloon shirt bulging out like the spinnaker on a racing yacht and a flying pigtail under a small tin can of a cap topped by a button. He was a wealthy merchant, we were told, and looked as if wheeling agreed with him in spite of his clothes."

An Investigation in Order.

Customer—You made a mistake in my prescription the other day. It called for two grains of opium, and I got a small package containing magnesia.

Druggist—Are you sure about it?

Customer—Yes. Here is a duplicate prescription from the physician. Now the question is, Who got the opium?

Druggist—Dear me, that's so. (To the prescription clerk.) James, who's dead in the neighborhood?—Harlem Life.

Had to Walk.

The intoxicated gentleman stared in a bewildered manner at the sign on the bridge. The sign read, "Loads must not be taken across this bridge faster than a walk."

After giving the sign profound study, he observed:

"Don't shee how fellersh wi' loadsh can do better'n a walk, nohow!"—Baltimore American.

Her Unfashionable Figure.

Emma—I must go right away to a cure in Marienbad.

"Indeed! What doctor ordered that?"

"No doctor. My dressmaker."—Fliegende Blatter.

We lose more in life through our suspicions than from our credulity. Every man is so taken up with his own troubles that he has no time nor inclination to harm others.

Two Straight Flushes.

I played poker for 12 years and never saw a straight flush. A few nights ago a woman in a millionaires' row palace held one and, disdaining the small pile of cash on the table, called for her check book. Everybody except an old bachelor who had learned the game in the Union club laid down. He, scorning to take advantage of a weak woman, said:

"Mrs. B., let me advise you to be careful. I shall see you for any amount and raise you. The limit is off, I suppose?"

She said it was and cast a check for $500 in the pot.

"Before I see that may I ask a question?" he said to the assembled players. "I want to know this—in case there are two straight flushes, each ace high, which suit wins?"

"Diamonds," was the unanimous reply.

He handed to Mrs. B. her check and, laying down a ten, jack, queen, king and ace of diamonds, remarked that she was a very brave woman. But she assured him that her hand was worth $500 and exposed a ten, jack, queen, king and ace of clubs.

"How far would you have gone?" some one asked her, to which she made answer:

"I shouldn't have thought of stopping under $5,000, and I am half angry that he didn't give me a chance to bet, it's such glorious fun."—New York Press.

Powder Burns In Shooting Cases.

"Powder burns have played a curiously important part before the courts," remarked a New Orleans lawyer who has a large criminal practice. "Their presence or absence is often depended upon to determine proximity in mysterious shootings, and they have frequently settled the question of suicide or murder where the fact was in doubt.

"I was interested in a case of that kind in the early days of my practice and prevailed upon a prominent surgeon of this city who is now dead to ascertain for me by practical experiment upon a body in the dissecting room exactly how far away the explosion of a pistol would produce burns and powder marks. He used a .32 caliber revolver and found that the flame of the discharge made a distinct burn at a distance of 2½ feet, and powder marks were left at a distance of more than two yards.

"Of course the grains were not actually driven into the skin, as they are at shorter range, but the marks were clearly discernible and could not be easily removed. I was surprised at the result, and it satisfied me that many erroneous conclusions had been drawn from such evidence in the past. It is generally supposed that the weapon must be held almost against the skin to leave traces of flame and powder."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Magnetic Clay.

Most kinds of clay contain a considerable proportion of iron. The red color of bricks, for example, is due to the presence of oxides of iron. Whenever an object molded of clay is baked at the temperature of the potter's furnace in the presence of a magnetic field or influence, the otherwise homogeneous clay shows when cooled traces of magnetism in a definite direction. This inherent magnetism is sufficient to show the direction and give an idea as to the intensity of the magnetizing force that acted while the clay was in the furnace.

This peculiar property has been used to solve some questions of great interest to scientific people in general. An accurate knowledge of the direction of the earth's magnetic force in early historical times has been deduced by several Italian physicists from study of the traces of magnetism shown by Etrurian vases and other objects of clay exhumed from old tombs. The conclusion reached is that the direction of the earth's magnetic field has varied very greatly in the 5,000 or 6,000 years represented by the age of the objects examined.

The Strains They Suffered.

For exercise in expression the teacher daily asks her scholars to describe some of the happenings of the day at home.

Little Minnie, loquitor: "When my papa went to go down into the woodshed the other evening, where it was dark, he slipped on the stair and strained his foot, and now he can't walk."

Here another little girl was evidently reminded of something, and she raised her hand and fluttered it to get the teacher's attention.

"Well?" suggested the teacher.

"Please, ma'am, when our cow came home from pasture last night she slipped in the mud right in front of the house and strained her milk, but she is able to walk just the same."—Lewiston Journal.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM.

It Involved Personal Safety and Made the Old Man Gasp.

"While I was out west," said the returned traveler, "I chanced to meet an old man sitting by the side of the road. He looked so sad that I stopped and asked him what the matter was.

"'Stranger, I'm in a heap of trouble,' he said.

"'Nothing serious, I hope,' I answered.

"'Hump!' he grunted. 'Thet's all ye know about hit! Jes' like a dern tenderfoot!'

"I made no answer, and after drawing a few puffs from an old corncob pipe he said:

"'I might as well tell ye. I live up yander in thet house on the hill, an I always calculated to live an die thar, but hit looks es though hit wusn't to be. The other day my wife got hold of a paper somewhere, an she read in hit thet women's clubs wus all the go, an hit set her wild to hev one herself. Waal, she talked to the other old wimmen around yere till she had 'em jes' es crazy es her, an the result wus thet 15 old wimmen are now holdin a meetin up at my house to organise.

"'Waal, the first thing wus to elect a president. They took a ballot, an the result wus thet each one of 'em had a vote. Hit wus the same way on the next ten ballots, an frost wus beginnin to form on the windows. Waal, hit looked like a deadlock till one fule woman suggested thet I be allowed to cast the decidin vote. Waal, I had jes' presence of mind enough to point out thet hit would take a little time to solve sich a delicate question, so I kum out yere to ponder, followed by the smiles of 15 old wimmen. If I vote fer my wife, the other 14 will be after my scalp, an if I don't vote fer her hit means a lingerin death.'

"'Then it is a question of the lady or the tiger?' said I, smiling.

"'Stranger, I didn't know thet you knew my wife. But you're right, she's a tiger, sure enough. Stranger, I'm off fer the mountains. I'm leavin 43 acres, a mewl an three hogs, but what is personal wealth to personal safety? Farewell, stranger. Hit takes a man to rise an meet a question like this. I'm off!'"—Detroit Free Press.

people—Dekierks—had been told by the Boers their son had deserted to the English—the poor mother was delighted for her people and herself were loyal, but one of our fellows who knew her boy told her the truth. Imagine a loyal boy, forced to fight and being killed. Turpin dropped him as he tried to escape. I also gave Dekierk a pass to bring back his son's body for burial, but I felt sorry for the mother, a loyal little body.

It is amusing to find the excuses of the Boers for having looted the shops here. We examined every place yesterday and found goods in nearly every house. But it is the old, old story—the Transvaal would pay the merchants after the war.

The whole show will be over in a few days and hurrah for the return trip.

We do not expect much more fighting in our quarter, or any other for that matter; but before us are a lot of fellows, leaders, looters and ruffians who will each receive from 5 to 15 years' imprisonment if caught. Their game is not to give in but gradually escape to the deserts, first giving us one more fight. Let us hope it may come quickly, for our lads are keen. Faber's Put and Douglas have only whetted their taste for Boer gore. The mark is yet clear on my forehead, and my foot pains occasionally. Good-bye. Yours, SAM HUGHES.

P.S.—Mackie, Phillips, Turpin and Ogilvie's Battery are fine. The Canadian wounded are doing well. I am in fine form myself.

(From the last sentence it appears that Col. Hughes has been wounded, and that he had written a letter speaking of the fight in which it occurred. That letter must have gone astray for none of his friends know anything of it.—Ed.)

WITH THE THINNED RANKS IN AFRICA

THE HARD MARCHES THE CANADIAN BOYS HAVE TO MAKE

And the Cheerfulness They Show at All Times—A Special Correspondent Tells of Them as He Saw Them.

Mr. W. Richmond Smith, special correspondent of the Montreal Star with the Canadian infantry in South Africa, in a letter dated May 22nd, just published in the Star, gives a reader a glimpse at the hard work the Canadian boys who are still in the ranks are called upon to do. Mr. Smith in his letter says:—

As the sun peeped over the ridges in the east, the following morning, Monday, May 21, the column moved out of bivouack at Karroo Spruit. Another hard day's trekking without a fight of any kind brought us to Witpoort, about ten or twelve miles south of Heilbron. Here the column bivouacked for the night. One could write for days on the humorous incidents of these awful days of hard trekking, for they have their humorous as well as their pathetic side. I had outspanned at Witpoort just before dark, tired out with a long and wearisome day in the saddle. A regiment of infantry crawled slowly up the incline close to where my cart was. I was thinking in a tired sort of way, how much harder it was for the foot soldier with his awful burden of knapsack, belts, ammunition, pannikins and rifle to trudge wearily all day, than it was for one without belts and burdens to do the same distance in the saddle, when I was hailed in a cheerful manner. They were the Canadians! I had not been able to distinguish them in the growing darkness. Tired they were and grimy and footsore, but still cheerful. What those boys had gone through! Fighting was hard work, but from dawn till sunset were infinitely worse. How thin their ranks were! Scarce four hundred of the thousand who landed with me in Cape Town six weary months ago. Some had died like heroes, their faces to the foe, but by far the greater number had either passed away from fever, brought on by just such marches as the one we had done that day and the filthy water and insufficient food and clothing. Only the hardier and more fortunate of the regiment had been able to endure the hardships of the most difficult campaigns any army has ever been called upon to endure. And yet they were cheerful! This was my train of thought when I was interrupted by a cheerful voice asking permission to light his pipe at my fire. I looked up, wondering that any Tommy could be so cheerful after so hard a day. Never in my life did I see such a figure. Clad in thin khaki drill uniform, black and grimy and torn and tattered with much wear, stood a figure, leaning heavily on his rifle. He had the usual complement of belts, knapsack, pannikin and ammunition belt, and in addition, several tin cans tied to his belt, out of which was sticking ears of corn or mealies, as they are called here; carrots and beans. In one hand he carried a large pumpkin. Tied to his waist and cross belts was a motley collection of beet roots, squashes and other vegetables. He looked a veritable Father Christmas, and he must have been carrying close on to a hundred pounds, with his belts and rifle. From his badge I saw at once that he was a Canadian. And he was cheerful! Asked if he was sick of the war, he replied that like every one else he would be glad when it was over, but he quickly added: "I would not have missed the experience for all the money in the world!" He hadn't any complaints to make. Often he was hungry and did not get enough to eat, but all the other regiments in the brigade were the same. With quiet thankfulness he accepted a cup of hot coffee and offered me some of the vegetables he had carried for miles. He even seemed put out when I refused to accept them, and was only satisfied when I told him I had lots to eat in my cart and could not take what he had carried so far.

ANOTHER START

at sunrise and a march of ten or twelve miles brought the column to the hill overlooking the town of Heilbron. It was about noon when the cavalry started in pursuit of the retreating enemy described in the first part of this letter, and General Ian Hamilton, at the head of the rest of the column, with the British flag flying and bands playing, entered the Free State town of Heilbron. The first regiment to enter the place immediately behind the general and his staff was the Canadians. The column marched through the principal streets and bivouacked on the west side of the town. The Canadians were detailed to act as town guard. The column had marched just one hundred miles in seven days, and that on half rations of biscuits owing to a silly mistake made by the army service corps officials at Kroonstad. It seems when the column under Lord Roberts took possession of Kroonstad they found a large quantity of what was supposed to be army biscuits in the regulation tin boxes, stored in the Government warehouse. When the column under General Hamilton was suddenly ordered to go to Lindley they were given ten days' rations of biscuit. Three days' rations were supplied from the supply park, and seven days' rations from the captured stock, which was loaded on waggons without being examined. When these tins were opened they were found to contain not biscuit, but some kind of disinfecting powder. As soon as this mistake was discovered the column was put on half rations and a convoy of additional supplies telegraphed for to Kroonstad. The sudden and unexpected departure of the column from Lindley made it necessary to change the direction of the convoy to Heilbron. When the three days' supply of biscuit ran out the soldiers were served out portions of flour procured at Lindley in lieu of biscuit. This flour they had to bake themselves into something edible, and that, with sheep and cattle commandeered on the march, was all the men had to eat. At the time of writing the missing convoy has not turned up, and it is feared that it has fallen into the hands of the enemy.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

Peterborough Markets

Thursday, July 19th, 1900.

As might be expected at this season of the year, the market for the past week has been an exceedingly bad one. Very few loads of anything came in and there seems to be no tendency for any early movement owing to the farmers being all fairly busy. Hay has sold well all week, with only a few loads offering, while in the grain section nothing has been done whatever.

The following are the prices current for the past week:

Wheat.—Only a few loads were offered and sold at last week's prices. This grain seems to be very steady at 70 cents up for both spring and fall.

Oats.—There is a good demand for oats for local consumption and it is quite easy to realize 29 and 30 cents for good feeding oats, while the buyers are paying 28.

Hay.—There were about ten loads marketed and sold readily at $8 to $9. There was a good demand for hay on the market to-day. A few people asked for new hay.

Straw.—There has been quite a few loads in and the market seems to be supplied with sufficient for the present. Prices $2.50 to $3.00.

Butter and Eggs.—There has been a good market for good butter all week. Prices are steady at 15 to 18c. Eggs are also wanted at last week's quotations.

Berries.—There are lots of raspberries being offered, the former at 10c a box and $1 per pail being paid for wild, while huckleberries are selling at 8c to 10c per quart.

Live Stock.—There has been a very small run of live stock locally this week owing to the bad condition of the outside market. Exporters are lower in price owing to shipping facilities being poor. Butchers' cattle are wanted, but they must be well finished, as the market is full of badly finished beeves. There have been a few shipments of sheep made. Prices range from $3.25 to $3.50 for good sheep.

The hog market has a weaker tendency. Local quotations to-day were $5.75 for selects and $4.87 1-2 to $5 for light and heavy fats. The run of hogs today was the smallest of the season, only 50 hogs being marketed.

Mr. Geo. Webber sold a very fine 3 year old steer to Mr. John Mervin yesterday. It tipped the beams at 1,480 lbs. This was one of Mr. Webber's culls.

Mr. McParland is loading a car of butchers' cattle for Toronto to-morrow.

Mr. John Shaughnessy is buying up a few cars of sheep for the outside markets.

Mr. H. P. Kennedy will be on the market every week for the purpose of buying live stock of all kinds. He has bought quite a number of sheep during the past two weeks.

THE NEW SCALE.

Mr. W. T. English, market clerk, is very much pleased with the new scale which has been installed on the market by the Gurney Scale Co., of Hamilton. There is no trouble whatever to give every satisfaction to both buyer and seller now. The pen for weighing live stock has been balanced on the platform, so that the farmers are now sure of getting every pound that is in their cattle, there being no danger of feet being off or the animal pressing against the sides. It will also weigh any load of hay that will come on the market, but every care should be taken not to have the load built excessively wide, as the platform is 10 feet full inside and it will not be easy to crush 11 1-2 or 12 feet of a load in. Mr. English will be pleased to show the working of the new scale to any of the farmers that chose to come in and look it over.

Butter and Cheese.

Montreal, July 18.—The Gazette to-day says:—Receipts of cheese were 17,061 boxes. The market was steady to-day and prices remain as last quoted. Enquiry ran chiefly to colored cheese, and 9 7-8c was readily obtainable for western stock, but sellers were not free at this figure, some refusing it, and holding out for 10c. Western white were nominal around 9 7-8c. Business in Townships and Quebec cheese was larger than in Western, owing to their relative cheapness. The former commanded 9 3-4c and the latter 9 3-8c to 9 5-8c as to grade. The Liverpool cable was unchanged at 47s 6d.

Receipts of butter were 7111 packages. The market continued steady in tone and there are orders in the market for shipment at 19 1-2c, and if sellers had been agreeable a larger business would have been done, but they wanted 20c, which price shippers contend their cable limits do not permit. Seconds range from 18 3-4c to 19c.

Liverpool, July 19.—Yesterday wheat futures declined ⅛d per cental.

Chicago, July 19.—Yesterday witnessed a furtaer decided extension of the reactionary movement in wheat here. The bears again had the advantage, and after holding firm for a good part of the day futures broke 1⅛c to 1¼c per bushel. Good crop news caused long and short selling, and the close was at the bottom prices of the day.

FUN FROM YONKERS.

A Little Wit, a Little Wisdom, a Little Nonsense.

Jones—I don't believe you'll ever hear of an egg monopoly.

Smith—Why not?

Jones—Can't trust the stock.

"Talk about luck," growled the race track tout; "I had a five spot on a rank outsider today and stood to win five hundred. The horse was ten lengths ahead and only two lengths from the wire when he broke his leg and had to be shot."

"That," suggested the joker, "was a dead sure thing."

Mr. M.—My dear, those bills for the children's shoes are very high.

Mrs. M. (nonchalantly)—They do foot up considerable, George.

He—The small crowd at the mass meeting last night reminded me of a flag in mourning?

She—How's that?

He—It was only half massed.

Snaggs—You ought to hear Buster's wife talk about the preserves her mother used to make.

Waggs—Isn't it jarring?

"There's something horse racy about that letter. I should have received it three days ago."

"What's horse racy about it?"

"It was left at the post."

Jones—A friend of mine has a trick horse that he can drive to anything.

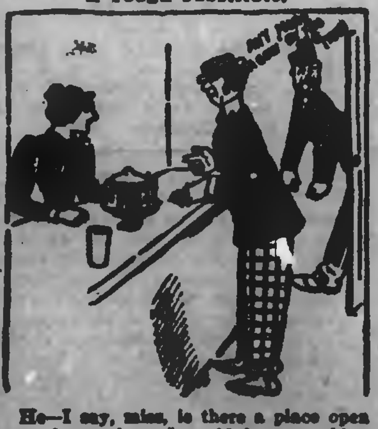
Smith—That's nothing. I have a friend who drives his horse to drink every day.

Feminine Strategy.

He—You are holding your parasol on the wrong side to protect you from the sun.

She—Yes, I know it; but there is that horrid Miss Upperten, and I want her to see my new hat.—Chicago News.

A Tough Substitute.



He—I say, miss, is there a place open near here where I could buy a rubber ring or something like that suitable for a baby cutting its teeth?

Barmaid—No.

He—Well, then, wrap me up one of your ham sandwiches.

MESSAGE FROM CONGER CAUSES STRONG HOPES

That the Ministers Have Not Been Massacred--Report of Another Massacre.

A MESSAGE FROM PEKIN

Washington, July 20.—The Chinese Minister has just received a cypher cable message from Minister Conger. Mr. Conger's telegram is as follows: "In British legation under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops; quick relief only can prevent general massacre." The message is not dated but it is understood it was sent from Pekin on the 18th.

ANOTHER REPORT THAT THERE WAS NO MASSACRE

Paris, July 20.—The foreign office has received information from a Chinese source on which, however, certain reliance may pe placed that the foreign Ministers at Pekin have not been massacred. According to this information on July 7 the Ministers were attacked and the legations burned, but the foreigners succeeded in crossing the city to Prince Chung's palace which was then barricaded. The Europeans were holding their own up to the time the news left on July 9th. Since then nothing has been heard from Pekin.

ANOTHER MASSACRE REPORTED

London, July 20.—A despatch from Shanghai received here this morning reports that 60 missionaries and 100 native converts have been massacred at Tai Yung. Tai Yung is a fortified country in the province of Shang Shanzie, on the Tuen Hai, an affluent of the Hoang Hei, 20 miles southwest of Pekin.

CONGER'S MESSAGE GENUINE

Washington, D.C., July 20—Minister Conger's cablegram was in the state department cypher, and it is regarded by the state department as being genuine, inasmuch as forgeries seem, under the circumstances, impossible.

ROBERTS REPORTS ARMY MOVEMENTS

British Troops are Still on the March--Opening of the Cape Colony Parliament.

A DESPATCH FROM ROBERTS

London, July 20.—The following despatch from Lord Roberts has been received at the War Office: Pretoria, July 19.—Methune occupied Heck Poont to-day without opposition to speak of. Ian Hamilton and Mahon continue their march along the country north of the Delagoa Bay railway. Hunter is reconnoitering the positions re-occupied by the Free Staters between Bethlehem and Ficksburg.

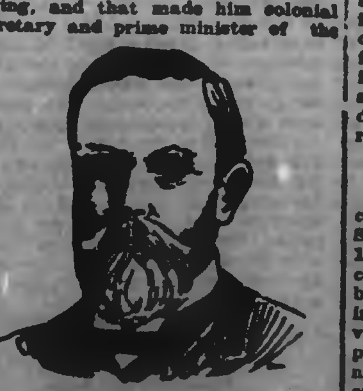
CAPE TOWN PARLIAMENT OPENED

Capetown, July 20—Cape Colony parliament opened to-day with an impressive scene. The speech of Sir Alfred Milner, governor of the colony, prophesied an early close of the war and subsequently a united and prosperous South Africa. Messrs. Sauer, Merriman and Telwater former members of the ministry, were not present.

SIR J. GORDON SPRIGG.

Sketch of Cape Colony's New Treasurer and Prime Minister.

Sir J. Gordon Sprigg, who is the new premier and treasurer of Cape Colony, was born at Ipswich, and is the son of a Baptist minister. Ill-health affected him, as it did Cecil Rhodes, and sent him to South Africa for new health and fortune. He was first at Cape of Good Hope in 1858, where he embarked in business. Then the on-rush of affairs carried him into the colonial parliament. He gained the reputation of being conservative and of not blundering, and that made him colonial secretary and prime minister of the colony. From 1884 to 1886 he was treasurer, and the last-named year again became premier. When Cecil Rhodes resigned the premiership owing to the Jameson raid, Sir J. Gordon was made prime minister for a third time. In politics he is an imperialist, with not overmuch sympathy for the Dutch, but he is quite generally trusted by the mixeo classes of Cape Colony, and it is believed will do much to pacify the Colony Boers at this time.



SIR J. GORDON SPRIGG.

Tommy Atkins' Emergency Ration.

The emergency ration carried by the British soldiers consists of four ounces of cocoa paste and a similar quantity of concentrated beef, which are packed in a small flask suitable to carry in the pocket conveniently. The package is sealed and is not to be opened except in the case of the direst necessity, and even then only under orders from a superior officer. This small portion of food will keep a man alive for thirty-six hours and is either spread upon a biscuit or cooked up into a soup. A soldier found without his emergency ration is dealt with severely. At every inspection it is displayed in the soldiers's kit, and he is expected to carry it with him on all kinds of duty.

The Boer Was Bluffed.

James Anderson of Chatham has received a letter from Gunner Robert Shore, dated at Orange River, May 10th. He gives a very humorous account of how he and a Guelph lad bluffed an old Boer farmer into selling his chickens. The Dutchman was very obdurate when he was asked to put a price on some of the fowl running about his barnyard, but Shore's companion turned to him and said: "Captain, this man refuses to sell me any food; shall I shoot him?" and at the same moment made a movement to draw his revolver. The old Boer at once cried out: "Don't shoot; don't shoot, and I will have my boy catch as many as you want!" and so the hungry artillery boys fared well at dinner that day by working a game of bluff.

HORRORS OF THE MASSACRE.

Chinese Merchant Tells of Outrages to Women and Children.

He Saw European Women Hauled Through the Streets By Boxers, Who Stripped Them and Hacked Them to Pieces—Bodies of White Children Were Paraded on Spear Points—Powers Not as One Yet.

London, July 20.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express says:

"Intense indignation is felt here at the honors which the British in Hong Kong have accorded to Li Hung Chang, who is looked upon in Shanghai as the originator of the whole fiendish anti-foreign plot.

"A Chinese merchant, who has just arrived from Pekin, gives horrible details of the massacre. He says he saw European women hauled in the streets by shrieking Boxers, who stripped them and hacked them to pieces. Their dissevered limbs were tossed to the crowd and carried off with howls of triumph. Some were already dead, having been shot by foreign civilians.

Babies on Spear Points.

"He says he saw Chinese soldiers carrying the bodies of white children aloft on their spears, while their companions shot at the bodies. He gives other details too horrible to be particularized here.

"It seems that the Boxer leaders had organized a plan, including the offering of rewards and rich loot, for the annihilation of Europeans throughout China, and that Prince Tuan's generals have been emphasizing the opportunity the soldiers have of seizing the bodies of white women."

Russians Defeated Chinese.

London, July 20.—The Russians, according to the latest news from St. Petersburg, have now completely defeated the Chinese and have occupied Blagovestchensk, capital of the Amur Government, with a large force.

A. P. REVIEW.

The Actual Situation in China to Be Ascertained For the U.S. By Mr. Rockhill.

London, July 20, 4 p.m.—"The Washington idea of sending Mr. Rockhill to China," says The Standard editorially this morning, "is an excellent one and might advantageously be imitated by the British and other Governments.

The Standard then proceeds to comment upon the great ignorance prevalent in Europe not only of recent events, but of Chinese affairs generally.

British Cabinet Council.

The Cabinet Council convened by Lord Salisbury yesterday came a day earlier than usual, and it is expected that it will be followed by a statement in Parliament throwing light upon the situation. The Chinese assertions that the members of the foreign legations are still safe have been so often repeated that they are again beginning to raise hopes in some quarters.

Has Russia the Story?

According to The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent, the Russian Government is already in possession of definite news that all the foreigners in Pekin were massacred on July 6.

No Concerted Plan as Yet.

M. Delcasse's circular only goes to prove that so far the powers have failed to arrive at any concerted plan of action.

Very little news is available this morning. The Yokohama correspondent of The Daily Mail, who repeats his statements regarding the jealousy felt among the allies, on the subject of a Japanese commander-in-chief, and the general lack of unity among them, adds:

"The Japanese correspondents charge the Russian soldiers with appalling barbarity towards the Chinese. They declare that the Pei-Ho is full of corpses of women and children, and that the Russians loaded 800 bodies on a junk and burned them."

Stopped the Russian Advance.

The Daily Mail's Shanghai correspondent says: "Advices from Vladivostock states that the Chinese invasion of Eastern Siberia has stopped the Russian advance from the north on Pekin. The Russians have burned the Chinese town of Helampo and are adopting very vigorous measures."

Uncle Sam Will Investigate.

Washington, July 20.—The Cabinet meeting yesterday developed nothing of importance regarding the Chinese situation beyond a decision to send W. W. Rockhill, formerly secretary of the legation at Pekin and Assistant Secretary of State, and

A question of great interest for intending insurers is which Canadian Life Company is in highest favor with the insuring Canadian public? The following table is a good indicator:

Name of Company.	Commenced Business.	Canadian Business Written in 1899
North American	1881	$4,834,505
Sun Life	1871	3,996,865
Ontario Mutual	1870	3,965,509
Confederation	1871	3,839,469

The above are the five leading Canadian Companies and although the North American is much the youngest in years, she is outstripping all her rivals in the Canadian field.

THE LONG SESSION

Discussing the session of Parliament which has just closed the Montreal Gazette says:—The session of Parliament which has just closed, has been one of the longest, most wearying and least profitable in the record. For a time it looked as if, aside from getting the appropriations through, the ministers did not know what they had summoned the members for, and now that, after nearly six months, the end is come, the public which has watched the proceedings is no wiser than the ministers then seemed to be. Power has been taken to spend during the current twelve months the huge sum of fifty-six and a half million dollars, and by another batch of railway subsidies three and a half millions of dollars has been added to the country's liabilities. Some of these subsidies are of an unusual character. Aid is given to enable groups of men to build roads to take the place of roads the same men had formerly been subsidized to build, but had not operated. Other groups of men are promised aid to build other railways in opposition to lines in districts which do not offer more than sufficient traffic for roads now traversing them. All the evils of the subsidy system are illustrated in the grants the Government sought and its majority voted, as if there was never to be a to-morrow of reckoning.

The increase in the tariff preference in favor of British manufacturers, announced in the budget and approved by the majority of the House of Commons, was a step further in a path, the end of which is very uncertain. The 25 per cent. reduction was not the success that had been anticipated by its authors. A great many causes with which tariffs have nothing to do have combined since 1897 to make a difference of 6 or 8 per cent. in the cost of laying down British made goods in Canada a matter of comparatively small moment. Many of these conditions are changing now, and when the reduction from the general rate of duties amounts to 8 to 12 per cent. on the ad valorem valuation it may be that the effect will be seriously felt. The experience of the past established that the Government did not know what would be the effects of its preferential tariff splurge, and nothing that was said in explanation of the latest increase indicates that it has added to its knowledge. The country and its industrial interests are being experimented on to see if there are votes to be got for Laurier.

The absence of two of the ministers during much of the session was a regrettable incident. The departments over which they preside are among the most important, and their management has been subject to sharp criticism, much of which the Government was able to avoid answering through their not being present. It was not a spectacle for a party to be proud of.

The session, of course, had its scandal. There has been no session of Parliament under the Laurier Government that did not show a scandal. Once it was the Crow's Nest Railway and coal lands deal that drew out denounciation. Another time it was the Yukon railway arrangement and the misdeeds of the Dawson officials. Another time it was the Drummond County Railway deal. Another time it was the dredging jobs. This time it was the sale to the Government for the use of the troops of stuff that was not the emergency food it was pretended to be, and that it should have been; and the rankness of it was added to by the attempt to brazen out the affair by those concerned, an attempt that the independence of members rendered futile.

The session saw an end put to the plebiscite humbug, when the House of Commons voted against giving effect to the verdict the people recorded in favor of prohibition. The course of Parliament in dealing with the prohibition issue has been marked in the past by anything but manly good faith. The vote of this session was not creditable to those who had supported the plebiscite fraud in the various stages from a resolution of the Ottawa Liberal Convention to a bill in Parliament. It was good, however, as putting the issue straightly before the people, and letting prohibitionists see just where they are at.

The accomplished work of the session amounts to very little, which might not in itself be a matter of reproach if what was done had been done with something like business dispatch. The lack of a directing mind, which has been visible from the sessions of 1897, was painfully evident, however. Ministers did not seem to know what their colleagues were doing, nor to care. What was done one day would be contradicted the next by some action of the Government members. Argument would be contradicted by action, and one action by another. The insertion of a "no precedent" proviso in the order sending the first contingent of troops to South Africa, followed by the sending of another contingent was a precedent that the Government followed time after time. It presented the appearance of a rudderless ship in a sea of many currents. There was never a Government in Canada which did more to make opposition to itself. The events of the session are in proof.

MR. M'INNES' COMPLAINT

The Manifesto of the Deposed Governor of British Columbia—A Claim That He Has Been Subject to Inconsistency and Injustice.

The text of the open letter of the Hon. T. R. McInnes, dismissed lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, has come to hand, and is as follows:—

To the People of British Columbia:

Having to-day been notified by the Hon. Mr. Scott, Secretary of State, that confidential correspondence between myself and the Dominion Government would be laid before Parliament, I feel at liberty to publish the letters referred to in my open letter to you of the 25th June last. Mr. Scott is reported as saying in the Seanate that he wrote to me, not as a member of the Government, but as a personal friend. Senator Scott was never at any time such a friend of mine as to warrant his writing friendly confidential letters to me. And if he means to have it understood that the letters hereunder were written entirely on his own initiative, without the knowledge or consent of the Premier or other members of the Dominion Government, I do not think that he will find many to believe him. It is an absurd statement on the face of it that a secretary of state should interfere with an official action of a lieutenant-governor and give him specific directions as to his official duties, without consultation with other members of the cabinet. However, the letters will speak for themselves. In August of last year, after the resignation of Mr. Martin and the consequent critical position in which the Semlin Government was supposed to be, Messrs. Jaffray and Cox came out to Victoria. They interviewed me within a week or so of one another, and both of these gentlemen were much exercised lest Mr. Martin should regain power. They urged upon me that it was advisable that Mr. Martin should be kept out of power at all hazards. It so happened that at that time I myself was urging upon my then ministers the advisability of meeting the Legislature or appealing to the people.

Shortly after the return of Mr. Jafray and Cox to Eastern Canada, I received the letter from the Secretary of State, dated the 30th August last. Chiefly as a result of that letter I went to Ottawa a few weeks later. While there, among other things, I again offered to resign my position and re-enter political life. At the same time I warned Sir Wilfrid Laurier that his Government was fast losing ground in the West. After I returned to Victoria the defeat of the Greenway Government occurred in Manitoba. In reply to a letter of mine referring to this, Sir Wilfrid wrote to me on the 23rd December last, saying that he would be glad if I would point out to him how the situation could be improved. This I tried to do in my letter to him of the 3rd January last. The next letter of the series hereunder is dated the 13th April last, and is from Mr. Scott. I had adhered strictly to the directions given in his letter of the 30th August last, in the matter of leaving it to my Ministers to fix the date of summoning the Legislature—and this certainly involved the question also of fixing the date of an election. I understood that I was not to interfere in any way with my Ministers in any matter involving a question of time in regard to matters within their jurisdiction. Of course, the rule was now to be applied to Mr. Martin instead of Mr. Semlin—and apparently that quite altered the value of the rule, in the opinion of the Secretary of State.

He complained, not that I had dismissed the Semlin Government, but because I had not endeavored to form a government out of the material in the House (as if a lieutenant-governor had the personal direction of the formation of a government!) because a coalition seemed possible and had not taken place because so long a time was permitted to elapse before completing the personnel of the government (not as long a time as was taken in completing the personnel of the Laurier government); because my ministers were new and untried men. As pointed out in my official reply of the 15th May last, already published, I had no official right to interfere in matters of this kind. I had a right, however, to interfere when the Semlin Government was defeated and would neither resign nor go before the people. The provincial press almost unanimously approved of the dismissal of the Semlin Government. Yet that same press is apparently willing to-day to uphold Sir Wilfrid, who has alleged the dismissal of the Semlin Government as the reason for my dismissal. This, however, is merely in line with the inconsistency and injustice of the treatment accorded me in connection with the whole affair.

THOS. R. McINNES.

REVOLT OF HONEST LIBERALS

Old-Time Liberals Cannot Endorse the New Liberalism as Exemplified by the Present Government.

One of the old Liberals writes to the Montreal Witness on the political situation, under the head of "To Your Tents, O Israel!" He declares that if the Laurier Government is defeated this result will be brought about by the lukewarmness, if not the hostility, of its friends. "If intelligent and not over-prejudiced observers of the trend of public opinion are to be believed, the 'old Reformers' are disgruntled, disappointed, and in many cases disheartened, and they are not prepared to again bear the burden and heat of the day, only to be disappointed again. It is declared that if the old cry, 'To Your Tents, O Israel!' has not been raised, it is because the men who have that feeling in their hearts are slow to move, slow to break the associations of years; but, nevertheless, they are none the less determined to wreck the Government."

If, says the writer, these old Reformers are not prepared to work in 1900 as they did in 1896, the Government is gone. But the cry "To you tents!" is the cry of the coward. Instead of sulking the honest Liberals ought to insist upon reform. "The men who have been placed in the Cabinet and in Parliament by the Liberal party are its elected leaders. They hold their place in trust for the country through the party. If the party is not satisfied with the way they have fulfilled that trust, then the party should deal with them before it appeals to the country. Instead of 'To Your Tents, O Israel!' the cry of the disgruntled Liberals should be for 'A Free Convention.' The Liberal party will be beaten if it goes to the polls divided against itself. It need not be beaten if it purges itself of the 'heeler,' and, by asserting its supremacy over anyone or every one that attempts either to dictate to it or embroil it in crooked political courses, it assures the country that Government by the Liberal party means government by public opinion." Certainly, if the Laurier Government is to win back its lost popularity it must be re-constructed, and it must lay down a definite and altogether different policy to that which it is now pursuing. The master minds of the Administration are not Liberals, but opportunists, who profess adherence to Liberal principles in order to win the Liberal vote. The platform of 1893 was decidedly Liberal. It was an acceptance of the doctrines of Brown, Mackenzie and Blake. After the election men who were not in sympathy with the Reform principles were placed in positions of command. Who in Ontario supposed at the time of the contest that Messrs. Tarte, Blair and Sifton were to rule in the Cabinet and to reverse the platform? Mowat, Cartwright or Joly were announced as the directors of the policy; their names were given out as guarantees that the platform would be adhered to. But Mowat speedily went and Joly followed him. Sir Richard meanwhile was suppressed. By Sir Wilfrid the boast was made the other day at a banquet that Sir Richard was completely cowed. He might object to wrongs when in the secret Cabinet Council, but after the Government had determined to push these wrongs through Sir Richard, instead of continuing to object, gave them his "loyal" support, or, at all events, did not oppose them. A very good illustration of Sir Richard's servitude was afforded last week, when the railway subsidies were under debate. Sir Richard had always antagonized these grants, and had described them as robberies. Now they are doubled. We are bound under the new system to give twice as much per mile as bonuses to railways as we formerly did. When the subsidies came up for discussion Sir Richard, who ought to have opposed them, rose from his seat and left the chamber. Members who were curious to know what he would do could see nothing but his coat tails flying out of the door and whizzing through the lobbies. Sir Richard is extinct as a Reformer, and the opportunists are on top. The peculiarity of the opportunists is not merely that they do not follow the Liberal platform, but that they do all that the old Liberals complained of as wrong when done by the Conservatives, but in a much worse way. The Conservatives, of course, made mistakes. It is human to err. But such open and flagrant piracy as is pursued under the Opportunists was never even charged against them, much less proven. This scandal programme was certainly not what the Liberals ordered. All along the platform, however, the opposite to what was promised was given. What an imposition it was to complain of the high taxes and then on coming to office to increase the levies upon the people by twelve and a half millions of dollars. A like imposition is the tremendous increase in the expenditure. What makes it worse is the circumstances that when decent Reformers protested against it Mr. Tarte, the gentleman who is speaking for them so disloyally in France, described them as "big fools." Mr. Tarte was quite ready to use the Reformers in order to get office, where he could be mischievous, and when he got the place and felt secure he turned savagely upon his dupes and abused them for their principles.

The transition from Liberalism to an opportunism which makes worse what was said to be wrong in the Conservatives, and which actually jeers at Reformers and their doctrines, has been so marked that we need not be surprised at the revolt of honest Liberals. But a re-construction of the Cabinet is out of the question. Laurier cannot dispense with any one of the "strong" men. Equally impossible is it to have a free convention, at which the Liberals of principle can force a reversion to the old policy. Tarte regards these Liberals as "big fools," and is not going to be guided by them. But we must get back to a reasonable and a safe system. This is indeed a time when we should combine to teach politicians that they must be faithful to their professed principles, to insist upon common honesty in government, and to save the country from the awful liabilities that are being so recklessly laid upon us. The Liberal who declines to exert himself for the men who have so grossly deceived him need not charge himself with infidelity to his party. He will only do what Mr. Mackenzie would have done, and what Blake did do in '91, when Laurier was advocating a dangerous programme.

Mr. R. Brown, Peterborough, who is visiting in town, enjoyed a pleasant day with friends at Lev's Point yesterday.—Port Hope Guide.

A REMARKABLE STORY.

George Renison, Just Back From Hudson's Bay, Brings Confirmation of Andree's Balloon Story.

Winnipeg, July 20.—George Renison, who has arrived at Port Arthur from Hudson Bay, brings news confirming the report of a balloon having been wrecked and three men having lost their lives in Ungava, on the east coast of Hudson Bay, and supposed to be the remains of the missing Andree expedition. The story was carried by Indian hunters to Fort George, on the northeast coast of James Bay, thence by the same band to York Factory, whence in turn it was carried to Moose Factory. Here Mr. George Renison was paying a visit to his brother, and two days after the arrival of the Indians, June 25, he left Moose Factory, and has just arrived at Port Arthur.

He says the Indians, when a considerable distance north of Fort George, came upon a sight unusual to them. Two men dead and one badly injured lay beside the wreck of a balloon. They gathered around the injured man, who evidently was in great agony. The Indians could not understand the language used by the man, but by the signs he requested them to kill him, which they did on the spot where he lay. When they arrived at Fort George and again at Moose Factory they related the incident, describing the balloon and car, a thing which they had never before seen.

When Mr. Renison left Moose Factory the Hudson Bay officials at that point were arranging to have a party of Indians repair to the scene of the wrecked balloon and bring in papers and such other articles as may be found and are capable of being transferred.

Message From Col. Otter.

Ottawa, July 20.—A cablegram from Col. Otter was received by the Militia Department last night. It is dated Johannesburg, yesterday. In it Col. Otter states that Lieuts. Borden and Birch met their deaths under most gallant circumstances. He also reports No. 61, Pte. A. W. Brown, "A" Squad., R. D. D., son of Mr. Brown, London, England, was mortally wounded, and Pte. L. W. R. Mulloy, P. L. D. G., whose next of kin is Martha Read of Winchester, Ont., as severely wounded in the same action as that where Lieut. Boraen fell.

Reception to Pte. Cartwright.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 20.—Pte. Cartwright, of the Dragoons, who has lately returned from service in South Africa, was in the city last night, and the boys of the local regiments prepared a reception for him. The members of the non-commission messes of the 19th Batt. and 7th Field Battery, met in the regimental quarters at 7.30, and, headed by the band and the entire regiments, escorted the returned hero to the park. Speeches were made by Mayor Keating, President O'Donnell, Rev. Robert Kerr and Mr. Cartwright.

The Premier's Short Rest.

Montreal, July 20.—La Patrie last evening says: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier has decided to take no vacation except two or three days at Arthabaskaville. He will be at Ottawa all the time, with Hon. Mr. Bernier and Hon. Mr. Mulock, to look after public business and to receive suggestions from his political friends. Sir Wilfrid will look after the Department of Railways and Canals during Mr. Blair's absence, and Hon. Mr. Bernier will be Acting Minister of Marine while Sir Louis Davies is away.

now chief of the Bureau of American Republics, to China to investigate the situation and report to the authorities here.

LI HUNG CHANG.

He is Said to Have Connived With Prince Tuan in a Secret Understanding With Russia.

London, July 20.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Globe, who is inclined to sensationalism, telegraphs that Russia has been secretly negotiating with Prince Tuan, the leader of the anti-foreign element, with connivance of Li Hung Chang. Viceroy Lin Kun Yih of Nankin received the details of the scheme from Tuan, but failed to apprise the powers of what was going on. It is also said that certain high authorities of Yang Tse provinces favor secret alliance with Russia, but Viceroy Chang Chi Tung will not agree to such proposition.

Orders From Prince Tuan.

New York, July 20. — Regarding Li Hung Chang's departure for the north, The Herald's Canton correspondent asserts that the Viceroy left that city under orders he received from Prince Tuan, and that he is to proceed to Chi Li province to resume his vice-regal office.

WHAT LI HUNG CHANG SAYS.

Foreigners, With Exception of Von Ketteler, Were Safe on July 8.

Hong Kong, Wednesday, July 18.—Li Hung Chang and his suite arrived here yesterday evening and landed this morning.

The Chinese were received with a salute of 17 guns. With a guard of honor from the Welsh Fusiliers and a band he proceeded to the Government House, where he was received by the Governor, Sir Henry A. Blake, Generals Gazalee, Barrow and other officials. Li Hung Chang was extremely reticent. He stated that he had received definite news that the Ministers and foreigners at Pekin, with the exception of Baron Von Ketteler, the German Minister, were safe July 8. The Imperial edict recalling him to Pekin, the Viceroy said, was due to the Empress and Emperor and not to Prince Tuan.

Governor Blake exerted all possible power to induce Li Hung Chang to remain in Canton, but the Chinese Viceroy proceeded ostensibly for Shanghai city. The Governor of Canton is regarded as an exceptionally weak official, and the natives fear he will never succeed in maintaining order. Transports, with a portion of the Bengal Lancers, a native field hospital and Gens. Gazelee and Barrow, have proceeded to Taku. The deck-protected cruiser Dido has gone to Woosung.

Nankin Viceroy Goes to Pekin.

London, July 20.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"The Viceroy of Nankin has received an edict, summoning him to Pekin. As he is pro-foreign in his sentiments, his departure is undesirable, and is an element of danger."

Gave Him His Passport.

New York, July 20.—In a long cable from London anent the uprising in China, the London correspondent of The Journal and Advertiser asserts that having satisfied itself that the Imperial Government of China is not only countenancing the acts of the Boxers, but directing their movements and that regular Chinese troops have invaded Manchuria, the Russian Government on Wednesday handed the Chinese envoy at St. Petersburg his passports and requested him and the members of his mission to leave the country.

Chinese Pounding Russians.

London, July 20.—The Daily Express publishes the following from Che Foo, dated July 18:

"The Russians are hard pressed around Niuchwang, and have been expelled from Tienchwang Tai, the scene of the great fight during the Chino-Japan war, where they have sustained heavy losses.

"They have also been compelled to abandon Taschichau by a large body of Boxers and armed peasants. Here again, the Russians lost heavily; but it is reported that they succeeded in killing 700 of their assailants. The Chinese have completely demolished the railway north of Taschichau. The Russians are now at Niuchwang."

CROWDS OF FREEMASONS.

Record Attendance of Delegates at the Grand Lodge in London.

London, Ont., July 20.—The attendance at the Masonic Grand Lodge is the largest on record, and the city is taxed to find accommodation.

An enthusiastic reception was tendered by the Grand Lodge to P. G. M. W. A. Sutherland and R. W. Bro. Brooke of Rochester, N. Y. Bro. Sutherland's reply to M. W. Bro. Malone's welcome was felicitous and eloquent. He repudiated yellow journal "mosquito bites," and declared that "Our Bobs" was as much honored in the United States as in any part of the British Empire. Great applause and the singing of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," followed the expression.

The Rt. Hon. Gerald Fitzgibbon of Ireland, representing the Grand Lodge of Canada there, was honored with the rank of past senior warden.

V. W. Bro. N. L. Steiner of Toronto was made a past grand registrar, and R. W. Bro. J. J. Mason of Hamilton, grand secretary, was honored with the rank of past grand master.

A resolution moved by Hon. J. M. Gibson and seconded by E. F. Clark, M. P., appreciating the services of Bro. Lord Roberts and his armies on the battlefield, was passed, with cheers and the singing of "Soldiers of the Queen."

Past Grand Master W. H. Sutherland of New York was made an honorary member of the Grand Lodge of Canada.

The report of the Credential Committee showed 914 names registered, carrying a total vote of 1,591, the largest in the history of the Grand Lodge.

A resolution was passed devoting $400 to purchase from the author a sufficient number of copies of Robertson's "History of Freemasonry in Canada," to supply the libraries of sister Grand Lodges in the United States.

By unanimous consent Hamilton was selected as the next place of meeting.

The rank of past grand master was conferred on W. Bro. D. McQuade of Chaudiere Lodge, who resigned his office on going as a volunteer with "D" Battery to South Africa.

Election of Officers.

Grand Master—R. B. Hungerford, of London, unanimously.

D. G. M.—Judge Harding, Lindsay.

G. Chaplain—Rev. J. C. Farthing, Woodstock.

G. Sen. Warden—Bro. John M. McWhinney, London.

G. Jun. Warden—V. W. Bro. Alex Gibson, Peterboro.

G. Registrar—W. Bro. J. D. Clarke, Ottawa.

The five members elected to the Board of General Purposes are Col. J. C. Hegler, A. R. Hargraft, J. S. Dewar, Judge Macwatt and W. A. Macpherson.

THEY THREW IT AWAY

Canadian Soldiers Condemn the Emergency Food of the Canadian Government—It Was no Good.

Toronto World.

Speaking of the famous Canadian emergency rations, a member of the Canadian Mounted Rifles said: "Why, we had to throw it away and get an English article, as it was utterly worthless as an emergency ration. A number of the cans were opened, and the boys would not eat their contents, and so they were thrown by the wayside. The powder was unpalatable even when eaten in the form of porridge, and was also entirely valueless as a tissue producing food. I am taking a box home, just to show my people what the Government gave us to live on when unable to secure any other kind of food.

"The boys of the first contingent, I found, had been supplied with an English emergency food, and had not seen the Canadian article. They were therefore unable to express an opinion concerning it."

Hamilton Herald, Ind.

What the Canadian soldiers in South Africa think of the emergency rations is perhaps of some importance. The Herald has it from the lips of a Canadian soldier just back from South Africa that a little of the food was used, but most of it was thrown away.

Toronto Telegram.

I mentioned emergency rations to the assembled soldiers. The mounted infantrymen broke forth in merry laughter. The emergency rations have been tried by some of the second contingent. They said they had no use for it. A few troopers have it with them still. It is not of the same character as the English emergency ration, and the men were of the opinion as an emergency food it was not up to the mark.—From interview with the returned Canadian soldiers.

World's Champion Healer.

"I tried many remedies to cure piles," writes W. R. Smith, of Latham, Ill., "but found no relief till I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve. I have not been troubled with piles since." Grandest pile cure on earth and the best salve in the world. 25c. per box, guaranteed by J. Lynch, druggist.

And Yet it Costs a Great Deal.

Ottawa Citizen.

Mr. R. G. Bovillie, of Montreal, and well known in the Capital, is now in Paris doing the exposition, and contributing a series of letters thereon to the press. In his latest correspondence he makes this apologetic reference to the Canadian exhibit:—

"True, Canada has a building that cost $100,0000, with a $10,000 look about it, and about as much structural beauty as the barn of a western homestead, and it looks as if the English architect had been employed chiefly in that business. True, some of the Canadian exhibitors were not sufficiently impressed with the idea that cases for the exhibition of goods should possess some little taste, and that the Paris exhibition differed slightly from a country fair. True, also, that the peculiar frenzy, that some art lover in the Canadian building has for covering the pillars with a mosaic of whisks does not remind one of Florence or the Renaissance."

Had the Minister of Agriculture no power that he should suffer his country to be discredited by such an exhibit? Mr. Bovillie is patriotic and disposed to make the best report possible for his adopted land, and would even stretch the truth, as he seems to have done, in ascribing the credit that properly belongs to J. B. Halkett, of the Fisheries Department, to another, yet he is constrained to acknowledge that Canada has not had justice done her at the Paris exposition.

The Health Problem.

Is much simpler than is sometimes supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla. You may keep well by taking it promptly for any stomach or blood disorder. Its cures of scrofula, salt rheum, catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism and other diseases are numbered by the thousands.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

To Lessen Forest Fires.

Chief Game Warden Tinsley is trying to lessen the number of outbreaks of forest fires by sending out the following rules for campers on the public domain:—"Never build a fire where its flames can communicate to grass or brush or branches. Never build a fire where the sparks can be carried to brush, trees, leaves or grass. Never build a fire without first noticing the lay of the land, with respect to controlling it after it is kindled. Never leave camp for the day with the fire to burn unattended. Extinguish it thoroughly. Under no circumstances, when moving camp, leave the fire to burn or smoulder. Put it out. To extinguish a fire built upon the ground, where there is turf or the roots of trees in the soil, pour water upon it until the ground is thoroughly soaked; then dig around about and well outside the circumference, throwing the earth in toward the centre, and then wet it down again."

The buttons were manufactured in New York and were consigned to a society calling itself "The Canadian Independence League," and which appears to have a certain following in Montreal.

"Y" CAMP HAS BEEN SAFELY ESTABLISHED AT THE OLD CAMPING GROUND.

Particulars of the Journey Made by the Pioneer Corps—Rain Descended and Tents Ascended Shortly After Arrival—All are There Now.

Wednesday, July 18th.

Once again Y. Camp has reached its favorite haunt on the grassy shore of Clear Lake just where its smooth waters are broken by the many rocks at the entrance of Stony Lake, and Sandy Point is once more alive with boys of all ages, sizes, shapes and forms. The massive rocks along the beach are resounding again and again with the merry shouts of the boys, while the tall, stately pines seem to bend their bushy tops and stretch their ears in wonder at the unwonted bustle and racket.

Perhaps it would not be amiss to tell you a little of our trip to the camp. The advance guard under the command of J. M. MacLeod left Tuesday morning with the baggage, and on account of the great number of bags, valises, boxes, etc., two wagons were found necessary. Lakefield was reached in due time and the residents of that thriving village wondered whether a circus had invaded their unusually quiet little town as the caravan with its flags gaily flying passed up its busy thoroughfare. Greetings were exchanged with the Charlotte-st. excursionists, and within an hour we were at Young's Point and within a few miles of our destination. Here our party divided, four taking the boats up the lake, while the remainder of the party guided the wagons safely through the wilds to the northern shore of Clear Lake.

The sailors reached the camping grounds about two in the afternoon and to their surprise, waited in vain for the three they were discovered, and for about thre they were discovered, and for about an hour they had been travelling over rocks, stumps, stones and perhaps other things in their endeavor to reach the camp. With the aid of the boys the first wagon was extricated from its perilous position and camp was reached about four.

The first matter, of course, was lunch, for the boys had been living on a square inch sandwich or two, which on the slim foundation of a light breakfast partaken on the top of a wagon, left a strange gnawing around the hearts, or rather the stomachs, of the pioneers. A tent was hastily erected, and we were just in the midst of bologna and bread when the rains descended and the tent ascended. Everyone jumped for the tent, and such a mixture of boys, bags, grips and sausages had not been experienced for some time. Amid great difficulties lunch was finished, and between the showers everything was made as snug as possible for the night. All turned in early, as little sleep had been obtained the previous night, and Wednesday morning dawned with every sign that the wet weather had broken and Y. camp had brought good luck to the beautiful Kawartha Lakes.

About one o'clock the remainder of the party arrived under the charge of Mr. Williamson, and the camp now numbers fifty-three, which includes our cook, Mr. Joe Harvey.

We are now fully organized, and truly we may say that the Y. Camp of 1900 bids fair to outstrip all other camps of the present century.

I must close now in order to catch the next mail.

Watch for particulars, as anything is likely to happen.

JACK.

TRAFFIC INTERRUPTED

C.P.R. Freight Train Tears up the Track at Claremont.

The C.P.R. express due yesterday at midnight did not come through till 11 o'clock this morning, and there were no trains through between midnight and that hour. The cause of the interruption of traffic was the wreck of freight train No. 51 at Claremont last night, due to a truck breaking. About 300 yards of the track was torn up and considerable other damage was done, although there was no one injured. The auxiliary from Havelock assisted in restoring order. The 11.27 express went through on time this morning.

FROM FRED SCOLLIE

Now at Victoria Road, Cape Colony, on Line of Communications.

Trooper Fred Scollie, of the 14th Field Battery, and now in South Africa, writes from Victoria Road, Cape Colony, under date of June 15th, stating that he is at the place named helping to keep open the lines of communication, in which duty alone 75,000 troops are engaged. Victoria Road is the healthiest place in South Africa, with good water. The Government has established a convalescent home there, in which there is now 200 patients. There are tents for 500, with canteens, bath tents, etc. Private Scollie states that the reason they are kept on their present duty is that Lord Roberts considers that their section of the battery has done sufficient service in suppressing the Kenhart rebellion. The boys all believe the end of the war to be near.

COL. SAM'S RETIREMENT

It is Said He Talked too Plainly to His Superior Officers.

A special to the Mail and Empire this morning from Montreal says:—

"A prominent militia officer to-day received advices from South Africa, which explain the cause of Col. Sam Hughes' retirement from the Imperial service in South Africa. It appears that, in his capacity as an intelligence officer, Col. Sam has, on more than one occasion, moved bodies of troops without authority. On the last occasion he was sharply remonstrated with by his superior officer, and Col. Hughes talked back in language more pointed than judicious. Thereupon the matter was reported to Lord Roberts, who asked for explanations. They were given, but again with a frankness of language which the Commander-in-Chief is not accustomed to. The upshot was that Col. Hughes was asked to send in his resignation.",

Preparing to Move.

Our new store, "China Hall," will be completed early in August, when it will be re-opened with an entirely new stock. As it is not proposed to move any goods from our present premises we will begin on Saturday next, 21st inst., a vacating sale, at greatly reduced prices. This event will prove a bonanza of bargains, as the goods offered are all new and bought for cash before the rise in prices. There are 73 dinner sets in stock, ranging in price from $2 to $50 each; hundreds of toilet sets, tea sets, etc. No such chance is likely ever to occur again. Bran new goods at wholesale cost. Attend the first days of the sale. The Macfarlane Wilson Co., Limited, 383 George-st.

AN ESTEEMED RESIDENT

Death of Mr A P Morgan, Proprietor of the Morgan House.

In the death of Mr. A. P. Morgan, proprietor of the Morgan House, which took place last evening about eight o'clock, Peterborough loses one of its well known citizens. Mr. Morgan had a very wide acquaintanceship, both in town and county, and was a man highly esteemed and popular with all.

The deceased was a native of Otonabee, where he was born 63 years ago, being a son of the late Wm. Morgan, one of the pioneers of the township. He afterwards removed to Peterborough and kept hotel where Primeau's barber shop now stands on Hunter-st. Twenty-four years ago he established the present Morgan House, and has conducted it since, making it one of the best and most popular hostelries in the district.

Mr. Morgan leaves a widow, formerly Miss Eliza Ryan, daughter of Mr. Thos. Ryan, and two children, Mrs. E. W. Cox and Mr. Harry Morgan. He also leaves two brothers, Messrs. Wm. Morgan, of Warsaw, and Arthur Morgan, of Otonabee, and a sister, Mrs. A. McMartin, of Toronto. The family will have the sympathy of all.

The deceased was a sufferer for years from inflammatory rheumatism, which became worse two or three months ago and was the cause of death. He was a charter member of Court Peterborough No. 20, C.O.F., was a director of the West Peterborough Agricultural society for years, and later an honorary director. He was also known for his interest in athletic sports.

PETERBOROUGHS WERE DEFEATED

LINDSAY'S AGGREGATION OF FOREIGNERS WON A LEAGUE MATCH

Assisted by the Umpire—The Game, However, Was Not Bad Ball and Was Witnessed by a Large Crowd.

The Peterborough baseball team visited Lindsay yesterday to play a Midland league match, and were defeated by the collection gathered in by Lindsay from the district between Toronto and Kingston by 10 runs to 3 and an innings. It was known that the Lindsay management would make a desperate effort to defeat them, and as there was no Lindsay battery capable of standing in front of them there was considerable speculation as to what pitcher would be hired for the day. Sullivan, of Kingston, was the man and it was chiefly his work which won the match for the Lindsay management. Sullivan has a pro reputation, and was signed by Syracuse last year.

The Lindsay people turned out in large numbers to view the match between their foreigners and the Peterborough men, and the majority were pleased with the result, not because they love the importations so much, but because it did them good to see Peterborough defeated after its four successive victories over the teams that played for their town.

The umpiring of McAdam, who played on the Lindsay team last year, was rank. He turned his blind eye to the winning chances of the Peterborough men, and if a Lindsay runner got anywhere near a bag he was called safe. Mr. McAdam did great service for his team. Aside from his obvious partiality his judgment was very erratic.

A few tough friends of the Lindsay club sat on the stand, and through megaphones roasted some of the Peterborough players in language at times unfit for public hearing and unbecoming to decent men. They were a nuisance on the grounds, but the Lindsay management made no effort to control them.

The game was a good exhibition of baseball, aside from the things mentioned. Sullivan pitched a great game and, with some of the other players, smiled a wise smile at the efforts of the umpire. McCabe also pitched good ball, and was given good support, the team playing remarkably well under the circumstances. The match was won and lost in the 3rd innings, when the ringers made 5 runs. The score was as follows:

NOTES.

Lindsay gathers a strong aggregation of players at times for a strictly amateur team.

The Peterborough team put up at the Simpson House, and were well treated there.

About thirty people from town went up to view the game yesterday.

The crowd in attendance was a large one and the gate receipts must have been big. They would need to be to pay the salaries.

The roasting of some of the tough, long-distance talkers on the stand was directed chiefly to Chris. Graham.

The Lindsay people are great baseball enthusiasts when they pay to see a Kingston battery and Toronto field play for them.

Died in Toronto.

The remains of the late Mrs. Badell, of Toronto, were brought to town this morning for interment in the Little Lake cemetery. Mrs. Badell, whose death took place on Wednesday, was a daughter of the late C. D. Macdonald, for some years town clerk of Peterborough, and sister of James G. Macdonald, also town clerk for a time. She leaves a husband and one child, also two sisters and one brother. Many friends had gathered at the station, whence the funeral took place to the cemetery, Rev. Wm. Bennet conducting the ceremony.

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"I have reviewed the circumstances that occurred in Norcombe, but it is not upon these events alone that the case stands. Let us turn to Chicago. Herbert Darrent has been before you and given his evidence with exemplary clearness. He has told you the manner in which he succeeded in tracking Astray Marsden to the Royal hotel in Chicago, and he has related the story of

The Arrest.

"The first words of the prisoner when Darrent entered the room were, 'You have come to arrest me,' and, though warned not to commit himself, he then launched into a heated attack against the murdered man, an attack which foreshadowed the line of defense which has been adopted—that of revenge. He charged Josiah Marsden with leaving such a message for the sole purpose of encompassing the death of an innocent man whom he hated.

"With that point I have already dealt. The idea in itself is too callous to dilate upon.

"In the prisoner's confession to Herbert Darrent he accounted for the loss of his knife in the same manner that the defense has insisted upon. He took it out to open the cigar box, forgot it, and it was left lying upon the table, a handy weapon for the murderer. To that point of the defense I will but add a word.

"If the murderer of Josiah Marsden came to the house with intent to murder, would he have left the finding of the weapon to chance, or would he have come prepared? If he came prepared, would he use a chance weapon or trust to the one he knew?

"Let me now, before you retire to consider your verdict, put into a few words the whole evidence. Against the prisoner you have the last words of the dying man, the knife, the long standing quarrel, the absence of a reasonable alibi, and for him"— The judge pauses and deliberately turns back the pages of his notes, while the whole audience seems to throb with emotion.

"It's a fearful summing up," one lawyer whispers to another.

"Brutal—dead against him, poor devil!" his companion replies, glancing at the prisoner, who, pale as death, gazes before him with eyes that see nothing.

"While for him," the judge impassively continues, "you have the line of defense that he left The Grange hours before the murder was committed."

The judge closes his book, and we await his peroration. We feel that we know what it will be.

"If you have no doubt, it is your duty to do your duty—an eye for an eye, a life for a life," and many more rounded phrases with which a judge is usually pleased to torment a man whose life or death is to be settled within the next hour. But we are mistaken.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he says, "the case is in your hands." And that is all. The summing up is over.

"Poor devil!" some one whispers again, and we shudder. It puts into words what we dared not think.

The jury do not move. They only whisper in the box. It seems as if they are going to decide without leaving it. But perhaps the seriousness of their task comes over them, and they slowly leave, and the prisoner is conducted from the courtroom.

"Dead against him!" is the general opinion. "Fair and just, but dead against him! He hasn't got a line of defense in his whole case."

The judge has retired, but no one else leaves the court. The audience feels that it is not a case of waiting for hours, but minutes, perhaps only seconds. The last words of the summing up crash through each man's brain. What do they amount to? Against the prisoner you have—everything; for him—nothing!

The Verdict.

The jury re-enter the box; the judge returns; the prisoner, between two deputies, takes his place in the dock.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon your verdict?"

"We have."

"Do you find the prisoner, Astray Marsden, guilty or nor guilty of the murder of Josiah Marsden?"

"Guilty!"

A woman's scream, half stifled in its birth, breaks the fearful silence of the court—a scream followed by a gasp. The assembled throng breathes hard as what it knew must happen comes.

Then the deathlike silence falls like a pall again.

"Prisoner at the bar," a voice is saying, and it seems to come from somewhere miles away, even to us—what must it seem to him?—"have you anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon you?"

All eyes are turned with one impulse toward the dock, and the spectators start with amazement.

The prisoner, the man condemned to death, whom they had pitied throughout the trial as one so miserable that he could not defend himself, is transformed.

He stands erect, with almost a glow upon his cheeks, nearly a smile upon his lips, manhood and courage awakening in his eye. He is condemned to death and stands as though his fetters had been released.

We are creatures of impulse. The spectators gaze at one another. The same thought is in every mind, "Suppose he is innocent!" There is mesmerism in his glance, and they follow it as it rests upon the girl with her head thrown forward on her arms upon the table.

The judge shifts uneasily, moves as though to speak. He seems held powerless by that strange force which is upon all.

The girl feels the power of that glance, and as if in obedience to its command throws back her veil and rises and faces Astray Marsden, and as she does so even the heavens add to the intensity of the scene.

The sun is setting. The room is shrouded in gloom, save for one glorious beam of light which passes over the shoulder of the prisoner and floods the face of the girl with a halo of light.

They face one another, and the spectators pause and watch, lost in the mystery of the thoughts that are passing between them.

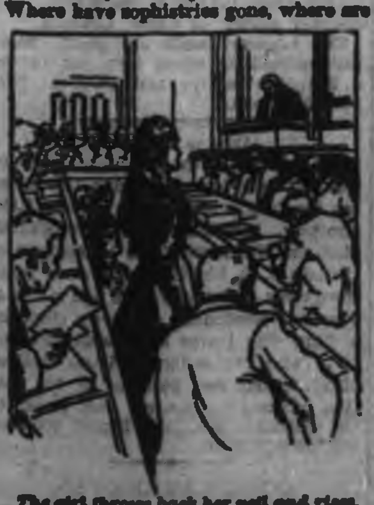
"Ethel!"

Only the lifting of the face more toward him shows that she has heard.

"Do you believe me guilty? Do you believe that I am a murderer?"

"No!"

It is only a whisper, but it thrills. Where have sophistries gone, where are deductions, when compared with the love of this woman who stands thus before the world?



The girl throws back her veil and rises.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Ffolliott Paget is a lineal descendant of Mrs. Siddons.

Sarah Bernhardt will not appear in London this season.

Hamilton Reville will not be with Olga Nethersole's company next season.

A late German play, "The Daughter of Erasmus," has Martin Luther for one of its characters.

J. K. Emmet has secured a Transvaal play called "The Outpost," in which he intends to star.

Minnie Seligman Cutting was given a divorce by default recently in St. Louis from her tall husband, Robert L. Cutting.

Mary Mannering will star next season in "A Durward Layde," a romantic drama concerning the adventure of a creole girl in America.

It is said that Mme. Modjeska intends to give up her usual tour of this country next season and will spend the time among her relatives in Poland.

The great ambition of Novelli, the much talked of Italian actor, is said to be to act Hamlet in English in the Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon.

Denman Thompson in speaking of "Our New Minister," his new comedy drama of New England life, says that he is looking forward to another "Homestead" success for this production.

Miss Gertrude Coghlan, the daughter of Charles Coghlan, is to make a tour next season at the head of a company, playing the part of Becky Sharp in her father's dramatisation of "Vanity Fair."

Sergeant Warren and 16 United States troopers just returned from the Philippines have been engaged to do the rough rider act with "Shenandoah" next season, which goes out again on a spectacular scale.

THE DRESS MODEL.

Very small handkerchiefs daintily embroidered and trimmed with lace are the fashion.

Cashmeres in pretty light colors are embroidered in small rings of white silk, which give them a new style.

Low necked nightgowns made with a much trimmed loose bodice and a trimmed skirt attached are the modes for summer wear.

A new silk which is like quicksilver in appearance has appeared. It is plain, not figured, and is used for waists instead of taffeta.

One button kid gloves are worn with the new sleeve, which has the dainty undersleeve banded so closely at the wrist that a longer glove is clumsy.

Scarfs of maltese and brussels lace are very much worn with the soft, finely tucked silk stocks. They are carried twice around the neck and tied sailor fashion, bow on the bust.

Gold and silver ribbons, which are silk and tinsel woven together, are a new fancy and a very pretty one for belts and collar bands. They are as soft and pliable as if they were of all silk.

The elegance of the white lawn petticoat has no limit this season. It is trimmed with very handsome embroidery and lace, is made to fit the hips in the approved fashion and costs anywhere from $25 to $65.

A plain pale blue parasol is one of the items of a fashionable outfit this season, and a detachable cover of fine white muslin tucked and trimmed with valenciennes lace transforms it from a dressy one for afternoon.

THE BOER.

The Boer soldiers have lost everything save honor, but that they have retained by as gallant and skillful a fight as has ever been made by a free people.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Boer idea of independence is dead in South Africa. The hopes cherished by the followers of Kruger are blasted forever. They must accept the fate of the vanquished or again trek afar into the desert, where foes in new guise of old will finally overtake and engulf them. —Philadelphia Times.

A siege of Pretoria could have had but one result. Two hundred thousand trained men who have smelled powder and shown their valor are rather too much for the comparative handful of patriots no matter how straight they can shoot, and lavishness in the sacrifice of life is not a necessary adjunct to bravery. —Brooklyn Times.

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

Among the animals of Australia is a species of hog not much larger than a rat.

Bumblebees, butterflies and beetles are habitual drunkards. In some of the southern states these insects alight on certain plants, drink heartily from the blossoms and fall to the ground stupefied.

Rats have exterminated a colony of 48 prairie dogs in Lincoln park, Chicago. At least their disappearance is thus explained by the keepers, who found 48 cleanly picked skeletons, mute evidence of the tragedy.

The sea horse alone, with one other existing fish, the gar pike of our western rivers, possesses the power which was common to many of the older fishes, that of turning its head independently of its body. The sea horse can also turn its eyes in almost any direction.

EXCLUSION.

The Chinese embassador does not like the spirit in which Commissioner Powderly approaches the administration of the provisions of the act. What Wu Ting Fang really wants is an exclusion act that does not exclude.—San Francisco Examiner.

Our treaties with Japan must be so modified as to admit of a Japanese exclusion act similar to that by which Chinese are excluded. The modification of the treaty with China so as to permit the Chinese exclusion act furnishes a precedent for action in this case.—San Francisco Call.

RAILWAY RUMBLES.

Out For His Health.

Brassie—What were you doing lugging that bundle of sticks on the links yesterday afternoon?

Foosle—Well, I have come to the conclusion that it is just as good exercise carrying the sticks as to follow the ball over the field with only an occasional muscular effort, so I make the caddie do the hitting, and I carry the bag.—Boston Transcript.

Housekeeper—Oh, dear, I haven't a cent of change! But you can just leave a 25 cent piece, and I'll pay you tomorrow.

It was a grand thing for this community that such an enterprising firm as J. SECOND STAGE OF QUEEN'S.

Two of the Canadian Team Make Big Scores at Bisley.

Top Prize in the Grand Aggregate For Colonials Goes to Sergt. McVittie—Canadians' First Garden Party—Lord Strathcona Presents the Cup—£25 Goes With It—Tink of Ottawa in Second Place.

London, July 20.—Owing to the continuance of the phenomenal heat, many cases of prostration have occurred among marksmen competing in the meeting of the National Rifle Association at Bisley.

Sergt. Murray has won the bronze medal in the first stage (seven shots at 200, 500 and 600 yards) of the Queen's Prize. In the same stage the Canadians, Blair, Annand and Bodeley, won small money prizes. Most of the other competing Canadians will shoot in the second stage (10 shots at 500, and 15 shots at 600 yards) of this competition.

Reception by Canadians.

The Canadians held a reception yesterday at their handsome club house. It took the form of a garden party, and proved thoroughly successful. The perfect weather brought out many ladies, handsomely gowned. Miss Delamere, daughter of the commandant of the team, aided in receiving the guests,

All the season's delicacies were served on the refreshment table, and while the function was in progress Lord Strathcona presented his cup to Sergt. J. McVittie of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, who had won it in the grand aggregate amongst colonial marksmen. The prize is a handsome cup, and a money prize of £25 goes with it. The grand aggregate is made up from scores in the following matches: Martin's Cup, Queen's Prize (first stage), Alexandra, Daily Graphic, Daily Telegraph and Graphic, and in these matches Sergt. McVittie's score was in excess of any other Canadian or colonial marksman.

During his remarks, Lord Strathcona referred feelingly to the death of Lieut. Borden, and expressed the hope that the Mother Country and the colonies would be drawn closer together by the intermingling of battalions.

Replies by Canadian Officers.

Lieut.-Col. Delamere, in his reply, said that Canada would be found as ready as ever to spill her blood for the Empire.

Sir Henry Fletcher made a few remarks and praised the work of the Strathcona Horse in South Africa.

Lieut.-Col. Mackay, adjutant of the team, declared that French-Canadians were as loyal as any other section of the Canadian people.

Lieut. Smith Got Second.

The second grand aggregate prize, a cup presented by the Canadian Club of London, was won by Lieut. A. A. Smith of the 59th Batt.

Second Stage of the Queen's.

Pte. A. Tink of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, and Sergt. C. E. Morse of the 69th Batt. figured prominently in the second stage of the Queen's. With 10 shots at the 500-yard range each scored 46 points. Pte. T. A. Langstroth of the 74th Batt. followed with 43; Gunner Fleming of the R.C.A. with 42, and Lieut. W. J. Graham of the 77th Batt. and Sergt. J. McVittie of the 48th Highlanders with 41 each.

Got Little Money Prizes.

In the first stage of the Queen's, 200 yards, Bombardier Bodeley, Lt. H. C. Blair and Capt. W. J. Annand won £2 each. They stood, respectively, 325, 330 and 355 in the list.

Duke of Cambridge Match.

In the Duke of Cambridge match, 900 yards 10 shots, Bomb. Bodeley got fifth place, and won £4. Staff-Sergt. Carruthers, in 23rd place, and Lieut. H. C. Blair, in ninth place, got £2 each.

Visitors From South Africa.

Pte. W. Oxley of the 93rd Cumberland Batt., Pte. S. Blair of the 93rd Cumberland Batt., Pte. H. A. McDougall of the 5th Royal Scots, Montreal; Pte. W. W. Grant of the 48th Highlanders, Pte. R. J. Cunningham of the 20th Halton Rifles, Pte. Jas. Drake 63rd Halifax Rifles, who had seen service in South Africa, with the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry, but were recently invalided to England, paid a visit to the camp, and, of course, called on the Canadian team, and cheered the good marksmanship of their fellow-countrymen.

Pte. Grant says that the hospitals in South Africa are all right. He had no complaint whatever to enter, and could not support Mr. Burdett-Coutts' charges.

ENDEAVORERS SAW THE QUEEN.

Her Majesty, Attired in White, Drove Down the Line.

London, July 20.—Several thousand of the Christian Endeavorers visited Windsor yesterday en route for Oxford and Stratford. Yesterday afternoon a large assembly gathered in the royal grounds, hoping to see the Queen, and received word that Her Majesty would appear in the quadrangle of the castle.

Here the Queen shortly arrived, attired in white, and accompanied by Princess Henry of Battenberg ready for a drive.

A thousand voices united in "God Save the Queen," which was followed by the Christian Endeavor anthem. Her Majesty drove down the ranks, acknowledging the plaudits, bowing and smiling.

Miss Nixon is Improving.

Orangeville, July 20.—Dr. T. H. Henry reports that Miss Gertie Nixon's condition has much improved in the last few days. Feeling is returning to the paralyzed portion of her body, and it is hoped that the paralysis may entirely leave her.

THE B. C. HOUSE OPENS.

Sir Henri Joly's First Appearance on the Throne Created Special Interest—Progressive Policy Promised.

Victoria, B.C., July 20.—The Provincial Legislature was opened yesterday afternoon by Governor Joly, with imposing ceremonies. As a social event it was a great success. J. P. Booth, North Victoria, Speaker during the last two sessions of the Turner Administration, was re-elected.

Speech From the Throne.

The speech from the throne opened with an expression of Sir Henri's gratitude for the hearty reception accorded him in the province. Reference is made to the South African war and the complications in China, and the significance of the support of the Mother Country by the colonies is noted. Sir Henri expressed great pleasure at the prosperity of the industries of the province, both mining and lumber, as well as the steady progress of agriculture, fruit growing, dairying, stock raising and other branches.

Regrading the influx of Japanese and Chinese, the speech says:

"I observe, since the correspondence between the Government of British Columbia, the Federal and Imperial Governments relating to Asiatic immigration has been published, a large influx of Japanese has taken place. The intention of my Government is to make strong representations to the authorities at Ottawa and Great Britain, with the view of protecting the interests of laboring classes against consequences which threaten an alarming increase in our Japanese population."

The extensive requirements of the province in the matter of development are discussed and a vigorous policy in road building is promised. Sir Henri goes on to say: "I am impressed with the opportunities which exist for the profitable carrying on of the manufacture of pulp in British Columbia, and note with pleasuee that preparations are being made and sites arranged for the extensive prosecution of this important industry.

"My Government will ask for an appropriation for defraying the expenses of a commission to inquire into the working of mining acts in view of introducing legislation for the purpose of amending them next session, and into the various conditions affecting the question of water right.

"The intention of my Government is to impose a tonnage tax upon the output of coal and coke in the province and introducing other measures to be considered for the purpose of increasing the revenue.

"The intention of my Government is to provide in the estimates a sum to place the office of Agent-General on a more satisfactory basis.

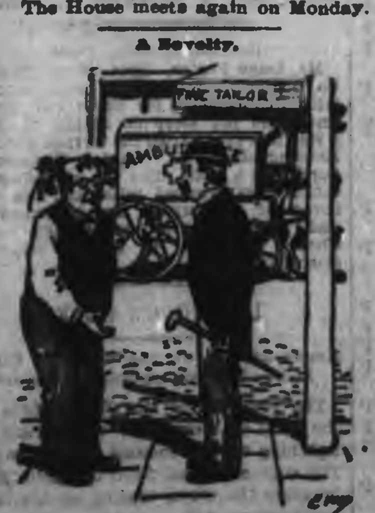
"Owing to the fact that the present extra session is for the purpose mainly of voting supplies, and that the regular session is to be held at an early date, the measures to be submitted for your consideration, though of an important nature, will be few in number.

"The estimates of receipts and expenditures, which have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the requirements of the province, will be submitted at an early date.

The vote of the expenditures necessary to carry on the business of Government till estimates are passed will be immediately asked."

The House meets again on Monday.

A Novelty.



"What's the matter across the way?" asked the tailor of a bystander as the ambulance backed up to the door of his rival.

"A customer fell in a fit, and they are taking him to the hospital," was the reply.

"That's strange," said the tailor. "I never knew a customer to get a fit in that establishment before."

A Necessary Fact.

"The doctor says I am badly run down and must go away for six months."

"But, John, dear, I can't leave town."

"That's part of the cure."—Life.

OF MASONIC INTEREST.

Reference Made to the Late Rev. V. Clementi—Some Figures of Interest.

In the Grand Master's annual address at the Masonic Grand Lodge at London reference was made to those members of the Craft in Grand Lodge who had passed away, and the following was the tribute paid to the late R. Wor. Bro. Rev. Vincent Clementi, of Corinthian Lodge, town:—"R. Wor. Bro. Rev. V. Clementi died at Peterborough on the 16th of October, 1899, at the advanced age of 87 years. By his death the craft loses one of its oldest and most respected members. He was a member of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, and was its chaplain at the time of his death. He was a member of the Provincial Grand Lodge before the organization of the present Grand Lodge. He was the representative near this Grand Lodge of the Grand Lodge of Chili."

Some idea may be obtained of the unostentatious and unsought benevolence distributed among the deserving brothers, widows and orphans by the Craft in Ontario when it is stated that the total amount this year footed up close upon $26,000. Of this sum Grand Lodge paid out $14,[illegible], while the subordinate lodges gave $11,861.20 to the deserving ones under their charge. This is a record year.

The reported net increase throughout the jurisdiction of the year is larger than during any previous term. The total membership in June, 1899, was 24,907. The member roll at the present time shows a net increase of 1,[illegible] and an aggregate of 26,126. The largest increases are in Toronto, London and Hamilton. In the two Toronto districts gains of 13 and 156 are credited to districts 11 and 11a, respectively; 109 to London, 102 to Hamilton, 94 to Georgian, 85 to Wellington, 73 to Prince Edward, 67 to Erie, 65 to South Huron, 54 to Frontenac, 51 to North Huron, 49 to Ontario, 45 to St. Clair, 43 to Algoma, 38 to Ottawa, 34 to Wilson, 22 to Nipissing and 19 to Niagara and St. Lawrence, respectively.

The financial statement shows the receipts to have been $52,412.71, and the current expenditures $8,979.11, exclusive of $12,129 distributed by the Board of Benevolence. The receipts from interest alone aggregated $5,955.77. The invested funds of Grand Lodge amount to $[illegible], of which $65,000 is in debentures, $11,[illegible] balance in bank. The general fund is credited with $[illegible], and the asylum fund with $[illegible].

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

GOLF.

Mr. Garvin's sudden jump into prominence as a golfer resulted in a match being arranged between him and Mr. Sam Ray for the fourth position in the Peterborough golf team. The game was played yesterday and the contest throughout was very close. At the end of the first round of 9 holes each had won three and three were drawn, but Mr. Garvin had the advantage by one stroke, having played around in 45.

The second round was also closely contested, being a tie at the close of the 14th hole. Mr. Ray, however, succeeded in winning three of the last four holes, and so won the match by 2 holes up. He played the 18 holes in 96 strokes and Mr. Garvin in [illegible].

The McHarrie-Garvin chair is now much in evidence in the golf house. It is a valuable addition to the furniture and a comfortable ornament as well.

LACROSSE.

Toronto Telegram:—The lacrosse match between the Capitals and Torontos at Rosedale next Saturday is creating all kinds of talk, and there will no doubt be considerable coin bet on the game. And at that it should be an even money chance, for it's hard to see where the Capitals lay over Toronto. It's going to be a rattling good game, and Capt. Pierre Knowles has the utmost confidence in the team.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

Half Crazy With Piles.

Mr. Isaac Foster, Erie View, Norfolk Co., Ontario, writes:—"I was troubled with itching piles for about two years and could not sleep at nights. In fact I was half crazy from the terrible itching. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment I purchased a box. After the second application I experienced relief and one box cured me thoroughly and permanently, and that was two years ago. LIGHTNING'S WORK.

House Struck at the Head of Stony Lake—A Woman's Narrow Escape.

The residence of Mr. John Hubble at the head of Stony lake was struck by lightning on Wednesday of last week. The current passed down the stove pipe, breaking the stove, tearing up the floor and killing a dog.

Mr. Hubble and his wife and son were more or less injured by the shock.

Mrs. Hubble was rendered insensible, and her condition for several days caused considerable alarm, but latest reports say she is recovering. There were 22 persons in the house at the time, mostly berry pickers who had taken refuge from the storm.

JULY WEDDINGS

Rev Geo McConnel, of Kinmount, Wedded to Miss Minnie Howson.

A happy event took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. W. J. Howson, South Dummer, when his second daughter, Miss Minnie, and Rev. Geo. McConnell, of Kinmount, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock, the nuptial knot being tied by the Rev. J. A. McCamus, of Lakefield, assisted by the Rev. D. N. McCamus, of Cobourg.

Wedded in Chicago.

Mr. D. A. Deck, formerly of Havelock, and Miss Christina Davie, were married on the 3rd inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Chicago. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Frank Deck, and the bride by her sister, Miss Annie. About thirty guests were present, among whom were Mrs. Cope and family, and Mrs. Gear and family, formerly of Havelock. The bride, who is highly esteemed, received a large number of costly presents from her friends.

Sad Death in Asphodel.

We are again reminded of the uncertainty of life by the sudden removal of another of the younger members of the community, in the person of Mrs. Wm. McKneely, of Asphodel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Doughty, of Norwood. Less than seven months ago she went to brighten Mr. McKneely's home, which some few months previous had been darkened and saddened by death. The union was a happy one, and everything was going along pleasantly until about three weeks ago, when Mrs. McKneely was seized with an attack of inflammation of the lungs, which was afterwards followed by intermittent fever, and after an illness of about two weeks she passed away at two o'clock on Saturday morning. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 from lot 15, in the 11th concession of Asphodel, to the Norwood cemetery, and was largely attended. The service at the house and at the cemetery was conducted by Rev. R. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist church. The pall-bearers were Messrs. E. Wildman, S. Adams, H. Elliott, J. Hutchinson, W. J. Elliott and W. J. Scott. Mr. McKneely and Mr. and Mrs. Doughty have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in their sad bereavement.—Norwood Register.

Railway Notes.

Baggageman Glasciman, of Bonaventure station, Montreal, reports that the Grand Trunk handled at that point last month 30,000 pieces of baggage.

Monday's heavy rain caused a serious wash-out on the main line of the G.T.R. during the night, and trains were sent through Lindsay while repairs were being made.

Toronto G. T. R. employees held their annual picnic Wednesday at Port Perry.

The reports of the various districts of the Grand Trunk Railway show that an immense number of passengers were carried on the 12th of July, the Northern trains alone carrying 8,000 passengers.

Freight rates between Lethbridge and Fernie, on the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, have been raised about one-third by the C. P. R. Passenger rates have been reduced from five cents to four cents.

A New England company has turned out an electric car capable of making 65 miles an hour. It is to run on the 17-mile road between Providence and Fall River, and is expected to cover the distance in 16 minutes.

SCANDAL HINTED AT

Two Important Despatches Received—British Warship Gone to Intercept Li Hung Chang.

THE AMERICAN TROOPS

Washington, July 21.—Without the power to increase the fighting force in China, Secretary Long has determined that every member of the Marine Corps shall be sent to the front at once. More than this the Service shall be recruited to the full strength permitted by law and not a man left for barracks duty where that can be avoided, and all ships not on the Asiatic Station will be stripped to minimum number.

TO INTERCEPT LI HUNG CHANG

Shanghai, July 20.—The British cruiser Bonaventure left Wou Sung early this morning, it is reported, to seize the Au Ping with Li Hung Chang on board. A triumphal arch erected in Li Hung Chang's honor has been ordered by the Consul to be removed.

AN UNCERTAIN REPORT

Washington, July 21.—The Navy Department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Reming, dated Taku, July 20.—Tien Tsin quiet; latest report, Russian sources, July 13, Legations still holding out. Reliability of this information uncertain.

THI IS SAID TO BE POSITIVE INFORMATION

Washington, D.C., July 21.—Dr. J. C. Ellis, a well known Washington physician, has informed the authorities that he has received three despatches from the American legation at Pekin within the last week. The third he says was received by him yesterday and conveyed the positive information that Minister Conger and his family were safe up to six o'clock yesterday morning. He asserts that his correspondent in Pekin is an American woman who is absolutely trustworthy. Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service, is investigating Dr. Ellis' story.

TWO IMPORTANT DESPATCHES

Washington, July 21—The Chinese minister, Wei Tung Fang, communicated to the secretary of state this morning two important telegrams. The first is from Sheng, the director of posts and telegraphs in Shanghai, and says: "Fortunate that Minister Conger's telegraphic reply has come. Imperial decree of 22nd this moon, corresponding to July 18th, stated that all ministers were safe. Insurgents are fighting and killing each other. Li Hung Chang is proceeding northward to suppress riot. Will find it difficult to go." The second telegram is from Li Kul Ye, Vice-roy of Nanking, dated July 21, and received by Minister Wu, at 10 o'clock the same day. It is as follows: "According to edict of 22nd of this moon, July 18th, with the exception of the German minister, who was killed by anarchists, with regard to which rigorous measures are being taken to investigate and punish the guilty parties, all the other ministers, for whom strenuous efforts are being made for their protection, are fortunately unharmed. Li Kui Ye, the Vice-roy of Nanking is a son of one of the great officers of China, and stands next in rank among the diplomats to Li Hung Chang.

The Dentist is Polite.

A North Side dentist is sure to be called "a mean man" by some of his women patrons when they learn of the trick he has practiced upon them. It happens sometimes that even a rubber dam will not stop the flow of woman's speech, and although the dentist, being a young man, is not averse to a little "pleasant talk" now and then with a patient, yet if she persists in telling him her personal or domestic history during the filling of a tooth, hindering the work, while other patients wait in the anteroom, it's a little trying to his nerves and temper. The doctor is a polite man; he does not ask the woman to stop talking, but says gently:

"Open your mouth, please."

There is silence for a few moments, when the chatter begins again.

"Open wider, please," says the dentist, more persuasively than before, and the work goes on rapidly enough until the patient seeing her opportunity starts in again where she had left off in the tale of everyday woes. The clock strikes the hour of the next appointment. The dentist seizes the most terrible of all his instruments, his look becomes threatening and his voice too: "Please, now, open your mouth very wide." The ruse succeeds, and the startled but unsuspecting woman stretches her mouth into an abysmal yawn that precludes the possibility of even a whisper.

It's a mean trick.

HUNDREDS OF REBLES TO TRY

Special Court to Be Organized in Cape Colony For the Purpose.

Sir Alfred Milner Says the End of the War is Near, Which Statement Contributed to the Opening Scene in the Cape Parliament—Lord Methuen Has Occupied Heckpoort Practically Without Opposition.

Cape Town, July 21.— The Cape Colony Parliament opened yesterday with an impressive scene. The speech of Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of the Colony, prophesied an early close of the war, and subsequently a united and prosperous South Africa.

Sir Alfred Milner, referring to the noble manner in which all the self-governing colonies had responded to Great Britain's call for aid, said indications were not wanting that the end of the war was approaching. Those concerned in the rebellion would have to answer for their misconduct.

Parliament would be asked to approve a bill providing for a special court with special powers to try hundreds who have already been put in jail and others who appeared to have taken a leading part in the rebellion.

A commission would be created to deal with the rank and file of the rebels with power of sentencing for a period of five years, and to disfranchisement and deprivation of othes civil rights.

Sir Alfred Milner added that he trusted the deliberations of the Parliament would be characterised by wisdom and moderation, so that when the troubles should be passed all would be prepared for the great developments that were assuredly awaiting United South Africa under the beneficent sway of the Queen's sceptre.

Mr. W. P. Schreiner, formerly Premier of Cape Colony, and Mr. R. Solomon, formerly Attorney-General, occupied the Opposition cross bench. Mr. J. X. Merriman, treasurer; Mr. J. W. Sauer, Commissioner of Public Works, and Dr. Tewater, Minister without portfolio, in the recent Cabinet, occupied seats on the front Opposition benches. Dr. Jamieson was sworn as a member of the Parliament.

Amid profound silence Mr. Merriman gave notice that he would move that the actions of the military in districts where resistance had terminated was contrary to the inherent rights of British subjects, and that martial law should be repealed.

The captain of the brig was much disliked by his officers, and, being ill with yellow fever and likely to die, the first lieutenant used to drill the marines in the burial service on the deck over the captain's cabin by way of cheering him up, the corporal giving his orders in a loud voice thus: "The corpse is now a-coming up the 'atchway! Reverse harms!" The skipper ultimately recovered.

The commander of a certain gunboat used to say that, having no doctor on board, he mixed the medicines provided in a chest into two bottles, and whenever any of his crew happened to be sick he drew an imaginary line across the man's stomach, and according as the pain was above or below that line he gave him a dose out of No. 1 or No. 2. He claimed that no man ever came to him twice, which was very likely.—"Hurrah For the Life of a Sailor," by Vice Admiral Kennedy.

Weak, Sickly Children

Are Restored to Health and Vigor by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Many children are pale, weak, and bloodless from their birth. Many others have their blood and nerves exhausted, and their systems broken down by the ravages of disease, or as the result of over-study at school.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the ideal treatment for children. It supplies the very elements which are lacking in the pale, weak, and nervous. It restores the colour and richness to the blood, invigorates the nerves, and builds up the system. As a restorative after the exhausting and debilitating effects of measles, scarlet fever, and such ailments, it is of incalculable worth.

Mrs. Stephen Dempsey, Albury, P. E. county, Ont., writes:—"My little granddaughter, nine years old, was very pale and weak, and had no appetite. She had a tired, wornout appearance, and was delicate and sickly. I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for her, and it has helped her very much. She is gaining considerably in weight and looks real healthy."

THOSE QUEBEC JUDGESHIPS.

The Huntington Gleaner, a strong Liberal newspaper published in Quebec, has this to say of the three extra judgeships which the Government desired to secure for Quebec and which the Senate killed:—

"In the debate in the House of Commons last week on the bill to appoint three more judges for this province, Mr. Casgrain demonstrated that there were now more judges than there was work for, and as he had been for several years Attorney-General for Quebec, he spoke with authority. He stated that there were 31 judges, of whom 16 reside outside Montreal and Quebec, yet over half the legal business of the province is done in those two cities. He showed that during 1899 eight judges had only 234 contested cases among them, an average of less than 30 apiece. One of the rural judges, Cimon, declared that he had only 45 cases last year, which had not occupied his time for one month out of the twelve. He wanted more to do, for he was getting rusty. Another judge said his difficulty was to fill out his time, and added that a judge, to administer justice soundly, must be kept reasonable busy; if he is not, his mind and his energy are sure to suffer and in the long run litigants are the losers. Judge Belanger last year had only 20 Superior Court contested cases before him, according to the Hon. Mr. Casgrain, to occupy him a month, yet parties to suits are kept in suspense, not months, but years before judgment is rendered. Has a long suffering public no remedy? Are we to go on paying $4,000 salary a year for an administration of justice that is a burden sore to bear?"

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

In 1896 the Conservative Government spent on all services, and on both revenue and capital accounts, $41,702,803. Last year, 1900, the expenditures were $52,050,000. For this year votes aggregating $61,000,000 have been taken. It is a terrible jump upwards, and what makes it worse is the circumstance that the enormous increase is in direct violation of the solemn promise to make reductions. "For my own part," said Sir Richard Cartwright, "I do not hesitate to say that I consider a yearly expenditure of $40,000,000 or $38,000,000 altogether too large for the present resources of Canada. I say that it is a disgrace and a shame to the Government that has been entrusted with our affairs that they come down to us and ask for an expenditure of $32,000,000 a year for Federal purposes. Sir, the thing is utterly unjustifiable."

If the "new Liberal" Government is permitted to go on increasing the outlays at the present gate we shall within five years have doubled the old Conservative figure. It is of interest to consider how it happens that these vast increases have come about. One of the influences is the augmentation of the official staff. The spoils system necessitates the creation of places. In all the departments this system prevails. We have it especially prominent in the Interior Department. There an army of politicians operates the Yukon, while another, commencing with Preston and running down the line to Alf. Jury, is pensioned upon the country, under the disguise of immigration agents. The salaries, or pensions, do not tell the entire story. Preston is always on the wing, and his travelling expenses are very considerable. In the Justice Department another illustration is furnished. There, the other day, it was proposed to create for political purposes three more judgeships, although further judges were admittedly not required. Another influence making for the increase of the expenditure is the "go-between," who secures a "rake-off" on public purchases or public works. There was unquestionably a "go-between" in the emergency rations affair. Somebody not named had a slice of the profit, which had to be made large in his behalf. The "go-between" turns up again in the dredging work. It was once the custom to give this work out by contract. But nowadays a friend or relative of a Minister is instructed to take the job. He is paid $90 a day for dredging, which he does not do. Of this sum he gives $60 a day, and in one case that has been cited $50 a day, to the real dredger, who performs the work. Then there is a "rake-off" of from $30 to $40 a day for the favored politician. In the sale of binder twine the "go-between" again appears. He gets the twine at less that it costs us and sells it to the consumer at about three times the price. A further novelty helping to swell the expenditures is the enlargement of the Government responsibility for certain works. Formerly it was the custom to dredge harbors and shallow streams to make them navigable. Now, if a corporation builds an elevator or a wharf at a point where the water is not deep the Government undertakes the deepening. In a word, we pay to render the property available for business. Again, wharves have in the past been regarded as municipal works. A village on the sea coast wanting a wharf constructs it, just as it builds its own roads or streets. The Laurier Government has changed all this. It has undertaken to construct and to keep in repair all wharves in the Maritime Provinces and Quebec. Sir Wilfrid Laurier the other day announced it as a sort of principle that wherever there may be a church, a store and a few houses on the sea coast the Government must build a wharf. The $7,000,000 list of supplementary estimates provides for hundreds of wharves along the Atlantic coast. Last year it was proposed to build at a cost of $200,000 a wharf at a place called Maria, in Bonaventure county. A steamer calls at Maria every other day, but the water is shallow. To accommodate this steamer a wharf a mile long was to have been erected at the cost named. The Opposition objected, and this year the Government is compromising by building a "block" instead of a wharf out into the sea. The "block" can be extended into a wharf later on. A new developement is the addition of sheds to all the wharves. This relieves the steamship company of the necessity of building freight-houses. Another new idea is the erection of works to protect the shore from the erosive influence of the river. An additional factor making for the increased outlay is the circumstance that all railway bridges are now being subsidized. We are even paying to rebuild existing bridges. For the rebuilding of the Victoria bridge it is calculated that the country meets the entire cost. First we give $500,000 as a subsidy, and then we rent the bridge for the use of the Intercolonial, at $40,000 a year. This is equivalent to three per cent. on $1,000,000, and $1,800,000 is said to be the cost of the structure. In railway matters we have been going it pretty fast. The extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal gave a profit of $800,000 to the politicians who sold the Drummond railway for that purpose. In operating the new line we lose $1,000 a day, or $376,000 a year, in round figures. The curious feature of this transaction is the fact that there were three possible connections for the Intercolonial with Montreal—one by way of a bridge over the St. Lawrence at Quebec and the Canadian Pacific to Montreal, another by the South Shore road, that is not yet completed, and a third by the Drummond. The Government selected the Drummond and after it had done this, it subsidized both the South Shore railway and the bridge. We are giving a million as a bonus for the bridge to reduce the income of the already unprofitable Drummond. On the Intercolonial four or five millions are being spent on capital account. The cars when out of repair are side-tracked and new ones are bought out of capital to replace them. The supplies appear to be purchased at an enhanced figure. It was shown to Parliament that this Government is paying a double price for the oil that is used for lubricating and illuminating purposes. What cost $34,000 a year under the old regime costs $80,000 now. According to Mr. McMullen the road could be run for a million dollars less per annum if politics were out of it. We are paying $90,000 a year as the interest on the extra subsidy to the Crow's Nest road, as a result of the Globe scandal, and we are to pay $334,000 for the mistake of the Government ordering the contractors to build the Yukon line before Parliament had agreed to it. Up in the Yukon the country is putting up a costly telegraph system, which a private company wanted to undertake. The railway subsidies, where were to have been abolished, have been increased, not only in volume, but in the amount given per mile. We formerly granted $3,200 a mile; now $3,200 is the minimum figure, and the company can get as high as $6,400. One Liberal member testifies that the subsidy and the receipts from bonds build many of the railways. But the "go-between" sometimes gets in between the subsidy and the railway builder. This was the case as regards the Edmonton line; politicians secured the charter and the bonus and sold out at a fine profit to the genuine company.

These are some of the influences which make our expenses abnormally high. They are the results of a bad system—a system which favors the "go-between" and the "rake-off;" a system which taxes the country for all sorts of enterprises, private as well as public; a system which doubles the public grants; a system which loads the public service with unnecessary men. We can never get back to a rational expenditure so long as this system is tolerated. It is necessary for honest citizens to combine to root the evil out. Unless this be done the thing will grow, and we shall suffer from the recklessness and dishonesty of the "new brand of Liberalism" as severely as we would suffer from a war."—Mail and Empire.

THE TWELFTH AT NORWOOD

LARGE PROCESSION AND GREAT CROWD OF VISITORS IN THE VILLAGE

It Was the Largest Gathering of the Kind Ever Held in Norwood—Lodges That Were in Line.

The twelfth was celebrated in Norwood with much enthusiasm.

There was a very large gathering—the largest of the kind ever held in the village in many years. All the lodges in the district, including several from the neighboring county of Northumberland, were present, and about 2,000 people accompanied them to town. The lodges were met by the members of L.O.L. No. 34, headed by Mr. D. Andrews, the marshall of the day, and Mr. Jas. Burgess, County Master, and were given a hearty welcome to the village.

The day was cool and pleasant, and although cloudy and threatening, the rain held off, only a very light shower occurring during the whole day.

While some perhaps were deterred from coming owing to the unpromising appearance of the sky, it proved to be an ideal day for marching and speech-making in the open.

The streets were gaily decorated for the occasion with flags and arches of evergreen, and mottoes and colors, the significance of which is well understood by every Orangeman.

By eleven o'clock the lodges had all arrived and the town was gay with men wearing sashes and badges, banners flying, and the music of the time-honored fife and drum.

After dinner the lodges assembled on Ridge-st., where a procession was formed, and proceeded by way of Pine, Peterborough, Colborne and Queen-sts. to the ground opposite the residence of Mr. T. M. Grover, where addresses were delivered by a number of clergymen and prominent members of the Order. The order of the procession was as follows:—

Marshall—David Andrews, County Sec.
County Master—Jas. A. Burgess.
L.O.L. No. 103, Warkworth, fife and drum and banner, John McCutcheon, Master.
L.O.L. No. 261, Roseneath, fife and drum and banner, Joseph King, Master.
L.O.L. No. 533, Campbellford, fife and drum and banner, Thomas Oulton, Master.
L.O.L. No. 1,300, Seymour East, fife and drum and banner, George Brown, Master.
L.O.L. No. 277, Belmont, fife and drum and banner, John Scott, Master.
L.O.L. No. 231, North Dummer, fife and drum and banner, John Darling, Master.
L.O.L. No. 234, Warsaw, fife and drum and banner, Stephen Millar, Master.
L.O.L. No. 532, Enniskillen, fife and drum and banner, Charles King, Master.
L.O.L. No. 1,285, Blairton, fife and drum and banner, F. J. Taylor, Master.
L. O. L. No. 1338, Stanwood, fife and drum and banner, C. G. Lawrence, Master.
L. O. L. No. 34, Norwood, fife and drum band and banner, David Andrews, Master.

Enniskillen No. 532 had its warrant draped, drum muffled an flag rolled as a mark of respect for the late Master of the lodge, Mr. Joseph Harrison.

The proceedings at the grove opened by hearty words of welcome from Worshipful Bro. Andrews, Master of L. O. L. 34, Norwood, after which County Master Bro. Burgess took the chair and called on Bro. J. J. Crowe, of Warsaw, who, although suffering from a severe cold, expressed the pleasure it gave him to be present at such a gathering. Next followed Bro. John Brown, of Rockdale, a veteran Orangeman, who expressed his delight at the large crowd assembled.

The Chairman then called on the Rev. R. Taylor, of Norwood, who in a few well chosen remarks, thanked the Orangemen for the courtesy extended to him in asking him to be present to speak to such an assemblage. Next followed Rev. Bro Hyde, of Warsaw, who spoke at some length on the principles of the Orange order. He was followed by the Rev. Bro. F. Johnston, of Hastings, who, in a neat speech, pointed out the many victories we have in remembrance on such a day as this. The last speaker was the Rev. J. McKee McLennan, of Norwood, Most Worshipful Grand Chaplain of the Grand Black Knights of Ontario West, who began by expressing his pleasure in meeting for the first time his brethren of Ontario East. Then he touched upon some of the main point of the glorious Order to which they belong.

He urged all the Orangemen present to live up to their obligations, saying it was not for strife, but for peace that Orangemen exist. To remember the constitution, to prove themselves men and true Orangemen by living as far as possible in peace and harmony with all men, keeping ever in mind "Loyalty, Love and Truth," and ever acting on the motto "My God, My Country, My Queen." Several times the speaker was interrupted by bursts of applause and cheers of approval, and when the Grand Chaplain sat down the hearty applause showed how deeply they sympathized with him in proclaiming the high standards of Christian love and loyalty so strikingly put before them. After three cheers for the Queen and the Most Worshipful Grand Master, the long procession of lodges lined up and wended its way back to the town.

The whole day's proceedings were carried out in a very orderly manner and reflected great credit upon the Association. Some of the old timers who are not at present in affiliation with the order were heard to express themselves as much pleased with the whole proceedings, and another twelfth will probably see many of them back in the ranks. There were a few cases where men through their love for strong drink brought discredit upon themselves, but these were the exception, and in the case or Orangemen were promptly stripped of their colors and will have to answer to their brethren for their conduct. This is as it should be, and we say all honor to the lodges that strictly enforce their regulations in such cases.—Register.

Montreal, July 21.—A special from Vancouver says: Sir Hibbert Tupper says that if his Picton, N. S., constituents are willing he will run against Hon. Mr. Sifton in Brandon, Manitoba. Mr. Bostock, M. P. for Yale, says he will not run again.

There are times when a horse knows more than a man; when instinct is superior to reason. The horse fights against being forced over the brink of a precipice which he can see in the dark but which is veiled from the man's eyes. It is often the same with a man's body; it fights against carrying the man over the brink of the precipice, disease. When the heart beats irregularly; when there are pains in the head, ringing in the ears, cough, indigestion, loss of appetite and lack of energy—some or all of these symptoms—the body is on the brink of danger and is crying "halt!" No man need be carried over the fatal brink of disease if he will heed Nature's warning and accept her help. This help in its most concentrated and perfect form is contained in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This great alterative extract completely modifies every abnormal condition of the disordered digestive or alimentary functions. It makes the stomach strong, the blood rich and healthy, builds up the nerve centers and so regulates the functions of all the vital organs, that they co-operate perfectly for the health of the entire system. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

Mr. Geo. Mixter, of [illegible] Thompson Street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "Some time ago I was terribly run down. Numerous ailments had been coming upon me one by one. I decided to try 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the 'Pleasant Pellets.' The benefit derived was beyond my fondest hopes; I took five bottles of the 'Discovery' and used the 'Pellets' when necessary, as directed. During the time of taking the five bottles as directed, I gained in weight [illegible] pounds, weighing more than ever in my life; bringing me health and strength, and conquering these ailments, viz: Palpitation of the heart, [illegible] breathing, pressing and splitting pains in the head, ringing in the ears, with partial deafness and throbbing, a nagging cough, indigestion, depression of spirits, loss of energy, constipation, a tired feeling upon rising and through the day, appetite poor, night [illegible]. [illegible] the 'Discovery' and the 'Pellets' removed all these troubles, and have made me as well to-day as I have ever have been in my life."

THE UNKNOWN HEROES.

Conan Doyle Writes of the Hospital Orderlies and the Great Work They are Doing.

In the British Medical Journal appears a letter from Dr. Conan Doyle on the epidemic of enteric fever at Bloemfontein. Dating at "The Langman Hospital, South African Field Force, Bloemfontein, June 5." Dr. Conan Doyle says:—

"When the nation sums up its debt of gratitude to the men who have spent themselves in this war I fear that they will almost certainly ignore those who have done the hardest and most essential work. There are three classes, as it seems to me, who have put in more solid and unremitting toil than any others. They are the commissariat, the railway men, and the medical orderlies. Of these, the first two are the most essential, since the war cannot proceed without food and without railways. But the third is the most laborious and infinitely the most dangerous. The outbreak of enteric fever among the troops in South Africa was a calamity, the magnitude of which had not been foreseen, and which even now is imperfectly appreciated. We naturally did not dwell too much upon it while the war was in progress. But it was appalling in its severity, both in quantity and quality. I know of no instance of such an epidemic in modern warfare. I have not had access to any official figures, but I believe that in one month there were from 10,000 to 12,000 men down with this, the most debilitating and lingering of continued fevers. I know that in one month 600 men were laid in the Bloemfontein cemetery. A single day in this one town saw 40 deaths. These facts would have stiffened the resistance at Pretoria, if they had been generally known. It is only now, when the worst is past, that they can be talked of.

THE HOSPITAL ORDERLY.

How was this unforeseen and unprecedented crisis grappled with? Entirely by the efforts of the medical men and by the devotion of the orderlies. When a department is confronted by a task which demands four times more than it has, the only way of meeting it is for each man to work four times as hard. This is exactly what occurred, and the crisis was met. In some of the general hospitals orderlies were on duty for 36 hours in 48, and what these duties were—how sordid and obscene—let those who have been through such an epidemic tell.

He is not a picturesque figure, the orderly, as we know him. We have not the trim, well-nourished army man, but we have recruited from the St. John Ambulance men, who are drawn, in this particular instance, from the mill hands of a northern town. They were not very strong to start with, and the poor fellows are ghastly now. There is none of the dash and glory of war about the sallow, tired men in the dingy khaki suits, which, for the sake of the public health, we will hope may never see England again. And yet they are patriots, these men; for many of them have accepted a smaller wage in order to take on these arduous duties, and they are facing danger for twelve hours of the twenty-four, just as real and much more repulsive than the scout who rides up to the strange kopje or the gunner who stands to his gun with a pom-pom quacking at him from the hill........ When then scouts and the Lancers and the other picturesque people ride in procession through London have a thought for the sallow orderly, who has also given of his best for his country. He is not a fancy man—you do not find them in enteric wards—but for solid work and quiet courage you will not find him in all that gallant army.

There is one mistake which we have made, and it is one which will not, I think, be repeated in any subsequent campaign. Inoculation for enteric was not made compulsory. If it had been so I believe that we should (and, what is more important, the army would) have escaped from most of its troubles. No doubt the matter will be fully threshed out in statistics, but our strong impression, from our own experience, is that, although it is by no means an absolute prevention, it certainly modifies the course of the disease very materially. We have had no death yet (about [illegible]) from among the inoculated, and more than one we have diagnosed the inoculation from the temperature chart before being informed of it. Of our own personnel only one inoculated man has had it, and his case was certainly modified very favorably by the inoculation.

THE SOLDIER IN HOSPITAL.

Of the courage and patience of the soldier in hospital it is impossible to speak too highly. We have had 500 cases pass through our hands, and can speak now from a fairly large experience. I had always imagined that in every large army there must be a minority of skulkers and shirkers, but they are singularly absent in the South African field force. I have not had more than two or three cases in my wards which bore a suspicion of malingering, and my colleagues say the same. They are uniformly patient, docile and cheerful, with an inextinguishable hope of "getting to Pretoria." There is a gallantry even about their delirium, for their delusion continually is that they have won the Victoria Cross. One patient whom I found the other day [illegible] under his pillow, informed me that he was looking for "his two Victoria Crosses." Very touching, also, is their care of each other. The bond which unites two soldier pals is one of the most sacred kind. One man shot in three places was being carried into Mr. Gibb's ward. I lent an arm to his friend, shot through the leg, who limped behind him. "I want to be near Jim, 'cos I'm lookin' after him," said he. That he needed looking after himself seemed never to have occurred to him.

THE SPECIAL HOSPITALS.

I do not think that any men have ever expended money better than those who fitted out the private hospitals. The officers of the army medical department freely admit that they do not know what they would have done without their aid. They arrived out here at the very moment when the sickness was becoming alarming, and they took their share of the strain when the epidemic was at its height. The large general hospitals found it difficult to get to work on account of the pressure on the line which prevented them from getting up their bulky equipment, but the private hospitals, more compact and mobile, got to work almost at once after their arrival. The pressure was severe. Our own hospital, with equipment personnel for 100 cases, had 150 cases, most of them virulent Paardeberg enterics, shot upon them, and had to cope with them as best they might. But the men had come out to work, and the orderlies, though untrained, never once grumbled at the great exertions which were called for. Without the Yeomanry, the Portland, the Irish, the Scotch, the Welsh, and the other hospitals fitted up by private effort, and manned by volunteers, it is difficult to see how the epidemic could have been met.

There is sure to be some adverse criticism of the Army Medical Department after the war, because they have had to meet so difficult a situation with such inadequate resources that it is impossible that there should not be particular instances where the machinery has broken down. A captious critic could quote cases of an over-filled, under-manned hospital without medical necessities in one place, or of hardships endured by the sick and wounded in another. How can it be otherwise, when a department which is sufficient for the needs of two army corps has to provide for the wants of 200,000 men with typhoid raging among them? Taking it on the whole, the department has been well organized and well worked, and has met an unforeseen and exceptional state of things with remarkable success.

Concert Was a Huge Success.

The concert at Bobcaygeon Tuesday night in aid of the funds of St. Joseph's church was an unqualified success despite the unfavorable weather prevailing up to the opening hour. The skating rink had been beautifully decorated and arranged for the occasion. The programme—a choice one—was contributed by Peterborough, Bobcaygeon and Lindsay talent. The attendance taxed the capacity of the rink to the utmost, and the refreshment booth attendants were not allowed a moment's rest until the large stock of ice cream, etc., had been disposed of. Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Lane deserve the credit of the affair, and they feel grateful to friends who proved so willing to render all possible aid.

BULLET THROUGH HIS NECK.

Fred Poynter of Bothwell Lies in a Precarious Condition.

Chatham Ont., July 21.—Fred Poynter, the 18-year-old son of the proprietor of the Poynter House, Bothwell, lies at his home in a precarious condition, with a bullet wound through his neck. The revolver was discharged while in the victim's hands. Between 6 and 7 o'clock Thursday night young Poynter went to his bedroom and shortly afterwards the household were startled by the loud report of a pistol, and the piercing cries of the victim. His father was the first to arrive on the scene and to his horror he found his only son lying on the floor with blood oozing from a hole in his neck, under the chin, where the bullet entered, and also at the point of exit in the back of the head. The bullet went dangerously near the jugular vein and may prove fatal.

A Lindsay Wedding.

Cambridge-st. Methodist church, Lindsay, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, the contracting parties being Miss Stivers, eldest daughter of Mr. W. H. Stivers, B.A., science master, Collegiate Institute, Lindsay, to Dr. William Chambers, of Oakwood. The church was prettily decorated by the girl friends of the bride, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. L. M. Manning, M. A., pastor of the church. Miss Jeanie Campbell, of Kirkfield, and Miss Ethel Flavelle, of Lindsay, were bridesmaids, and Miss Cora Stevens, sister of the bride, maid of honor. The groomsman was Mr. James A. Chambers, of Toronto, brother of the groom, and the ushers, Mr. J. Hart and Mr. W. Brown. After the ceremony the invited guests followed the newly-married pair to the residence of the bride's parents, where an elegant dejeuner was served. The large number of elegant and costly presents testified to the high esteem and popularity of the bride. Dr. and Mrs. Chambers left by the 6.30 train, and will visit prominent places of interest in Western Canada.

A FISHING TANGLE

A Party of Six Americans Fined $10 Each.

There was a party of very irate Americans at the Grand Trunk depot this morning waiting for the train which should bear them to Port Hope en route home. There were six in the party and they had been fishing at Buckhorn. The law allows each foreigner to take out of the country two days' catch, and four 'lunge is called a day's fishing. It would appear that they had twenty-five fish for the party of six, nicely packed in ice and all ready to impress their friends across the lake, and that the ice chest was in charge of three of the party. Whether from a misunderstanding as to the number in the party or from an ignorance of the law, the fishermen were detained by Inspector Jas. Moore, of Lakefield, who fined them $10 each and confiscated their fish. They were very angry at the manner in which the officials had treated them.

They propose to appeal against the action of Mr. Moore as they claim the fish were within the limits prescribed.

A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE CAMP OF THE Y.M.C.A.

The Organization—The Order of Daily Programme—A Rollicking Camp Yell That is Being Heard at the Lakes.

Y Camp, 1900,
Thursday, July 19.

Rumble, bumble, Hullabaloo!
Whistle, Thistle, hoo-ka-zoo!
Hello!
Maxie, Caxie, Raxie, Ray!
We are the Peterborough Y.M.C.A.

We are now under full swing, and this famous old call lustily poured from the throats of our crowd of healthy boys, frequently echoes along the sand shores and rebounds from the bold faces of the distant rocks.

As our camp is now completely organized, perhaps it would not be amiss to give a short description of our two weeks' home, and also, as far as possible, an account of our daily routine, if such there be in camp.

Our tents are pitched a little further up the lake than what is familiarly known as Sandy Point, and we are much indebted to the kind permission of Mr. R. B. Rogers for the beautiful shore which we are now occupying.

First in order comes the provision tent, stored with all that is necessary to satiate the appetites of the hungry youth. Then five large tents, each at some time during the still (?) hours of the night filled with boys under the direction of the senior members of the camp, while last of all comes the Red Cross hospital, under the charge of Dr. Percy McIsaac.

Running along in front is our dining room, whose furniture, perhaps, would surprise some of our friends at home. One lone table, with a seating capacity of at least fifty-five, stretches down between two rows of large, round logs, while at the head is an inviting looking stump, waiting patiently for our capable commander, Mr. Secretary Williamson. Still nearer the shore Mr. Joe Harvey, our genial and ever-ready cook, is continually compounding some life-giving potion, or diving in to the mysteries of porridges, stews and other necessary draughts. To say that Mr. Harvey is an efficient man to supply the inner wants of our boys, would be describing his capabilities in rather mild language.

All stands out clearly against a leafy green back ground, while over all an old tree, long since past its proper time of life, still rears its stern head as if proud to be over such a camp as that of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A.

Our entire number is divided into six sections, each under the leadership of one of the senior members. Each section goes on duty for a day at a time to assist the cook by procuring water and wood, and also to set the tables and keep the dishes passable. The boys work willingly, but it is rather amusing to hear some of their complaints at the number of cups, plates, etc.

However, amid all the pleasures and troubles of our camp life, our Great Leader is not forgotten. Immediately after breakfast a half hour Bible class is held, conducted by one of the senior men, which, although not compulsory, is well attended by the boys. Again just at bed time a short lesson is read by each tent director, and then each member engages in silent prayer, committing himself to the care of the Heavenly Father.

All are happy and enjoying themselves to the full, and, I am afraid, getting so browned and burnt that the mothers would hardly know their boys. Hoping that you are enjoying our humble correspondence as much as we are the life, we will bid you good-bye for the present.

NOTES.

Snakes are quickly disappearing, and if you could see the crowd of boys almost tumbling over each other in their eagerness to "get a crack at 'em," you would know the reason.

Many of our boys have tried their luck as fishermen, and to-day Archie Lang succeeded in hooking a fine bass.

A large drive passed down to-day to the delight of the boys, although some are now bearing the dark imprint of the drive cook's hands in conspicuous places on their white pants.

Our camp even has the luxury of a reading room, neatly fitted up in a carved fence corner; also a post office presided over by the royal Union Jack.

A camp barber shop is another feature, and already the dark outlines on the upper lips of the leaders have faded away into the bright sunshine of daylight once more. The cook is the next victim.

JACK.

FROM MR. WILLIAMSON.

Mr. Williamson writes to state that all is going well.

The following sentences are extracts from a letter this morning from Mr. Williamson, General Secretary of the the local Y.M.C.A.:

"This is the largest and best camp in every way I ever attended. There seems to be such an excellent spirit among the fellows—given, I believe, in answer to prayer. Everything has opened well, and we are looking for spiritual results. Last night indeed one boy professed to enter the Christian life."

"We have a splendid staff of camp leaders, and our cook is all O. K."

"We have devotional exercises at the table each morning conducted by the leaders in turn. Then we have Bible study immediately after breakfast, attendance not compulsory, and yet 39 were present this morning."

"The workers have prayers every evening under a large tree, and then go to their respective tents and conduct closing prayers."

"We request your united prayers on our behalf."

One cup full of Ralston in a single boiler cooks enough for five persons.

"In 5 minutes its cooked."

A Work on the War.

Mr. F. J. Whittemore is in town introducing one of the best publications that has yet appeared, on "South Africa and the Transvaal War." It is by Louis Creswicke, author of "Roxane," and is in six volumes. It has received the highest criticisms of the London (Eng.) press, and is certainly a valuable addition to a library, giving South Africa and the war, with illustrations of the finest class.

Don't Beat Down Prices.

Rev. S. W. Stapleford, a Woodstock divine, in a sermon last Sunday said that there was many a person who would go into a store and try to get a $4 pair of shoes for $3 by beating the dealer down. Mr. Stapleford contended that one might just as well go and take the one dollar from the merchant's till, for it was nothing else than theft. If you think a man charges you too much for a thing, don't buy it, but go somewhere else. In any case don't beat him down, for it is nothing short of robbery. A merchant once said, "Give us a religion that will make people better purchasers. Some say that they have to beat down in order to live. God never intended that man should sell his soul to make bread for his body. Some will sell their conscience for 5 cents by trying to avoid a conductor on a street car."

The Light House Keeper.

No class in the community render more signal service to their fellows than the men who here and there along the chain of our great lakes and rivers keep bright and clear the lights that guide the sailor. Lighthouse keepers are necessarily exposed a great deal to the weather, and one of them, William Gillespie, of Wolfe Island, Ont., states that in this way he contracted muscular rheumatism. "For two weeks," said Mr. Gillespie, "I suffered untold agony with muscular rheumatism in my shoulders. I was crippled by the disease to such an extent that I could not put my coat on without assistance. I bought a bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure, and two doses cured me completely. I have not had a twinge of pain since. There is nothing like this medicine for rheumatism."

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

"If I were a free man, would you marry me as you promised years ago?"

"Yes!"

The prisoner turns to the judge, the girl resumes her seat, and the spell is broken.

"I have nothing to say, my lord, but that I am innocent."

The Sentence of Death.

Astray Marsden was sentenced to death because it was the duty of the judge to do so, but every spectator who filed out of the courtroom after the sentence was pronounced was troubled with doubts as to the result of the trial.

As one spectator expressed it: "Marsden was found guilty by the jury because the jury could consider the evidence and come to no other verdict, and the judge sentenced him to death because the judge was compelled to. But is Marsden guilty?"

CHAPTER VII.

DARRENT MAKES A FRESH DISCOVERY.

It was the morning after the great sensational trial, and Herbert Darrent sat at his breakfast in the dining room of the Palace hotel, Norcombe.

The table he had selected was a small one by the window, and he sat there neglecting his breakfast and moodily staring out into the street. Then he began his meal, but his appetite seemed to have deserted him.

"Theatrical, theatrical; that's all," he muttered to himself, as if in answer to his secret thoughts. "Done for effect." And he drank his coffee and picked up the morning paper, only to throw it down again impatiently as the displayed headlines caught his eye:

MARSDEN MUST SWING.

A Speedy Conviction the Norcombe Murderer's Fate.

DETECTIVE DARRENT'S TRIUMPH.

Dramatic Scene In Court—Condemned Man's Sweetheart Declares Her Belief In His Innocence—Would Marry Him if He Were Free.

The headlines jarred upon him. Why? The detective's triumph! It was a triumph—every one said so—and yet never had he succeeded in a case that had left behind such an unsettled feeling, such a degree of uncertainty and doubt as to whether he was really right after all. He could not understand it himself. Everything had seemed to be as clear as daylight, and the judge and jury—aye, the very spectators—had shared the view that his deductions had led him to form long ago—that Astray Marsden was the culprit.

"All for effect," he muttered again to himself, his mind still on the final scene in the court, with the last ray of sunlight falling full on the woman's face as she avowed before all her unalterable belief in the innocence of Astray Marsden. "Theatrical; that was all." And yet somehow he could not shake off remembrance of that final scene. Whether it was acting or not, it had made a deep impression on Herbert Darrent.

"Shouldn't wonder if it has a good result for him; rouses sensation and sympathy, and they may get up a petition for life imprisonment. It's a clever dodge." He called it "a dodge" to shake his own doubts, and yet he could not help feeling that there was no collusion in that last scene of all. Still, it is best to try to delude one's conscience at such times as these. Dull it, stifle it if it wants to speak and disturb that supremely happy feeling of self satisfaction that is so pleasant to experience.

To be emotional in this nineteenth century is to be weak, or, worse than anything, old fashioned. If something happens in the course of one's daily life that is keen and painful enough to wring one's heart, the formula is—give sympathy a stunning blow and call the whole thing "a dodge" and then go on with life exactly as before. Yes; that is the wiser, the better and very frequently the cheaper way. It's only a dodge; that's all. Pass on and forget it.

Having stigmatized the dramatic denouement of the trial as "a dodge" in sufficiently stern a voice to frighten away, for the time being at any rate, all his inner promptings, Darrent picked up the paper again and began reading an editorial—the trial again, of course.

It was headed "The American Lecoq," and it set forth with abundant praise the ability, the zeal, the acumen, of one Herbert Darrent, detective—set it forth in such a florid high flown style that the subject of these commendations would have flushed, except that his inner self had not yet recovered from the stunning blow that had been dealt it by modern cynicism.

Then the article went on to refer to the emotional scene at the conclusion of the trial.

"Astra nger scene," it remarked, "it has never been our lot to witness." And Darrent, startled from his habitual composure, jumped to his feet, with an exclamation of surprise.

Perhaps the compositor engaged upon setting up that editorial had been carried away by the sensationalism of the trial or perhaps by something else, but in setting that line he had made a peculiar mistake, which had been passed by the proofreader and now appeared in every issue of that day's paper. He had misplaced the spacing which should have made the division between the words "A" and "stranger," and the sentence which had so startled Herbert Darrent read, "Astra nger scene it has never been our lot to witness."

The second combination of letters, "nger," might have been a portion of a cryptogram, it was so meaningless. The first, "Astra," had a meaning for Darrent that set his brain wildly at work and caused a heavy feeling at his heart.

It was a strange coincidence that the editorial on the trial should contain such a glaring error. Emotional people would have called it "the finger of Providence," but of course it was not. It was simply the error of a compositor who perhaps had had too much to drink or at any rate was not at the instant thinking of what he was doing.

Let us account for all things naturally if we can. We abominate superstition in the nineteenth century and really never care to discuss "the finger of Providence" at all.

"A—s—t—r—a— A stranger," Darrent muttered. "Suppose old Marsden died before he could write what he intended to! Suppose another second of life would have altered all things! Why did not the defense think of that? Astray Marsden quarreled with Josiah and left him. A third person entered, and that person was the one who committed the deed. Josiah Marsden, dying and alone, remembered. Something warned him that Astray would be accused, and he wrote what he intended should prove his innocence. No one can say what were the exact words he intended to write. 'I am dying, murdered by a strange man, who forced his way into the house.' It might have been that, it might have been anything after the word 'strange,' the word in the writing of which and before he could complete it death overtook him, and his very handwriting condemned the man whom he had tried to save."

The more Darrent thought the more moody became his reflections. Was it possible he had blundered? Was it possible that the man now under sentence of death was only the victim of a series of circumstantial incidents that he had so cleverly put together? He turned to finish the breakfast that he had neglected, but all inclination for food had vanished, and he pushed his plate aside and stared out of the window again, and, as he gazed, there continually dinned in his ears one sentence: "Suppose you've been mistaken! Suppose you've been mistaken!"

YEARS OF PAIN

The Experience of Mr. William Smith, of Hawkesbury, Who Suffered for Many Years from Kidney Trouble.

From the Post, Hawkesbury, Ont.

Everybody in Hawkesbury knows Mr. William Smith. He came here when the town was yet in its village days, as one of the lumber company's staff of mechanics. In 1881 Mr. Smith was appointed constable, and filled that position until very recently. As is well known to many of Mr. Smith's friends, he has suffered much from kidney trouble for quite a number of years past, and at times the pain in his back was so great that he was almost physically incapable of exertion. He doctored a great deal, sometimes getting temporary relief, but the cause of the trouble was not removed, and soon the pains, accompanied alternately by chills and fever, returned. At last he came to look upon his condition as one which no medicine could permanently aid. Indeed his condition might still have been one of much suffering had not Mrs. Smith ultimately prevailed upon her husband to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. "It seemed," said Mr. Smith to a reporter of the Post, "that it was a useless experiment, and yet I was willing to do almost anything that would bring relief. I had not used the pills long before there was undoubted relief, more in fact than I had obtained from any other medicine. I continued their use, and soon all symptoms of the trouble that had made my life one of much misery for many years was gone. I feel that I am cured, and have no hesitation in saying that the cure is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I never lose an opportunity of recommending the pills to neighbors who may be ailing."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Liberals and the Senate.

Toronto Telegram, Ind.

All Sir Wilfrid Laurier's troubles with the Senate have come from the folly and weakness of Hon. Clifford Sifton, who gave the Upper House a chance to popularize itself by killing the atrocious Yukon railway scheme.

Then the Laurier Government has been too cowardly to persevere in an agitation for either the reform or the abolition of the Senate. The country will not become excited over attacks upon the Senate coming from a Government which is filling the Senate with a sort of partisans who will act towards a Conservative Government as the Conservative Senators are now acting towards a Liberal Government.

The Liberal party wants to retain the power to distribute Liberal Senatorships, as the rewards of subserviency in the House of Commons, or as an inducement to rich friends to contribute to the campaign fund. Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot complain that the Senate is irresponsible, when he has never turned a hand to make it responsible to the people. He cannot complain that the Senate is useless after giving the Senate a chance to prove its usefulness by keeping off more than one dangerous scheme which originated with the Liberal Government.

Record-Breaking Families.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The early marriages of French-Canadians and fecundity of the race were adduced by Hon. Mr. Tarte as facts justifying his conclusion that his people would shortly hold the balance of power in this Dominion. There is no disputing that the habitant regards with great sang froid the frequent additions to his family and many instances may be quoted of "long" families in Quebec. If we have not erred in our understanding of the facts, it is a matter of record that, under the operation of the Mercer bonus of 100 acres of free grant land to the head of a family of twelve children, one father reported the patriarchal record of his wife being the mother of thirty-five children, while numerous instances were reported of families ranging from 20 to 30. But even this will not preserve to the French-Canadians the distinction of producing the longest families. The Philadelphia Times supplies this astonishing claim:—

The record in maternity was held by Sally Shiver, a woman of Georgia, who boasted twenty-seven children, but it now appertains to Signora Granata, of Sicily, with (according to a French scientific journal) a grand total of forty-two sons and daughters. She was married at the age of 26, and had a daughter in the first year. Ten months afterwards she gave birth to five boys, all sound and well. Triplets and quartettes followed. Every year came two or three hopefuls to gladden the paternal heart, and only the other day she presented her husband with five little girls.

THE ENGLISH PAPER MAKERS

They Have Learned Much in and of the Dominion of Canada.

They Will Go Home With a Great Idea of the Vastness of Our Resources, Particularly a Pulpwood—English Capital Will Come This Way, They Say For Pulpwood, As Sweden and Norway Are Exhausted.

Quebec, July 21.—The deputation of English paper manufacturers will leave for England to-night from Quebec, on the steamship Parisian. They have been seven weeks looking over Canada's vast pulp resources, paper mills and water powers, and are delighted beyond measure with all they have seen. In conversation with Mr. Marsden, that gentleman said, that while the English manufacturers were altogether in ignorance of Canada's wealth in this line, their present trip had broadened their impressions very much, especially what had been seen in the Province of Quebec, including Grand Mere, Shawenegan and Chicoutimi. He said their visit would no doubt result in turning English capital this way.

Sweden and Norway Exhausted.

The English paper manufacturers have come to the comclusion that they have to look elsewhere for pulp, Sweden and Norway markets being seen in Canada satisfies them that exhausted. What the delegates have seen in Canada satisfies them that the English paper manufacturers can be supplied from here for years to come. Mr. Marsden added that the paper makers of England had very little to learn in the manufacture of paper, either in this country or in the United States. Paper is gradually rising on the other side, and yesterday morning Mr. Marsden received a cable informing him that the price of print paper had increased three cents.

The Government cartridge factory is to be considerably increased, according to an official announcement just made.

Never Pleased.

"Human nature is hard to satisfy," said the offhand philosopher.

"In what way?"

"In every way. Take, for example, the man who puts on the first straw hat of the season. If people make remarks he thinks they are impertinent, and if they don't make remarks he resents not being noticed."

A Strong Indication.

"Do you think he has any real business ability?"

"I should say he had. I did him the favor of going on his bond, without compensation, the other day, and blamed if he didn't let me furnish the war tax stamp for the document."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Real Beasts of Burden.

First Horse—How long do you suppose we shall continue to hold prestige as beasts of burden?

Second Horse—"Beasts of burden?" You don't know what you are talking about! They make automobiles now that carry 12 men and six guns.—Chicago Record.

When bees are allowed to swarm at will, we need not look for much surplus honey, because excessive swarming will be the rule.

Swarms may be hived in empty frames with success, but when thus hived care must be taken to have the hive set perfectly plumb.

When the brood chamber of the hive becomes so full of bees that they are crowded for room, additional space should be added.

In handling swarms care must be taken to avoid killing any bees if possible and to keep the swarm all together so that none will be lost.—St. Louis Republic.

PEKIN MASSACRE STORIES MAY BE MYTHS.

Message in Cipher Received From Minister Conger.

Only Quick Relief Can Save the Lives of the Foreigners in the Chinese Capital—They Are in the British Legation Under Fire—Chinese Troops Throwing Shot and Shell Into the Compound—Chinese News.

Washington, July 21.—The State Department issued yesterday the following bulletin: "The Secretary of State received this morning a despatch from Consul Fowler at Che Foo, dated midnight, July 19, saying a Shanghai paper of the 16th said all foreigners murdered. Fowler wired the Governor demanding the truth. The Governor replied that his courier left Pekin on 11th and all then were safe but Pekin East city had been carried by rebels with intent to kill."

FOREIGNERS SAFE ON JULY 19.

Sheng, the Administrator of Chinese Telegraphs, Says So.

Brussels, July 21.—The Belgian Consul sends the following despatch, under date of July 19:

"Sheng, the Administrator of Telegraphs, announces that the foreigners at Pekin were safe and sound on July 19.

"An important decree, dated July 16, orders the Viceroy of Tien Tsin to appraise the damage caused by the troubles, and orders the local militia to repress the rebellion."

CIPHER MESSAGE FROM CONGER.

U.S. Minister Replies to the Message Sent By Secretary Hay.

Washington, July 21.—The Chinese Minister received yesterday a cipher cable message from Minister Conger.

It was in the State Department cipher and was transmitted through the Tsung li Yamen and the Shanghai Taotai. It contained about 50 words and was signed in English with the name Conger. The Minister took it to the State Department.

At 9.45 a.m. yesterday Minister Wu handed the Conger despatch to Secretary Hay. No doubt was expressed by State Department officials as to the authenticity of the message.

Mr. Conger's telegram is as follows:

"In British legation. Under continued shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief can only prevent general massacre."

The message is not dated, but it is understood it was sent from Pekin on the 18th.

This reply was in the State Department cipher, and it is regarded by the State Department as genuine, inasmuch as forgeries seem, under the circumstances, impossible.

News Sent Abroad.

Secretary Hay has transmitted Minister Conger's cable to all our Ambassadors abroad, and has instructed them to urge the respective Governments to which they are accredited to co-operate in the immediate relief of Pekin.

LEGATIONS IN CHING'S PALACE.

Palace Has Been Barricaded—No News Since July 9.

Paris, July 21.—The Foreign Office has received information from a Chinese source, in which, however, certain reliance may be placed, that the Foreign Ministers at Pekin have not been massacred.

According to this information on July 7, the Ministers were attacked, and the legations burned, but the foreigners succeeded in crossing the city to Prince Ching's palace, which was then barricaded. The Europeans were holding their own up to the time the news left, July 9. Since then nothing has been heard from Pekin.

WU WAS AT BLEAKFAST

When the Message From Minister Conger Reached Him and the Chink Was Delighted.

Washington, July 21.—The Chinese Minister, Mr. Wu Ting Fang, was yesterday a centre of official and personal congratulation over the great service he has performed for the American Government and the American people in opening up communication between United States Minister Conger and Washington, and in sweeping aside a mass of horrible reports as to the wholesale massacre of our officials and others. The Chinese Legation was in a state of jubilation yesterday.

Wu Was at Breakfast.

Minister Wu breakfasts early in the day, after the Chinese custom, and yesterday morning he breakfasted even earlier than usual. Just before he sat down a telegraph messenger boy bicycled up to the Legation and passed in a despatch. This is not unusual, so the message was taken in hand by a secretary, while the Minister proceeded with his breakfast.

The Strange Message.

The message proved to be quite long, and a considerable part of it was in an unintelligible code. But it was not until the eye fell on the name "Conger," written in English, that the full purport of the message became evident. Then there was a stir throughout the establishment.

The Minister was entirely in the dark as to the meaning of the strange groups of Arabic figures, but it was evident to him that this was a reply direct from Minister Conger to Secretary Hay's cipher cablegram of July 11. Mr. Wu went up stairs to his private office, where he was joined by his accomplished secretary, Mr. Chang.

Went to the State Department.

Word was sent for the Minister's automobile to take him to the State Department. A few minutes after he appeared with Mr. Chang on the stone balcony of the Legation. In his hand he carried a document, carefully wrapped up in a piece of white linen. His face was wreathed in smiles. He stepped into the vehicle, and his American attendant, Charles Lee, who accompanies him on his trips, turned the lever and they sped down Connecticut avenue toward the State Department. It was 9.45 o'clock when Mr. Wu handed the document to Secretary Hay, and then, after brief congratulations over what the message was believed to contain, he retired, in order that the translation of the cipher might begin.

Wu Was Delighted.

Minister Wu's personal feelings over the receipt of the message are those of intense relief, following a long period of extreme depression. He had little to say over the message, as it speaks for itself, and his views could add nothing. Above all, he is rejoiced that the reports as to the massacre of Minister Conger and all other foreigners is dissipated, and this he regards as the supreme fact, notwithstanding the grave statement in the message that bombardment is going on and massacre is imminent.

Believe It to Be Genuine.

The frankness with which this statement is made is taken as conclusive evidence of the genuiness of the despatch. Moreover, Mr. Wu is personally acquainted with the Taotai of Shanghai, who forwarded the message for him and got back the answer, and the Minister regards him as one of the most irreproachable and highminded in all China.

CHINESE AUTHORITIES AT WORK.

Devising Measures For the Rescue of the Europeans in Pekin.

Washington, July 21.—The Secretary of State yesterday received a telegram from Consul Fowler, at Che Foo, dated after noon of 20th, saying that he had received the following telegram, dated July 18, from Shantung, dated 10 o'clock:

"Received flying express from the Tsung li Yamen, forwarding cipher telegram, dated JulCt 18, from American Minister, Pekin, which I have transmitted, and by which you will see that the newspaper accounts are entirely rumors."

Pekin Ministers Are Well.

The State Department has also received a despatch from Consul Fowler, dated July 20, in which he communicates the following message, telegraphed to him that day by the Governor of Shantung:

"I have just received definite information that the various Ministers in Pekin are well, and that the proper Chinese authorities are devising measures for their rescue and protection."

This message is signed by Yuan, the Governor of Shantung.

LI WAS POWERLESS

To Forward Despatch From Hong Kong to Italian Minister at Pekin.

Rome, July 21.—The Italian Consul at Hong Kong telegraphs, under date of Tuesday, July 17, that Li Hung Chang informed him that he was going to Pekin to negotiate with the powers, in compliance with a despatch signed by the Emperor and the Empress-Dowager. The consul asked him to forward a despatch to the Italian Minister, Signor Raggi, but Li Hung Chang replied that he had no means of doing so. Li Hung Chang, the consul reports, notified the directors of customs that they must obey orders from Canton, not from Pekin. The Viceroy of Nankin has given similar instructions for Shanghai.

FIVE HUNDRED FRENCH FLED.

Panic Stricken When the Chinese Charged With Bayonets.

London, July 21.—The Daily Express has received the following from Tien Tsin, dated July 18:

"The casualties of the allies in the three days' fighting before the native city of Tien Tsin exceeded 1,000. It is now certain that there were several Russians and Frenchmen fighting on the Chinese side. The Chinese killed their own women wholesale to prevent them falling into the hands of the Russians.

"Yesterday the whole native city was in flames, and the stench of the burning thousands of corpses was unspeakably horrible.

"Among the incidents of the fighting on July 13, was the precipitate flight of 500 French troops from Annam. They had been ordered to hold an important front, but on being charged by the Chinese with the bayonet, the entire detachment bolted panic-stricken. The Russians killed all Chinese wounded in revenge for the Pekin massacre."

U. S. Think It Authentic.

Washington, July 21.—Like a flash of sunlight out of the dark sky came the intelligence at an early hour yesterday that United States Minister Conger had sent a cipher cable despatch from Pekin to the State Department, making known that two days ago he was alive, and that the foreigners were fighting for their safety.

The Government accepted the message as authentic, and Secretary Hay telegraphed it to all our Ambassadors and ministers abroad, with instructions to lay it before the respective governments to which they are accredited, and to urge upon them the necessity of co-operation for the immediate relief of the foreigners at Pekin. A message was also sent by Secretary Long to Admiral Remy, conveying the intelligence of the desperate situation in Pekin, and instructing him to "use and urge every possible endeavor for relief."

Fails to Carry Conviction in London.

London, July 21, (4 a. m.)—The Conger despatch fails to carry conviction to either the British press or public. Its genuineness is not disputed, for, as is pointed out here, the Chinese must possess quite a sheaf of such messages, which the Ministers fruitlessly endeavored to get transmitted, from which they could easily select a non-committal despatch to serve the required purpose. A slight ray of hope is admitted in the fact that both Mr. and Mrs. Conger are known to have been on very friendly terms with the Dowon very friendly terms with the Empress-Dowager, but the universal opinion here is that, if the despatch is genuine, the date is falsified.

NO BRITISH ARMS FOR CHINA.

Bill Introduced to Prohibit Their Exportation to China.

London, July 21.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. A. J. Balfour, the First Lord of the Treasury, said it was impossible in the present state of the law to prohibit the exportation of arms to China, but as the matter was extremely pressing, a bill would be introduced to give the Government the necessary power. Such a bill was subsequently introduced in the House of Lords by Earl Halsbury, Lord High Chancellor. The bill prohibits the exportation of arms or ammunition to China under severe penalties.

Massacres at Tai Yuan.

London, July 21.—A despatch from Shanghai, received here yesterhay morning, reports that 60 missionaries and 100 native converts have been massacred by Boxers at Tai Yuan.

Tai Yuan is a fortified and populous city in the province of Shan See, on the Fuen Ho, an affluent of the Hoang Ho, 250 miles southwest of Pekin.

Yukon Garrison Just Relieved From Duty, Gets a Good Word in Orders.

Ottawa, July 21.—Last night's militia orders contain the following: The Yukon Garrison, having been relieved from further service in that district, and the officers, non-commissioned officers and men having rejoined their former corps, the officer commanding the militia desires to place on record his high appreciation of the work performed by all ranks of that garrison, under trying and arduous circumstances. The long and difficult march of 180 miles from the Stikine River, through a comparatively unknown, swampy and mountainous country, to Teslin Lake, and the successful passage from Teslin Lake to Fort Selkirk, a distance of 300 miles, through swift and dangerous waters, in boats and scows, built by themselves, as well as the soldier-like spirit and zealous attention to duty which have characterized all ranks during their whole period of service as members of the Yukon garrison, rebound greatly to their credit.

Political Notes.

Organizers Wright and Leavitt are making arrangements for a series of monster political picnics, to begin immediately after the return of Sir Chas. Tupper. The speakers will be Sir Charles, Hon. Mr. Foster, Hon. Hugh John Macdonald and probably Mr. Bergeron. Places and dates are not determined upon, but will be fixed with a view to the accomplishment of the greatest political good.

Whether the elections are close at hand or more remote, both parties are evidently getting ready. The mails are full of campaign literature. The Liberals have issued "Political Pointers No. 2," which is gotten up so as to resemble an official blue book, possibly with some idea of impressing the innocent electoral mind. The principal Conservative campaign pamphlet is in a book of some 70 odd pages, giving the "record of four years of Laurier-Tarteism."

Edward Farrer is said to be the author or editor of the Liberal campaign literature, and it is worthy of note that it is pervaded by a fervid, even a perfervid flavor of loyalty to Great Britain, evidencing either a remarkably complete conversion or a wonderful versatility.

A Word for the Muslin Maid.

You never catch the muslin maiden looking warm no matter how torrid it is. Vulgar perspiration never takes the curl out of her hair, and her nose never looks shiny.

See her in her airy costume, light blue, pale green, or just plain white, she is equally good to gaze upon and an equally good thing to tie to. For mark you, the muslin maiden, though a dreamer, is all there. You can see that by her sleeves, which generally reveal something pinkish and plump. Young man, if you happen to meet one of these muslin maidens grab her quick and hold her tight. She is too good a thing to be allowed to escape. More power to her dressmaker.

SUNDAY EXERCISE

A Golf Circular Causes a Hamilton Paper to Discuss Sunday Outdoor Recreations.

(Hamilton Herald.)

The Herald is requested by the Lord's Day Alliance to reprint an article from a New York paper in deprecation of golf-playing on Sunday. There is so little golf-playing in Hamilton and the devotees of the game are so few that the article would not be of general public interest. It may, however, be opportune to enquire whether the Lord's Day Alliance proposes to begin a crusade against all forms of physical recreation on Sunday. Golf is one of the mildest and soberest of outdoor games; and if the Lord's Day Alliance objects to the playing of golf on Sunday, it is reasonable to suppose that it would also object to all forms of outdoor recreation.

In considering whether any particular Sunday outdoor recreation should be permitted or prohibited, there is one test question, which in the Herald's opinion, is all-important. That question is, Is the recreation annoying to other people? We believe that those who can conscientiously indulge in physical exercise of any sort on Sunday should be permitted to do so, but only so long as they do not prevent others from spending the day of rest as quietly and peacefully as they desire. But it is difficult to draw an exact line between the recreations which should be prohibited on Sundays. For example, it would be unjust to prohibit bicycling on the streets on Sundays on the ground that the sight of men on wheels on the Lord's Day shocks the moral sense of some few who think such Sunday exercise is sinful. But it is just and right to prohibit bicycle races on Sunday, because such events would be certain to interfere with the reasonable desire of many for a quiet Sunday. Professional baseball games would, we believe, be a genuine cause of offence; but it would be unjust to prohibit amateur games played in retired places, far from "the sound of the church-going bell."

In short, it must always be remembered that both classes of people have their rights—the people who believe that Sunday rest implies cessation from all recreation as well as work, and those people who believe that Sunday recreation is permissible, and indulge in it.

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

LACROSSE IN ENGLAND.

Mr. George Taylor, of the Tecumsehs, was in rather a reminiscent mood the other morning, and was speaking to the Toronto Telegram of the time he played with the West London lacrosse team in England two years ago.

"Lacrosse in England," said he, "is not any different from that played over here, only such a thing as roughness is an unheard of thing. Well, what I mean is that a man may get hurt perhaps one game in a hundred, but the cross-checking and body-checking is not in their game. I remember one day running up the field with the ball, and a player quite accidentally hit me slightly on the ribs. I hardly felt it, but before I knew what I was at I heard some one shout out, 'Oh, I say, beg pardon, old chap, awfully sorry,' and then my thoughts wandered to my sunny Canadian home, and it made me laugh to think of a player ever thinking of apologizing. It's more of 'Go on, you big stiff,' or something of that description.

"I wonder what they would think of a body-check that some of the bunch can give. It would put them clean out of business. Their rules read something like this—that no player shall charge another with both hands on his stick, so as to make the stick meet the body of an opponent. Roughness is really a thing unknown over there; they abhor it. Now, I'll show you how much they are down on it. At one time we were going to play off the final for the championship against Ireland. Now, it happened that one of our best players had honestly accidentally struck a man over the head with his stick. Why, a blind man could see it wasn't meant. But what do you think the spectators arose and cried 'Shame, shame!' and the result was that when we came to play Ireland, the captain left him off. Wouldn't that jar you? You know, over there a field captain is allowed, but he never goes on the field, and the teams are directed by the goal keepers. How do they play? Why, first rate. Of course their passing isn't as fast as ours and they can't catch the ball as well, their stick being too flat. And there is little or no practice, except perhaps for a final match. What will seem funny to you is that they have free admission to all matches except the final. What do you think of that? Where do they get the money to pay the players? Why, you're crazy, man. I think those fellows would be insulted were you to offer them money. Why, every playing member had to put fifteen shillings into the club as an annual subscription. There's where you get amateur lacrosse for fair, right in old England. And the club doesn't pay for the players' suppers as we have to do, not by a jugful. Every man pays his fourpence or sixpence after a game for tea, bread and butter and cake. Yes, and the joke of it is that the visiting team is in on the deal, and you have to settle for the man you've checked, if the match has been played on your grounds. Gee whiz, what an awful holler the lacrosse men in town would make if they had to pay for their opponents' meal at fifty cents per. Never in a thousand years. Yes, they wear the same uniforms as we do, only they will not stand for bare legs, and you have to wear stockings and long armed shirts. Say, a funny thing, the combined ages of two men playing in the West London team was just one hundred years—one was sixty, the other forty. They certainly are a decent lot of fellows over there, and as fair and square sports as one could meet."

Half Crazy With Piles.

Mr. Isaac Foster, Erie View, Norfolk Co., Ontario, writes:—"I was troubled with itching piles for about two years and could not sleep at nights. In fact I was half crazy from the terrible itching. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment I purchased a box. After the second application I experienced relief and one box cured me thoroughly and permanently, and that was two years ago. General Hutton et al.

Toronto Telegram.

No blame attaches to General Hutton for the displacement of Col. Herchmer, if there was truth in the suggestion that the latter was too hard on his men.

Canada would be inclined to forgive a great deal to General Hutton if he found it necessary to subordinate the feelings of one officer to the welfare of the men.

It is possible, of course, that Col. Herchmer would have done as good work as his successor, but the record of the Canadian Mounted Rifles in the field shows that General Hutton made no mistake in his choice of officers.

A question of veracity seems to be the inevitable feature of every controversy with General Hutton. Politicians and officers who have differed with him do not credit him with candor. It is impossible that he can be always right and they can be always wrong, and it is clear that Canada suffered no great loss when Gen. Hutton left the country.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

Ottawa, July 21.—The annual program for the Dominion Rifle Association meeting was issued yesterday morning. The council announced that in arranging the program it has had in view the convenience and comfort of competitors, and so hopes for an increased attendance of marksmen at annual matches.

The Record in Brief.

Hamilton Spectator.

At last the Parliamentary session is over. It has been remarkable for several things:

Duration.
Treasonable utterances.
Unnecessary talk.
Unreadiness of Government business.
Sir Wilfrid's repeated come-downs.
Sir Wilfrid's refusal to grant extra indemnity.
The bolt of Liberals on the emergency food vote.
Extravagant expenditure of public money.

The session will long be remembered, and the people of Canada pray that there will never be another like it.

The Man the Globe Lauds.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

Mr. Sifton has not long returned from Europe, but already he has been given an opportunity to explain certain curious incidents in the administration of the Department of the Interior. An example of the peculiar manner in which affairs of the Department of the Interior are conducted was recently brought to Mr. Sifton's attention in the House of Commons. It appears that two brothers named Wohlmann agreed to buy from George Christie, of Emerson, two quarter sections of land and in payment gave their joint note for $1,000. Christie thereupon took out homestead papers for the two quarter sections of land at a cost of fifteen dollars. He handed these papers over to Wohlmann brothers without acquainting them with the fact that the land was obtained upon homestead entry only. Christie afterwards sued the Wohlmanns upon the note which they had given to him and obtained judgment. In consequence of this transaction one of the Wohlmanns has been obliged to leave the country, whilst the other brother is preparing to follow his example. It is stated that the officials of the Department were aware of the unprincipled nature of the transaction when it took place. An investigation has shown that the officials protected the wrong-doer, yet Mr. Sifton has taken no action and the officials still retain their positions. The tenor of Mr. Sifton's reply was to the effect that if Christie could be convicted of fraud the Wohlmanns have a remedy in the courts and that the Department of the Interior has nothing to do with the matter. It is disgraceful that officials should be allowed to use their official positions to assist transactions which must be condemned by all honorable men and that officials who are guilty of such conduct should be retained unpunished. It appears that the Minister of the Interior is of opinion that officials of public departments should assist land sharks, but that they owe no duty to the settler. This is not the conception which the public have as to the duty of officials of the public departments, but so long as Mr. Sifton remains Minister of the Interior such conduct must be expected from the insubordinates.

The Tale of a Shirt.

Belleville Intelligencer.

Writing from South Africa a Canadian tells a very good tale of a shirt. The soldier's company was returning from a long and arduous scouting trip, in which many of the men had parted with a large portion of their wearing apparel. Passing a Boer house on the outskirts of the town one of the men saw two very good shirts hung out to dry. One of the soldiers, who had only half a shirt to his back, proceeded to help himself to a whole one. A woman came out of the house and said to him, in very good English, "You will pay for that on the judgment day." "Indeed, missis!" said the Tommy, "well, if you give such long credit as that I'll take 'em both". And he did.

THE PRESPYTERIAN MISSIONARIES SAFE

Canadian Board Considering Their Withdrawal—Message Started to Pekin from Conger.

MESSAGE FOR PEKIN

Washington, D.C, July 23.—The Chinese Minister has undertaken to get another message through to Mr. Conger at Pekin. It is believed this message is well on its way, having been handed to Mr. Wu on Saturday by Secretary Hay. While the greatest secrecy is maintained as to the contents of the second despatch it is understood it informs Mr. Conger and through him the other foreign representatives at Pekin of the first repulse of the allied force under Admiral Seymour, of the subsequent storming of Tien Tsin, of the assembling of reinforcements and of the prospects of the speedy despatch of a strong relief column, pending the arrival of which the Minister and his collegues are urged to keep up their courage and to maintain their resistance to the last.

CONGER THE ONLY ONE ALIVE

Paris, July 23.—The theory is being discussed here, probably in view of Minister Wu's reported offer to produce Mr. Conger at Pekin, that Conger is the only Minister left alive at Pekin.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARIES SAFE

The following cablegram was received this morning by the Rev. Dr. Warden, general agent of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, from Dr. McClure at Shanghai: "All missionaries safe; resumption of work within year improbable; wire instructions." A meeting of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board is being held this afternoon to consider the question of withdrawing all of the missionaries in China until things have become quiet again.

BRITISH REPULSED CHINESE

St. Petersburg, July 23—Two encounters are reported to have taken place between the British and Chinese forces near Wei Hai Wei. The latter is reported to have been repulsed after a stubborn encounter. No dates are given. M. Krutisi, Minister for Chinese Railways, telegraphing from Alyachi, in the Raus Baikal territory, under date of Friday, July 20, reports the occupation of Chailar by Chinese troops. The Russians, according to this despatch, continued to concentrate at Charbin.

CONGER'S DESPATCH DISCREDITED!

Washington, July 22—The State Department has received a number of despatches from foreign governments relative to the Conger despatches, and also from our officials in China, including Consul General Goodnow. Without exception they discredit the accuracy of the despatch, and advance various theories to show its lack of genuineness. The entire burden of the answers indicate a disposition not to waive the relief expedition on the evidence furnished by the Conger despatch.

Lennox in South Simcoe.

Alliston, July 23.—The Conservatives of South Simcoe met here on Saturday, and selected Haughton Lennox as their candidate for the House of Commons in place of the late Col. Tyrwhitt, M.P. The meeting was large and enthusiastic. Twenty names were proposed. On the first ballot Mr. Lennox had 119 votes, on the second 133, and on the third 187, his opponent, Mr. Bell, getting 133 on this last ballot.

Bourassa May Not Hang.

London Bakers, 1310.

In 1310 we find the following Bow bakeresses accused of selling halfpenny loaves deficient in weight: Sarra Foting, Christina Terrice, Godiyeva Foting, Matilda de Bolingtone, Christina Prichet, Isabella Sperling, Alice Pegges, Johanna de Countebrigge and Isabella Pouveste. One wonders why the husbands were not summoned. In a similar case in 1316, when Agnes Foting's bread was seized, it was "adjudged that her bread should be forfeited and given to the prisoners in Newgate because her husband did not come to avow (own) the bread." Are we to assume that in the absence of the husbands the bread was merely forfeited without the infliction of a fine?

An indication of the importance of the breadmaking business is also found in an enactment of the reign of Henry III to the effect that "every cart of Bremble (Bromley-by-Bow) or Stevenhethe (Stepney) that comes into the city with bread shall pay each day 1 halfpenny."—Gentleman's Magazine.

DETAILS OF DEWET'S ATTACK

Hottest Experience of the War For Some Canadians.

"D" Squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, Under Continuous Fire at Short Range—List of Casualties—A Bulletin From Lord Roberts Says the Third Brigade Repulsed Dewet's Force, Which Is Broken in Two.

Montreal, July 23.—Following is a special by cable from the special correspondent of The Star in London:

London, July 21.—Mr. H.S. White, the correspondent of The Montreal Star, with the second Canadian contingent, writes from Kroonstad, under date of June 23, as follows:

"Yesterday the railway was attacked by a part of Dewet's commando, with two guns, the attack commencing at the camp about 20 miles north of Kroonstad, occupied by two companies of Shropshires and 50 men of D Squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles, under command of Capt. Davidson.

"At dawn Lieut. Inglis, with 12 men, started to occupy, with Cossacks and posts, two kopjes side by side about a mile east of camp. Inglis had posted men on one kopje, and was just about to take the other kopje when a party of mounted Boers were observed already occupying it.

"Immediately large numbers of the enemy came galloping over the ridge, and made a dash forward to cut our men off from the camp. Lieut. Inglis ordered the men to retire as quickly as possible, some firing, while others retired after a while covered from fire by the main body. Our men were under Capt. Davidson. The Boers got within 200 yards of the retiring outpost, pouring into them a continuous fire at this short range, while they were doing their best to get back to camp.

"On our men's part it was a race for life, and the hottest experience they have had during the campaign.

"I am sorry to report that Corp. Fred. Morden, Trooper Robert Kerr and Sergt. Pattison were killed. Lt. Inglis and Troopers Aspinall and Burney and Corp. T. R. Miles are known to be wounded, and Troopers Bell and Ermatinger are prisoners."

BULLETIN FROM ROBERTS.

Which Says the Third Brigade Repulsed Dewet's Force.

London, July 22.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 21.—Little, temporarily commanding the third brigade, reports that on July 19 he came in contact near Lindley with Dewet's force, which broke through Hunter's cordon. The fighting lasted until dusk, when Dewet's force, being repulsed, broke into two parties. Little's casualties were slight. He buried five Boers.

"Hamilton and Mahon continued their eastward march yesterday, and should join hands with Pole-Carew to-day near Ersten Fabriken station.

"A body of the enemy wrecked a train carrying sick between Krugersdorp and Potchefstroom, July 19."

Boers Attacked a Post.

London, July 23.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, July 22.—The Boers made a determined attack yesterday to destroy a post at the railroad, 13 miles east of Heidelberg, which they attacked with three guns and a pompom, and surrounded. They were, however, beaten off, after a sharp engagement, before reinforcements summoned from Heidelberg had arrived."

Boers Prepared to Retire.

Lorenzo Marques, July 21.—A despatch from Machadodorp says that heavy artillery firing has been reported from the neighborhood of Middleburg, where it was reported the Boers had prepared to retire upon the approach of the British.

Among the prisoners pushing through Nooit Gedacht this week were a number of Canadians, captured at Greylingstah.

Four German officers, who have been acting as President Kruger's military advisers, have just arrived, having received orders from Berlin to proceed to active service in China.

On Thursday, the 19th, Ross Purvis, aged 16 years, youngest son of David Purvis, hardware merchant of North Bay, accidentally rode off the new wharf with his bicycle and was drowned.

VIEW OF A LIBERAL.

Here is the way the Macgregor Herald, a Liberal newspaper, puts the Government case :—

"The Dominion Parliament is on its last legs. Are the Liberals going to the polls with no clear-cut issues to lay before the electorate?

"Is the experience gained at the local elections to have no weight in preparing for the coming contest?

"Are we to go to the polls with nothing but the record of the Government? In other words do principles count, or is the fight to be merely one for place and power between the Liberal and Conservative leaders?

"An election cry of "Laurier and the great Liberal party," with nothing to back it, is useless.

"To go before the electors with that alone is to court defeat. A convention of Manitoba Liberals is an absolute necessity.

"Nothing but a full, fair and unfettered convention will meet the situation, and now is the time to prepare for it."

WHERE THE GOVERNMENT IS RESPONSIBLE.

The Montreal Star draws attention to the fact that the Paper Makers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland has addressed to Lord Strathcona, as Canadian High Commissioner, a letter on the wood pulp industry of Canada, in which it is pointed out that the wood available in Canada produces very satisfactory pulp, quite equal to the best Scandinavian, and it is declared that British paper makers would rather do business with and invest their money in Canada (if the conditions of the business admit) than with any other country, but certain drawbacks are outlined. One of these is the excessive freight rates across the ocean, especially in winter. The wood pulp industry does not suffer alone in this respect. This is the greatest drawback to a Canadian export business in every line of manufacture. One cause of this is the unjust discrimination of the British Marine insurance companies against Canadian ports. This is a matter of immense importance to Canada, and the Laurier Government has done nothing to secure relief for Canadian shippers.

Lord Strathcona also sends to the Canadian Government the following statement regarding the Canadian pulp industry made by a large firm of paper makers in England:—

> "The first step towards the introduction of British capital into Canada has been taken by the imposition of a stumpage charge on all pulp exported from Crown Lands in the Province of Quebec and of the insertion of the manufacturing clause in the licenses issued by the Province of Ontario. It is to be hoped that other provinces will take similar action in restricting the exportation of pulp wood into the United States. Already one of the largest paper makers in England is risking a large sum of money in the erection of pulp and paper mills, and the result of their enterprise is awaited with much interest. It is undoubtedly a grave misfortune that concessions of timber limits and water powers should be granted by the Government to irresponsible syndicates who have no practical knowledge of the work, and whose main object is to exploit their concessions for their profit, regardless of the ultimate success of the scheme. Such syndicates get control over useful water powers and forests for a nominal figure and refuse to part with them except at an enormous profit, the result being that the business is over-capitalized before a start is made. * * * All this, while it does not put an extra dollar into the exchequer of the Provincial Governments, exasperates and discourages the legitimate capitalist. * * * We contend that concessions should not be granted to irresponsible syndicates, that when a concession is granted there should be a stipulation debarring the sale of same. The legitimate capitalist will in a short time have to be protected by the Government from the illegitimate speculator—speculation in concession will have to be made impossible."

When the Ontario Government, says the Star, began the policy of granting concessions of pulp lands to syndicates, Conservative newspapers severely criticized the arrangement. We do not know whether any syndicate has asked too much for the concessions it secured so easily from the Ontario Government. If the English paper makers paid what was asked they must have believed that it was worth at least that much, and the fact that the concessions were granted by the Government on terms too favorable does not make it robbery for the holders of the valuable concessions to get all they can for them. The paper makers are practical men and they should know the value of what they buy. We do not suppose they made the purchase without investigating. However, while it is hardly just to blame the holders of any Government concession for making as much as they can out of it, the Government is certainly very greatly to blame. Instead of publicly inviting tenders from responsible firms and awarding the limits to the highest bidders, the Government of Ontario secretly bargained away the public domain in spite of protests from Conservative newspapers all over the country. It is true that the men who obtained these concessions by private bargain have been able to sell them to practical paper makers at a great profit. It merely shows that the profits might have gone into the public treasury if the Government had acted in the interests of the people.

It is said that the Paris exposition is proving to be a frost and a failure. Well, Mr. Tarte did his share towards booming it with speeches that gave rise to "misconceptions" in Britain and caused cheering in France. And the Dominion Government did its share by spending something about four hundred thousand dollars on the affair and sending over a good-sized colony of officials to spend the money of the Canadian people seeing the sights.

One of the striking facts which Mr. Mulhall, the expert who has been figuring on results, expects the U. S. census figures to show is that agriculture does not keep pace with population. Assuming that the area devoted to grain and cotton will show a progress from 1897 to 1900 similar to that shown from 1890 to 1897, there will be shown for 1900 a total acreage for these products amounting to 180,700,000 acres. This would mean a growth of 12 1-2 per cent. in ten years, while the increase of population in the interval has been 22 per cent. The value of agricultural products per inhabitant is now, it seems, 10 per cent. less than in 1880.

The Kingston Whig (Grit) discussing the finding of the West Elgin election frauds commission, says:—"Mr. Macnish they completely exonerate, but how they excuse Duncan Bole and J. G. Pritchett it is difficult to conceive. The irregularities of the returning officer probably cover Bole's performance, and the sheriff was somewhat to blame if he made a deputy of any interloper; if he acted under the pressure of any one else that one should be exposed. be exposed. Pritchett, it is announced, is so bad a man that his statements, in the form of solemn affidavits, cannot be believed. He reminds one of Gavin Birse, whom Barrie has immortalised in A Window in Thrums. Gavin had tired of his love for Margaret Louvie, and desiring to sour her on him undertook to picture himself as 'a regular devil.' Margaret heard him out and then remarked:—'We a' hae oor faults, Gavin, an' devil or no devil, you're the man for me.' Pritchett would have the commission believe him a very bad man—a regular devil in an election—and the judges will not have it.' '

Where the Government is responsible

The Toronto Globe thinks it is absurd to talk of the Government permitting Messrs. Tarte, Bourassa or Monet to talk independence and treason. The Globe says the Government has no power to license men to talk or to prevent them from talking, and goes on to instance what a man is allowed to talk in England. But the Globe does not deal with the important point. Why does the Government keep such a man as Tarte in the Cabinet to make his pro-French speeches in Paris as a Canadian Minister, thereby giving them weight and importance. His misrepresentations would amount to nothing, would be of no more importance than other ordinary individual who may like France more than Great Britain, if it was not for the office he holds in a Liberal Government. Take away the office; no one asks the Government to muzzle Tarte. He can do little harm if the Liberals do not elevate him to high positions. The Globe cannot point to a case of a man being retained in a British Cabinet who talked as Tarte has talked.

No misconceptions are allowed. No explanations would be asked. A man must be above suspicion, and when he talks so near the treason line the safe and only course is to reduce him to the level of other agitators who talk but, owing to their littleness, do no harm and are not worthy of serious notice.

For Over Fifty Years.

It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

MEN OF MARK.

The will of Julius Adams of Boston gives $25,000 to Carney hospital of that city.

William A. King, the successor in congress to Roberts of Utah, is a Mormon, but not a polygamist. He is 37 years old and has been in politics for 15 years.

The will of Captain Thomas Wilson of Cleveland provides for the establishment of a home for aged couples in which preference shall be given to sailors and their wives.

Governor Robert B. Smith of Montana has made a fortune in mining. He is popular in the mining districts, the men regarding him almost as one of themselves, but respecting him none the less.

Senator Beveridge said the other day, "Though it is true that I have been making a life study of the Malay languages, I have as yet mastered but one, and there are some 58 others yet to master."

When Senator Hoar of Massachusetts was recently asked what he had been reading of late, he replied, "For serious work, 'David Harum;' for light reading and amusement I've been going through Gibbon again."

Lord Roberts is fond of music. The members of his staff on various occasions have got up impromptu concerts to please him, and in one campaign the general was always serenaded when he retired to rest.

Edouard Bocher, who died at the age of 90 in Paris the other day, was for many years the confidential adviser of the Orleans family and the center of most of the Orleanist plots during the last 40 years.

Dr. E. T. Allen, one of the Illinois homeopathic doctors in convention at Chicago, declared that irregular eyebrows are a sign of insanity. In his opinion, the condition of the brain affects the growth of the eyebrows.

D. H. Chamberlain, who was governor of South Carolina during the so called "carpetbag" regime, has subscribed for 20 shares of stock in the Charleston Exposition company, which expects to hold a great fair in Charleston next year.

A friend of William M. Evarts reports him as being much amused by having read a recently published account of himself. "This says I am 'gradually fading away' like an old photograph," he remarked, "but I fancy you can still make out the features."

While Judge Kenneth M. Jackson of Alaska is still under 30 years of age, he has received as much as $50,000 as an attorney's fee and cleared up several million dollars on mining properties. He landed in Alaska not many years ago with $250 as his entire fortune.

Eugene Bruce, who has been interested in the lumber business in the Adirondacks for several years, is to be employed by the division of forestry of the United States department of agriculture in preparing working plans for the forest reserves and for the large eastern tracts owned by the government.

President McKinley on horseback will be one of the sights at the national Grand Army encampment at Chicago in August. Since General Grant's last term no president has appeared mounted in any parade. The projected exception is due to the fact that President McKinley has been appointed a member of the mounted staff attendant on Commander In Chief Shaw.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Many young turkeys die from lack of vigor due to inbreeding or lice.

Tobacco stems scattered through the nesting material will help keep lice away.

Sulphur should never be given unless strictly necessary, as it may cause leg weakness.

It is a mistake to select the largest males for next year's breeders. The proper ones to select are those which are active. A lazy, sluggish young cockerel is sure to be sluggish and clumsy when matured.

Carbolic acid is a poison and will kill poultry if they drink water in which too much of it is used. Twelve drops of the acid in a quart of water is enough. But in cases of cholera a teaspoonful in three pints of water will not be too much.

A hen seldom begins to eat shells until she finds one broken by accident or until she becomes accustomed to eggshells that may be thrown into the yard. On this account eggshells should always be well crushed before they are given to the hens.

LAW POINTS.

A London magistrate recently decided that a girl was not obliged to return a bicycle she had received as a present from a man whom she subsequently jilted.

The supreme court, says the Boston Journal, is of the opinion that the man who supposed that cigars could pass as drugs on Sunday was the victim of what is colloquially known as a pipe dream.

The highest court of appeal in Great Britain has sustained the decision that a circulating library can be held personally responsible for libelous statements contained in any of the volumes which it circulates.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Shirt linings, if not much worn, may be made almost fresh as new by washing and starching with starch in which there is a little gum arabic.

Articles de luxe of glass, gold, silver, earthen and other wares can with safety be washed with borax solution and their brilliancy and delicacy restored.

Keep a small, stiff new toothbrush especially to clean your fancy glassware. Dust, etc., accumulate in the patterns, and the towel does not remove them.

His Own Trap.

There is a young man in the pension office who is buying a house on the installment plan at a town somewhere between this city and Baltimore, and his dear little wife lives out there. It is his wont to come in early of a morning and to go out again on the 5:30 train when his day's work is done. A few days ago he met an old friend from Chicago, and, yielding to the entreaties of that old friend, he decided to spend the evening in town. He was so afraid wifie would feel hurt if she knew that he had deliberately planned an evening's good time without counting her in that he manfully resolved to deceive her. Accordingly as he came away from the office he went to a telegraph office and sent this message to her:

"Unavoidably detained. Missed 5:30 train. Will be out later."

It was a great deal later when he reached his happy home. Wifie met him at the door, and there was a look in her eye that every married man learns to know and instinctively to dread.

"Did you get my message precious?" he asked as he kissed her tenderly, holding his breath meanwhile as a precautionary measure.

"Yes, dear," she made answer, and when a woman calls her husband "dear" that way you can cut loose from the weather bureau and prognosticate a few things on your own hook. "Yes, dear, I received your message. Here it is."

There it was, sure enough. It was marked as plain as plain could be, "Received at 4:23." He hadn't thought of that.

Nature as an Armorer.

There are few departments of human life where man has been so entirely anticipated and at the same time surpassed by the lower animals as in the invention of armor.

His cunningest devices of the mailed fist order were none of them original. If you examine a fine and fully developed suit of plate armor in the form which it assumed at its highest zenith in the fifteenth century, you will find that the trunk and limbs were completely inclosed in a splendid fitting, jointed case of iron plates, all exquisitely polished. The suit as a whole was a triumphant product of the armorer's art.

Yet if you look at a lobster's tail you will see at a glance that all these clever devices of man's imagining had been invented and patented long before by nature and that the elaborate workmanship of the Plantagenet craftsmen who cased knight and horse for the battlefield or the tournament in glistening metal was but a poor imitation of the ineffable skill with which the unheeded crustaceans of the time protected every vulnerable portion of their bodies from the assaults and attacks of their submarine enemies.—Strand Magazine.

They are noisy but they are nice. Who would exchange the merry noise of children at play, for the childless home where the clock tick can be heard hour after hour in the dull silence? But there are a great many who would like to people the silent house with the children that fate has refused them. Fate is often in this case only another word for ignorance. Many a glad mother dates her happiness from the day she first began the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It often happens that with the cure of female weakness and the establishing of the delicate womanly organs in sound health, the way is opened for the joy of motherhood. "Favorite Prescription" is a specific for the chronic ailments peculiar to women. It cures them perfectly and permanently. No other medicine can do for women so much as "Favorite Prescription." Do not therefore let any other medicine be palmed off on you as "just as good." "Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, opium, cocaine or other narcotic. It is strictly a temperance medicine.

"I had been a sufferer from uterine trouble for about three years, and the doctors that I consulted said I would have to go through an operation before I could give birth to children," writes Mrs. Blanche B. Evans, of Parsons, Luzerne Co., Pa., Box 41. "When about to give up in despair I saw an advertisement of Dr. Pierce's medicines and thought I would give it a trial. I bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and after taking it felt better than I had for years. I [illegible] the bottle. After taking four and a half bottles I gave birth to a bright baby girl who is now four months old and has not had a day of sickness. She is as bright as can be."

A woman's complexion often suffers because of poisonous accumulations in the system. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets remove these accumulations and cleanse the complexion. They regulate the stomach, liver and bowels.

William Linton's Deliberate Suicide.

Montreal, July 23.—William Linton, brother of James Linton, the boot and shoe dealer, committed suicide Saturday night in St. Lawrence Hall, by inflicting a terrible gash with a razor across his wrist, the arteries, veins and nerves being severed. Deceased, who was married, was a commercial traveller and 55 years of age. Mr. Linton's suicide appears to have been a most deliberate one, he having left his own room for one of the guests' bathrooms in the same corridor, taking with him the means of ending his life.

Two Hundred Filipinos Dead.

Manila, July 22.—It is officially announced that 200 insurgents were killed and 13 surrendered or were captured in last week's fight. One hundred rifles were taken. Bleeding Piles

A Prominent Business Man Testifies to His Cure by Using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Not a day passes but many people volunteer recommendations of Dr. Chase's Ointment as an absolute cure for every form of piles.

Mr. Jas. Jackson, of the Laurie Spool Company, St. Alexis des Monts, Que., writes:—"You may put my name to any praise you can give to Dr. Chase's Ointment, for it has done me more good than any medicine I ever used.

"I was troubled for two years with that cruel disease, bleeding piles, and after using Dr. Chase's Ointment, I can say I am entirely rid of it. It is a treasure to all suffering from piles."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is guaranteed to positively cure any case of itching, bleeding, or protruding piles. It has never yet been known to fail, and certainly will not fail in your case.

For many years Dr. Chase's Ointment has stood alone as the only absolute and guaranteed cure for piles and itching skin diseases; 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has by far the largest sale of any remedy for throat and lung troubles. 25 cents a bottle.

THE CAMPANIA IN COLLISION

Cut the Embleton in Two in the Irish Channel.

The Embleton Sank Immediately, and It Is Feared the Captain and Ten Others Were Drowned—The Campania Had Her Bows Stove In—Five Passengers Killed Through a Collision Outside Belfast Lough.

London, July 23.—A dense fog hung over the Irish Channel on Saturday, and the Cunard Line steamer Campania, en route for Liverpool from New York, struck the Liverpool barque Embleton, bound for New Zealand, amidships, cutting her in twain. The Embleton sank immediately. Seven of the crew were rescued, but it is believed that 11 members of the ship's company, including the captain, were drowned. The Campania had her bows stove in, but arrived safely at Liverpool five hours late.

Five Passengers Killed.

Belfast, July 23.—In a collision on Saturday night outside Belfast Lough, between the local passenger steamer Dromedary and Alligator, 5 passengers were killed and upwards of 50 more or less injured, in many cases amputations of legs being necessary. There were 600 passengers on board the two vessels, and terrible scenes followed the collision. It is feared that some others have been drowned.

A GRAND RALLY.

Conservative Electors of Jacques Cartier Met at Lachine to Honor Their Representative Mr. Monk.

Montreal, July 22.—(Special.)—The Conservative meeting at Lachine yesterday, in honor of Mr. F. D. Monk, M.P. for Jacques Cartier, was a splendid success, and the speakers from the Province of Ontario met with a peculiarly cordial reception. Hon. Dr. Montague stated that those who pretended that there was an agitation among certain Conservative members, in view of coming portfolios in the Tupper Government, were idle busybodies. The party, he added, is solidly united under the leadership of Sir Charles Tupper, the illustrious Nova Scotian, and when that great statesman reaches power in the near future, as he surely will, the best men from the different provinces will be given portfolios. Dr. Montague affirmed that Sir Charles Tupper's choice of colleagues will be satisfactory to the party, and satisfactory to the whole country. He told the French-Canadians of Quebec that Ontario was actuated by the most friendly feeling towards them, and the doctor turned to Mr. J. G. H. Bergeron, M.P., and asked him if he had ever received a more hearty and cordial greeting than when he addressed the other day that great meeting in historic old Haldimand.

Mr. E. F. Clarke's Speech.

The greatest interest was also felt by the French-Canadians to hear E. F. Clarke, one of the leading Orangemen of Canada, and the cheers which greeted the appearance of Toronto's ex-Mayor must have convinced him that the so-called prejudice does not exist, at least in Jacques Cartier.

Mr. Clarke made an able speech, as did Messrs. Bergeron, Quinn and Monk, M.P.'s, Hon. L. O. Taillon and others. Mr. Bergeron said the statement that Quebec would stick to Laurier because he was a French-Canadian was an insult to the race, and he predicted a condemnation just as strong in this as in the other provinces.

NORTHWEST NOTES.

R. Bennett, M.P.P. of Calgary, Nominated By Alberta Conservatives.

Winnipeg, July 22.—R. Bennett, M.L.A., of Calgary, has been nominated by Alberta Conservatives to contest Alberta for the Commons. Premier Haultain was tendered the nomination, but declined.

F. Burns, a Portage la Prairie boy, was drowned to-day while bathing in Lake Manitoba.

Hunt's blacksmith shop, Jordan's general store, Park's confectionery and Anderson's blacksmith shop were burned at Thornhill station to-day.

A MILLION IN GOLD DUST.

Steamer Amur Brought Down Richest Party of Klondikers.

Victoria, B.C., July 22.—The steamer Amur reached here this afternoon, bringing the largest number of rich Klondikers and more gold dust than previously arrived from the north this year. There is at least a million in gold dust, and on board the steamer are 90 passengers, one-third of whom made fortunes in the far north. The general opinion of these men, who were actually engaged in mining, is that the output for the year will be twenty-five millions. This large output is accounted for by the fact that just as much gold is now taken out in summer as winter.

Doctors say there is no smallpox in Dawson, but there are a few cases of typhoid. The arrangements for suppression of the disease are the very best.

All freight has been removed from White Horse to Dawson, but the river below Selkirk is getting low.

Lord Minto at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 22.—(Special.)—Lord and Lady Minto had a magnificent reception on their arrival Saturday night. The streets were brilliantly illuminated with fancy patriotic designs, "Welcome Minto," etc. Tens of thousands of special lights illuminated Main-street, and the grounds at the Gubernatorial residence, at which the Vice-regal party stays until Tuesday, were made [illegible] by [illegible] special lights, principally Chinese lanterns. His Excellency responded in a happy speech to the civic address.

To-day (Sunday) he attended in full uniform the service in Trinity Church, marching at the head of the militia. The Archbishop of Rupert's Land preached, paying a glowing tribute to the bravery of the soldiers in South Africa.

His Excellency opens the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition to-morrow.

Brydon's Rink was destroyed by fire Saturday; loss $7000; insurance $3000.

Priest Died in His Study.

Montreal, July 22.—(Special.)—Rev. Father Piche, parish priest of Lachine, was found dead in his study shortly after preaching his sermon to-day. Deceased was 70 years of age, and had been 40 years cure of Lachine.

THE QUEEN'S PRIZE.

A Devonshire Man Won It in the Bisley Competition—Prizes Won By Canadians.

London, July 23. — The annual meeting of the National Rifle Association at Bisley ended Saturday with the final stage of the competition for the Queen's Prize, in which four Canadians participated. Fleming, Langstroth and Milligan started in with scores of 206 each, and McVittie with 205. Saturday morning they faced the target at the 800 yards range, and McVittie and Fleming each scored 46. Langstroth made 42 and Milligan 40. At 900 yards, Fleming made only 28, Langstroth 34 and Milligan 32, while McVittie only got 30.

Devonshire Man Won It.

The Queen's Prize was won by Pte. W. T. Ward of the 1st Devonshires, with a score of 341.

Prizes Won By Canadians.

The following Canadians won small prizes in the final stage of the Queen's Prize: Langsroth, score 326, National Rifle Association badge and £12; Gunner Fleming, 319, badge and £8; Milligan, 312, badge and £5; McVittie, 309.

The St George's Match.

The competition of the contest for the St. George's Challenge Vase found Sergt. Carruthers of Canada third, with a score of 111, only two behind the winner. Sergt. Carruthers takes a bronze cross and £20. Other Canadian winners are Munro, who captured a National Rifle badge and £8; Morse £5, and Lieut. Smith £4.

In the Alexander Martin match, 900 yards, 10 shots, Bombardier Bodeley won £1.

Capt. William Hetherington, well known in marine circles, died on Saturday morning at the General Hospital, Toronto. When the West Wind was the swiftest craft on the lakes he sailed her. He was born in Scarboro in 1841.

A Fashionable Center.

"See here," exclaimed the irate victim, "the lot you sold me at Lakemoor is at least three feet under water. How do you expect me to build on that?"

"Really, my dear sir," replied the real estate agent coolly, "you're such a fashionable looking man I thought you had a notion to build a houseboat. They're so recherche, you know." — Philadelphia Press.

Some Men Never Learn.

"Now I distinctly recall the last total eclipse of the sun," remarked Mr. Homewood. "It occurred in 1869, you will remember, Miss Beechwood."

"Sir!" said Miss Beechwood freezingly. And Mr. Homewood wondered how he had put his foot into it this time.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Health Problem.

Is much simpler than is sometimes supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla. You may keep well by taking it promptly for any stomach or blood disorder. Its cures of scrofula, salt rheum, catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism and other diseases are numbered by the thousands.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

His Musical Tastes.

"What is your favorite opera?" asked the foreign gentleman.

Mr. Cumrox was about to answer "The Mikado," when he observed that the eyes of his wife and daughter were upon him. Then he assumed an air of nonchalance and answered:

"Oh, I don't care particular about the names of cigars or the titles of operas. I like to change around. I just tell 'em to give me a 25 cent cigar when I feel like smoking, and when I want music I enjoy any old $5 a seat opera."—Washington Star.

The Next Best Thing.

"I trust," said the new member of the school committee, "that you do not hold out to your pupils the misleading hope that each of them may be the president?"

"No, indeed," replied the dominie, "but I do not think that I err on the side of improbability when I teach them that each has a good chance of being a presidential possibility."—Harper's Bazar.

Rounder—Hello, old fel! What are you doing out sho late?—Philadelphia Record.

Entrance Examinations.

Eight candidates from Keene Public school were successful in passing the recent High School entrance examination. This, taken in consideration with the fact that the school is almost ungraded, speaks volumes for its high standing, and must indeed be highly gratifying to the teachers in charge. The Hastings Star is loud in its praise of Master Lamey, from that district, who secured the creditable number of 810 marks, the highest number obtained at either Campbellford or Norwood; but will now have to give way two places, the first to Master Bruce McFee, who obtained 840 marks; and the second, and so very close, to Miss Agnes Campbell, who obtained 837 marks, both of Keene Public school. Such results reflect great credit to the pupils themselves and the earnestness and the force of the teaching of Mr. Wallace, the principal, who has had the pupils in charge the last two years. —Com.

SHOULD BE INQUIRED INTO.

The case referred to in Saturday's issue of the American tourists who were stopped at Lakefield by Fishery Inspector Moore and had their fish confiscated and were made to deposit ten dollars a piece with the officer should be investigated.

Much money and energy is being spent to make our northern lakes attractive to summer tourists, and thousands of dollars have been spent to induce our American cousins to come here and spend the summer with us at our beautiful resorts. One great inducement is the fishing, for Americans are enthusiastic fishermen and enjoy the sport. They are usually first class fellows and desirable visitors, and great care should be taken to make their visit as pleasant as possible. We believe they observe the fishing laws as well as the average Canadian fisherman, but, be that as it may, we cannot afford to have parties of them held up and put to expense and inconvenience through the mistakes of officious officials. The fishery law should be observed, and must be enforced, but there are ways and ways of enforcing the law to secure best results. Men ignorant of what the law is should not attempt to enforce it.

The Review is not passing judgment on Mr. Moore's case until his side of it and all the facts have been heard, but from the circumstances that surround it and the statement of the men who were relieved of their fish we believe the case should be investigated. An explanation from Mr. Moore might go a long way towards straightening the case out.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

◆

Pupils Taking Highest Marks in Various Parts of the County.

A survey of the honor list of Entrance candidates reveals the following interesting facts:—

In the town there are two scholarships, one for the girl making the highest total, and one for the boy making the best score. These scholarships are worth ten dollars each. Miss Edna Armstrong, daughter of Mr. S. R. Armstrong, secures one of these with a total of 807 marks. Mr. Mark Butcher takes the boys' prize with a total of 754.

Out of 330 candidates who wrote in town and county, the following have made 800 or over out of a total of 1,100:—

At Peterborough there were three. Miss Maud Pengelly, a pupil of Miss S. Hamilton, North Monaghan, has a total of 843; Miss Edna Armstrong and Miss Gussie Shorey, of the Central school, have 807 and 800, respectively. They are pupils of Messrs. Wm. and J. C. Smith.

At Lakefield Miss May Roberts, S. S. No. 9, Smith, a pupil of Mr. Percy G. Might, has taken 842 marks. Miss Roberts is only 11 years old.

At Norwood Mr. Percy Grover, of Norwood Public school, Mr. R. S. Breckenridge, teacher, has 812.

At Keene Mr. Bruce McFee 840, and Miss Agnes Campbell 837, are pupils of Mr. T. J. Wallace, of Keene Public school.

Something About the Meals That are Served at "Y" Camp—The Sports Indulged in—All Well and Happy.

Y. Camp, 1900,
Thursday, July 20th.

Once more we take pleasure in sending you the greetings of our camp, hoping that our daily letters may not prove too tiresome to our readers at home. To-day we intend to try to give you a little more fully a description of our meals, which we all enjoy so much.

Breakfast comes at nine and consists of two courses, sugared cream and porridge, buttered bread and eggs, tea and coffee; dinner at twelve, with soups, shanks and select potatoes, while tea finishes the day with bread, butter and bologna or, if the glassy deep which stretches before our camp, have yielded up their finny stores, floured fried fish and boiled potatoes. Of course this menu is subject to many a change, according as our caterer makes inroads on our stores of fruit, onions, beets, carrots, or surrenders the cereal box so navely defended by rice, peas, beans, etc. In fact, if you want a good, square, wholesome meal pay us a visit and judge for yourself.

Another interesting feature of our camp life is the sports. They are numerous, and partaken of by almost every boy in the camp. Baseball perhaps holds the most prominent place, a league having been formed, consisting of three teams, and some exciting games may be expected within the next few days. Water Polo, or "Whally Polly," as it is familiarly called, comes next, while foot ball, and even pig in the market, are indulged in by many of the boys. By such exercise in the pure, fresh air, so plentiful here, the health of everyone is assured of, while the muscles are beginning to feel the effects of such hard exercise.

There are many other things, too, which occupy the time of the young campers. It is an amusing sight to see seven or eight young water-rats vainly endeavoring to balance themselves on the curved surface of an up-turned row boat. Berry-picking is another pastime, or perhaps task, indulged in by many, and as a result the stock of berry fruit in the surrounding country is fast diminishing.

Well, we shall have to bid you good-bye again. As yet not a single incident or accident has occurred to mar our pleasant outing, and we trust that none shall. All are well, and, we know, send their respects to the friends at home.

JACK.

NOTES.

Our postoffice is very busy these days, each mail carrying as many as ten or fifteen letters to Juniper Island station.

Master Cecil Succee succeeded in landing a beautiful lunge this morning. It easily weighed from eight to nine pounds. Strings of bass are frequently coming in, and our supply of fish is indeed plentiful.

We were favored with a call from Mr. F. H. Pope, of the Ontario Bank, Toronto, at noon to-day.

OBITUARY.

◆

Death of Mr. Frederic Sheppard After a Very Brief Illness.

The death took place this morning at the family residence, 12 Alfred-st., of Mr. Frederick Sheppard. The deceased was enjoying good health apparently until Friday, when he was suddenly attacked with inflamation of the bowels, and grew gradually worse until the end came this morning.

Mr. Sheppard was an employee of the Canadian General Electric Co., and a tinsmith by trade. His genial and straight-forward manner and the fidelity with which he performed his duties to his employers had gained for him the respect and esteem of many friends.

The deceased was born in London, England, in 1861, and came to Peterborough in the year 1874 and has resided here ever since. In 1885 he married Miss Nancy Secord, daughter of Mr. Cornelius Cullen, of town, who with four children, survives him.

The deceased was an active member of Lansdowne Lodge, S.O.E., and a corporal in the 57th regiment. In both of these organizations he was a respected member and a great favorite.

The many friends of the family will extend to the beereaved relatives their deepest sympathy.

The funeral takes place on Wednesday afternoon.

AFFAIRS IN CHINA.

Talk with a British Officer who is in Canada on Furlough.

Col. H. S. P. Graves, assistant adjutant-general, Lahore District, India, who has been granted a year's furlough, arrived in Toronto on Saturday.

To a World reporter who called upon him last evening Col. Graves furnished an interesting interview of affairs in the East, particularly about the great famine in India. The colonel has lived 25 years in India and knows the country like a book. He left there on June 7, before the Boxer outbreak, but has since learned that nine thousand native troops have been despatched to China, some to Wei Hai Wei and others to Hong Kong to replace the regiments that were sent north from there.

Sir Alfred Gaselee, quartermaster-general, has also been sent, and has already participated to some extent in the operations. The objection which the Government felt to sending native Indian troops to fight the Boers does not, of course, hold good in the China crisis. India, however, furnished a great many remounts for the British cavalry in South Africa, and with them a number of Sowars, or native cavalrymen, in contradistinction to Sepoys, who are native infantrymen. The 40 Pathan (h silent), regiment, of which Col. Graves was lately in command, contributed two Pathans (non-coms.), who were in Ladysmith during the siege.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.

Speaking of the famine in India, which extends to the Punjaub, Col. Graves said the relief measures carried on by the Government are adequate to meet the distress, so far as saving human life is concerned, but are not able to supply sufficient fodder for the cattle, which are dying in great numbers.

The plan followed by the Government to meet the terrible distress is to organize relief camps in the neighborhood of great public works which are being constructed. These are always works of general utility, such as water-tanks and reservoirs, railway embankments, public roads, etc., and on these works the men are employed, or such of them as are in fit condition to work. Those who are not strong enough and the women and children are cared for at the relief camps and their needs supplied. There is a great deal of work to be done in administering these camps and a very large number of native officers are employed in famine duty, superintendence, etc.

MADE TO EARN RELIEF.

Those who come for relief are thus made to earn it, and not to depend on charity, as the Government is opposed to pauperizing the applicants. Sometimes cholera breaks out in these camps and

WOMAN SUICIDES AT HAVELOCK

MRS. BERT MYLES SHOOTS HERSELF IN THE FOREHEAD.

Wife of an Engine Driver on the C.P.R.—Mother of Four Children—Melancholia the Cause.

Dr. Gray, coroner, was informed by telephone of a suicide which took place in the village of Havelock to-day about noon. Mrs. Bert Myles, wife of an engineer on the Canadian Pacific railway, shot herself in the forehead with a revolver, killing herself instantly. Mrs. Myles had been ill and had been confined to her bed for about six weeks. She was under the care of her sister, who had left the room for a few minutes, when she heard the shot, and, rushing in, found her sister dead.

The deceased was formerly a Miss Grey and was the daughter of a retired Methodist Minister. She was about 35 years of age and had four children, the oldest of whom is 10 years of age.

Melancholia is supposed to have been the cause of her act.

Coroner Gray considered an inquest unnecessary and gave a certificate for burial.

THE FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

BASEBALL.

Lindsay Post:—Tuttle left yesterday for his home in New York State. He intends to work in the mines. Lindsay will have to look around for another good man, as "Bill" will be a heavy loss to the team.

The gate receipts at last Thursday's game in Lindsay amounted to $36.

At Bowmanville Saturday Port Hope lost to the home team by a score of 7 to 9.

Port Hope plays in Lindsay on August 2nd.

ANGLING.

On Saturday afternoon last a most enjoyable outing was indulged in by the members of the C. G. E. Anglers Club, about twenty-two of whom availed themselves of the half holiday and took 'busses to Lakefield, and after a pleasant trip, boarded Mr. Rupe Donell's yacht, the "Mayflower," which was kindly offered for the afternoon.

Some of the party engaged boats and trawled between Lakefield and Young's Point. At the latter place some more fished for the afternoon. Some fourteen went on to Burleigh, where a pleasant afternoon was spent. The honors of fishing were about equally divided. Mr. Brown, of the engineering department, caught a sun fish, and Sandy Miller a three inch perch, and Harry Westbrooke a cold. About eight thirty, after passengers and fish were put aboard, we shaped our course for Young's Point, where the members of the club assembled together and passed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Donnell for his kindness, and after singing "He is a Jolly Good Fellow," boarded the waiting 'busses, and started home, arriving in town about midnight.

One of the pleasing features of the trip home was a solo, "I Leave My Happy Home for You," by Harry Smith, accompanied by Davy Bewes on the hand organ, and also Sandy Miller gave the old favorite, "Joe Muggins."

While passing through Lakefield the fish inspector failed to examine the catch.

The Commodore, who was on a business trip to Europe or some other town, was greatly missed, as he is an accomplished performer on the Jew's harp. While Messrs. Tovey and Watts were fishing off the same dock a spider ingeniously lashed their poles together.

LACROSSE.

Richard Garland, the well-known sportsman, who has helped many a rising athlete, leaves in September for Melbourne, Australia, where he will reside permanently. The Toronto Lacrosse Club will miss this worthy, for he has done a great deal towards making the club what it is to-day. He leaves to manage the Dunlop Tire Company's business there, but says he dislikes very much to leave, as he thinks Toronto the only city in the universe.

Lionel King is now acting president of the C. L. A., Howard Clemes being away on his holidays. The Telegram says Mr. King should see that good referees are sent out to the various games, and not a lot of wooden Indians, as have been dished up to the lacrosse-loving public in the past.

An Ear Test.

A novel and curious test for deafness or approaching deafness has been described by a Paris specialist. If the handle of a vibrating tuning fork be applied to the knee or other bony portion of the human frame, the sound cannot be heard by the person who possesses an unimpaired ear, but if the ear be attacked by disease then the note can be heard distinctly.

MR. WM. GILLESPIE.

No class in the community render more signal service to their fellows than the men who here and there along the chain of our great lakes and rivers keep bright and clear the lights that guide the sailor. Lighthouse keepers are necessarily exposed a great deal to the weather, and one of them, William Gillespie, of Wolfe Island, Ont., states that in this way he contracted muscular rheumatism. "For two weeks," said Mr. Gillespie, "I suffered untold agony with muscular rheumatism in my shoulders. I was crippled by the disease to such an extent that I could not put my coat on without assistance. I bought a bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure, and two doses cured me completely. I have not had a twinge of pain since. There is nothing like this medicine for rheumatism."

THE IVORY QUEEN

BY NORMAN HURST.

Copyright, 1899, by the American Press Association.

The repetition grew simply maddening. He could bear it no longer; he would retest every theory; he would retrace his steps, go right back to the beginning, follow every clew from a different standpoint and see where it led him—see if there was anything, no matter how minute, that he had overlooked. He turned to the newspaper once more, and as he glanced down the columns a chess diagram caught his eye, the usual weekly problem, "White to play and mate in two moves." In an instant Darrent's mind was alert on a new scent.

So easy had been the trail that he had followed, so clearly had it pointed to the guilt of Astray Marsden, that he had quite overlooked the robbery of the chessmen. They had seemed to have no real connection with the actual murder, and they had slipped from his memory. Now, and it came forcibly back to him, he had better try to trace them and find what bearing they had upon the case. He recalled how he had built up a theory that if he could only find those chessmen he would be very near achieving mate upon the murderer's game. What step should he take now? He somehow could not disabuse his mind of the uneasy feeling that had possessed it—that perhaps he had put the hemp round an innocent man's neck, and in a few weeks' time, unless he proved himself to have been wrong, to have followed a bad theory to a false end, the noose might be drawn and Astray Marsden gone beyond recall.

He went up stairs to his room and took from his bag the odd pawn and the piece of tissue paper containing the chip of ivory, his new clews.

It was a big, manly task Darrent was going to enter upon, because if he proved that the conclusions he had already arrived at were false and that all along he had followed a false scent he wrote for himself and his lauded ability an awful denunciation. If, on the other hand, he only confirmed his first theory, there was nothing further to go on working for beyond self satisfaction and contentment. Was it worth while, after all? he pondered. Why not let things take their course?

He stepped out into the street and paused, irresolute, for a few moments. Then, suddenly making up his mind, he walked rapidly to the railway station and took the train for Bideford.

He had decided that the first new step he must pursue was to ascertain from Ethel Kingston anything he could as to the real relationship between Astray Marsden and the murdered man and, further, what were the grounds upon which old Marsden had forbidden the marriage of Astray with her. Perhaps in that very refusal of consent to the alliance there might be something that would lead him on a fresh scent, something that would dull or satisfy that aching that had taken possession of his mind, that would allay the haunting fear that perhaps, after all, he was wrong.

Heart Humbug

It is fashionable to-day to have a new heart scare every 24 hours. The commonest symptoms of dyspepsia or nerve trouble, such as palpitation, weak spells, loss of appetite, and poor circulation, are magnified and distorted into serious signs of heart trouble, with the object of frightening the public into taking this or that heart remedy. If a hundredth part of the heart trouble we hear about were real, the cemeteries would be filled in a month. A wrong construction is put upon common ailments in order to humbug the people into the belief that heart disease is prevalent, whereas real heart trouble, which is so sadly and suddenly fatal when it does occur, is a rare disease. Lopsided arguments cannot convince an intelligent people. Iron is the vital element of the blood. Too little iron means weakness, lack of spirit, pallid cheeks, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, nervousness, loss of vital force, ending in general break-down. The iron in Dr. Ward's Blood and Nerve Pills is in the soluble form you need, in combination with other curative agents in such a manner that disease can't resist their action. You feel yourself getting well when you take Dr. Ward's Blood and Nerve Pills.

50c per box, five boxes for $2.00. All Druggists, or Doan Williams & Co., Toronto, Ont.

When Darrent reached Bideford, he experienced but little trouble in finding the abode of Ethel Kingston, for upon a tiny burnished plate on a door in High street he read the name and underneath the word "Milliner."

How, wondered Darrent, as he stood awaiting an answer to his knock, would he find the woman who had taken that unrehearsed part in the dramatic scene at the trial? Would she be prostrated with grief and refuse to see him, or would she upbraid and assail him for having so steadfastly pursued and convicted the man she loved, the man whom she believed to be innocent and whom, if he were but free, she had sworn before all men she would marry? While Darrent turned these possibilities over in his mind the door was opened by the girl herself, who could ill conceal a start of astonishment as he raised his hat.

"You have come from him?" she queried.

"Yes," answered Darrent as he accepted her invitation to enter. "I have come, Miss Kingston," he continued, "because today I do not feel quite so satisfied as I have been all along about the guilt of Astray Marsden."

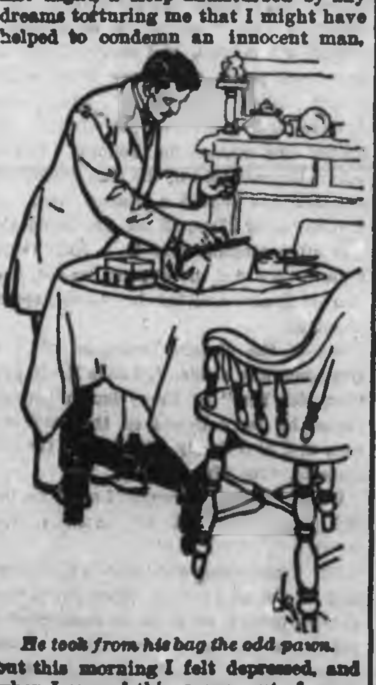
"And yet it is due to you, and you alone, that he is condemned."

"I only did what was my duty. I only pieced together facts, and the jury decided upon those facts. Today I come to you because I feel that one of those very facts is weakened, and its weakness weakens the whole chain."

"Pray go on. It is life and death to him—to me."

Darrent took a seat beside her and drew from his pocket the paper that he had been reading that morning and said:

"Miss Kingston, when Astray Marsden asked you in court if you believed him guilty and you answered 'No;' when he asked you if you would marry him if he were free and you answered 'Yes,' it for the moment lessened my belief in his guilt, but when I again reviewed all the facts that shadowy feeling of doubt vanished, and I was as sure as ever of that guilt. I slept well last night, a sleep undisturbed by any dreams torturing me that I might have helped to condemn an innocent man, but this morning I felt depressed, and when I opened this paper, out of your very words of yesterday, out of the very episode that had momentarily shaken my confidence in his guilt, had grown another incident that, unsuperstitious as I am, seemed nothing short of a miraculous coincidence. If you had not spoken yesterday, these words that I am going to show you now would never have been written, the mistake could not have occurred, and it might never have entered my mind that justice had perhaps miscarried."



He took from his bag the odd pawn.

He placed the paper on the table and pointed to the editorial with the misplaced space, "Astra ager scene it has never been our lot to witness."

For some moments Ethel Kingston could scarcely master her emotion as she gazed at the printed lines, and, sinking back into her seat, she covered her face with her hands.

Darrent waited until she had in some measure regained her composure and then, speaking very quietly, said:

"Miss Kingston, I have already told you I'm not a superstitious man, and I don't believe in signs and omens, but this accident or coincidence—call it what you will—has weakened my belief in myself and has determined me to retest this case in every detail, to follow again every clew, and see if I can find anywhere where the chain is faulty, any single instance where I have erred, where I have assumed too much or have allowed too little."

A thankful look lightened her face for a moment as she answered:

"Oh, if it only is so—if you, who have so painstakingly followed the clews to this awful end, should find some other evidence that should prove him innocent! Oh, merciful heaven, it must be proved! He is innocent—he is innocent!"

Again Darrent waited until she had become calmer.

"Can you," he asked as he took his notebook from his pocket, "give me any reason why old Marsden was so bitter against the marriage of yourself and Astray?"

"I only know that many years ago while I was away at school, my father, a widower, quarreled with Josiah Marsden—what about I never learned, but from that day until my father died the two were deadly enemies, and old Mr. Marsden forbade Astray to ever see or speak to me."

"Do you know anything of the real relationship between Astray and the old man?"

"I only know what Astray told me, and that was that Mr. Marsden adopted him when he was quite a child and that he had no recollection of his parents."

"You do not think that Josiah might have been his father?"

"I do not know, Mr. Darrent; indeed I do not know."

"Never mind," answered Darrent soothingly. "Now, tell me, did you see Astray Marsden between his return to Norcombe from Africa and the murder at The Grange? Remember, I am asking now to try to save him. Tell me all you know."

"No: I had not seen him for two years until I saw him after the murder."

"But he had written to you?"

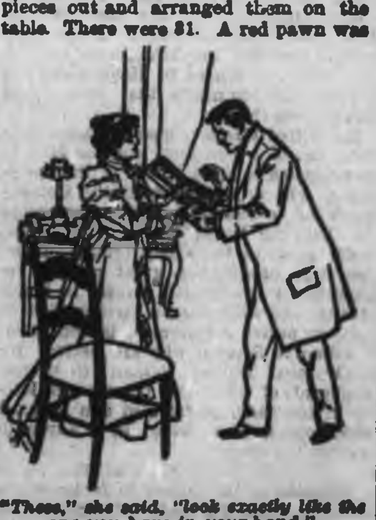
"Repeatedly."

Darrent paused again. He seemed to be able to get no further in this problem. Nothing was different from what he had built up all along. This woman could give him no further information, and yet there was still the aching doubt that had been with him all day. His mind reviewed the clews from which he had put together the evidence. Those clews had all passed out of his possession now into the hands of the district attorney, all except the chessman and the broken piece of ivory. They had seemed subsidiary to the main crime that had fitted so well to Astray Marsden that he had kept them to himself, kept them with perhaps the idea that one of these days he might run across the remainder of the set and find out what part, if any, they played in the drama upon which the curtain would then have long since been rung down. He recollected that he had placed the pawn in his pocket before he left Norcombe that morning, and almost unconsciously he took the little carved piece out and gazed at it.

Rising suddenly from the table, the girl crossed the room and, taking from the sideboard a sandalwood box inlaid with mother of pearl and ivory, opened it and displayed to Darrent's astonished gaze a set of chessmen of which that pawn evidently formed a part.

"These," she said, "look exactly like the one you have in your hand, Mr. Darrent. Do you think that they may help you; that there may be some clew in them?"

Darrent, almost too overcome with surprise to answer, slowly took the pieces out and arranged them on the table. There were 31. A red pawn was missing. He placed the red pawn he had taken from his pocket beside the others. It was a facsimile. There could be no question that it belonged to the set. Then Darrent turned his attention to the white pieces. He scrutinised the delicate work of the bishop's embroidered vestments, the carved pagodas on the backs of the elephants, the flowing robes of the king and queen. He took the white queen in his hand and examined the carving. Yes; a tiny piece had been chipped off, just a little fragment of the delicate ivory filigree crown that rested on the curling hair. He replaced the pieces in the box, except the red pawn and the white queen, and, taking from his pocketbook the scrap of ivory that he picked up from the library floor, fitted it exactly into the broken part of the crown. Yes, beyond all doubt, this was the set of chessmen stolen from The Grange. And where had he found them? In the house of the fiancee of the man now lying under sentence of death for the murder.



"These," she said, "look exactly like the one you have in your hand."

A sudden revulsion of feeling seemed to sweep over Darrent. He had, he felt, been wasting his sympathy to no purpose. Doubting his own acumen, he had started on a fresh track, he had commenced to reconsider all his conclusions, and yet the very first new step that he had taken had only the more deeply confirmed the damning evidence that his former efforts had accumulated.

"Mr. Darrent, do you think it will help your case? Do you think these will prove anything?" she asked, breaking the long pause.

"Let me ask you a few questions before I answer."

"Yes, anything you like—anything that will help Astray."

"Where did you get these chessmen?"

"They were sent to me."

"By whom?"

"I do not know."

"Was there no letter or message with them?"

"None," she hesitatingly answers.

"Come, come; you must confide the whole truth to me if I am to help you and Astray. When did you receive them?"

"Two days after the murder."

"How?"

"They came by express."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

HE HAD GENIUS.

But Fate and His Father Jarred It Very Harshly.

"John," began the wife proudly, as soon as they were alone after dinner, "you know those Jones boys over on Brush street? Well, they own a printing office or printing machine or something of that kind. Anyhow, they can print things."

"What things?"

"That's what I'm going to tell you. Our Willie can write stories and news to beat anything. So he's going to do the writing and the Jones boys the printing, and they are going to get out a regular paper."

"Regular how often?"

"I don't know, but Willie has written a stack of stuff. He doesn't hear you when you talk to him, and he gets up in the night to write things so he won't forget them."

"Does, hey? I'll just take a peep into his sanctum, if I may so speak. Thought the boy was looking peaked and sorter poetical.

"What's this?" when he found a lot of manuscript in press between the bed ticks. "Well, I'll be blowed! 'Shovel Tooth Sol; or, The Man That Never Missed His Mark.' Heavens! and this: 'Frederica van Spoonerwurst, the Undaunted Heroine of the Hospital Explosion!'" Then a sketch, "Three Deals, a Call and the Coroner," followed by a short meter poem, "The Mystery of the Missing Mist."

The old gentleman said things unworthy of repetition. He ripped and rended that manuscript until it was a fluffy pile of ragged edged remnants. Then he carried it into the back yard and had a bonfire that was a thing of joy to the neighborhood children. When Willie came home, he was taken aside and labored with, but he was intractable, talking about running away to sea with the ultimate object of becoming a pirate. The last scene showed him in the barn dancing to the tune of a cherry sprout.—Detroit Free Press.

PEKIN SITUATION BRIGHTER.

Sir Halliday McCartney Says Message May Be Expected.

English Secretary of the Chinese Legation in London Says Communication With the Chinese Capital Has Been Practically Reopened—Chinese Government Now Appears Anxious to Suppress the Boxers.

London, July 23.—(4 a.m.)—Sir Chi Chen Loh Feng, the Chinese Minister in London, took the unusual step yesterday of paying a Sunday call at the Foreign Office. As Lord Salisbury was absent, the visit was without special result.

Sir Halliday Macartney, British Secretary of the Chinese legation, admitted that communication had been practically reopened with Pekin, and that messages from Sir Claude MacDonald, the British Minister, and other foregn envoys, might be expected almost immediately. He said he hoped the trouble would soon be over since the Chinese Government was doing its utmost to overcome the difficulties and control the lawless element.

Says U.S. Have Proper View.

In his opinion the Americans had taken the most commonsense view of the situation, and he insisted that China ought not to be misjudged. Against the suspicion that Li Hung Chang had any but a sincere pacific object in view, he protested warmly, declaring that all stories about the perfidy and treachery of Earl Li were "absolutely baseless."

Europeans Will Be Safe.

With regard to the prospects in the Southern Provinces, the Secretary admitted that there might be small outbreaks, but he said there would be nothing serious, and that Europeans would be quite safe in treaty ports. The long silence, he explained,, as "due probably to the rebels, who have cut the wires and blocked the roads."

Despatches Not Believed.

Thus, according to the Secretary of the Chinese legation, a few days more should bring a solution of the great mystery. Nevertheless, no one in England believes that the alleged despatches and edicts are anything but subterfuges to hide the real situation as long as possible and to avert the retribution by sowing discord among the powers.

Court May Move.

From Shanghai comes a report that the Empress-Dowager and the court are moving to Hsian Fu (in the Province of Shansi), to which the large stores of rice are sent, and that, when these arrangements are completed, the remaining Viceroys will declare against foreigners.

Disheartened by Tien Tsin's Fall.

According to the Che Foo correspondent of The Daily Mail, the fall of Tien Tsin has so disheartened the Chinese that they are seeking terms of peace. He says that several attempts have been made to send messages to Pekin, but so far without any known results, and adds that rumors are again current that the Russians are reaching Pekin from the north. It is impossible to confirm or deny these statements, but either one might explain China's efforts to gain time.

Li Hung Chang's Visit a Failure.

Li Hung Chang's visit to Shanghai the Chinese customs officials, no one has visited him. Sheng, the Taotai (Chief Magistrate), gave the consuls a cordial invitation to meet him at luncheon, but all declined.

Li's Mission to Divide the Powers.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express pretends to have authority for the assertion that Great Britain will repudiate any credentials Li Hung Chang may bring from the Empress Dowager, and adds:

"Russia, however, is willing to make terms with Li Hung Chang, whose real mission is to sow dissension among the powers. The British, German and American representatives were resolute against receiving him."

Chinese Thorely Frightened.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail declares that the Chinese officials are thorely frightened by the fall of Tien Tsin, and desire to open negotiations.

"Therefore," he continues, "altho all are aware of the horrible Pekin massacres, every official down to the humblest retainer has been sworn to secrecy upon the penalty of wholesale executions, should the details leak out. They hope, if the powers once begin negotiations, to stop the military operations that matters might cool down."

Usual Crop of Shanghai Rumors.

There is the usual crop of Shanghai rumors at hand this morning. One is that Prince Tuan has been abducted and that the Empress-Dowager is again supreme. Another is that the notorious Kang Yi, President of the Board of War, has been appointed Viceroy of Canton.

Allies Only Fighting Rebels.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Daily News says the allies have issued a proclamation announcing that they are not fighting China, but only the rebels, who have been guilty of attacks upon foreigners.

The decision to keep the Indian division at Hong Kong is supposed to be due to the disquieting proceedings of the "Black Flags" at Canton.

Bogue Forts Being Rearmed.

It is reported that the Bogue forts are being re-armed by the Chinese with quick-firing Krupps, and large stores of ammunition, and the Chinese are mounting guns and laying torpedoes at various advantageous points between Woosung and Wuchang. The foreigners and Japanese traders have evacuated Niuchwang, where the roads are now guarded by Japanese marines.

Women Advised to Leave.

All foreign women and children have been advised to leave the forts on the Yangtschiang.

Slight skirmishes are reported from Manchuria between the Russians and Chinese.

Talking of forestry encouragement, hardly is there a cut down tree that does not furnish a stump speaker in its favor.—Philadelphia Times.

ALL SAFE ON SATURDAY.

Is the Announcement Made by the Chinese Legation in London Regarding the Foreigners.

London, July 23.—The Chinese legation makes the following announcement on Saturday:

"A telegram confirming the safety of the foreign minister and other Europeans at Pekin was received at 2.30 o'clock this afternaon, from the Viceroy of Nankin, as follows:

"'In an Imperial edict issued 22nd sixth moon (July 18) to arrest and punish the criminals who murdered the German Minister, it was mentioned fortunately that the protection afforded by us to the other Ministers had been effective, and that they were all safe on July 21. Nankin.'"

The apparent conflict in the dates, an edict of July 18 reporting all safe on July 21, is not explained.

Punishment for Prince Tuan.

Paris, July 23.—The Temps, referring to the latest Chinese Imperial edict, says: "Should this prove to be an infamous and sinister comedy, organized by Prince Tuan to deceive the world, he will pay for it with his head."

Germany Tries It, Too.

Berlin, July 23.—The following despatch of Saturday's date has been received from Che Foo:

"The Governor of Shantung telegraphed this afternoon to all the Consuls here as follows: "I have just received authentic news that all the Ministers are free from molestation and are under the protection of the Government.'"

The German Consul at Che Foo sends the following:

"I have asked the Governor of Shantung to forward to the German legation at Pekin this request: 'Telegraph the same way as the American Minister, through the Tsung li Yamen, an account of what has happened, what your situation is, and what can be done for you.'"

News Via Russian Sources.

St. Petersburg. July 23.—The Chinese positions on the Amur have been cleared from Blagovestchensk as far as Khaberofsk.

Eight thousand Japanese troops arrived at Tien Tsin from Taku Monday, July 16.

Twenty-one hundred Japanese troops are commanding the positions at Che Foo, and 1,800 at Shan Hai Kuan.

Navigation on the Pei Ho River from Taku to Tien Tsin is now easy and free from marauders.

Owing to the lack of houses, 300 tents have been pitched for the wounded at Tien Tsin.

Russias' Troubles Begin.

St. Petersburg, July 23.—An Imperial ukase issued Sunday orders that a state of siege be proclaimed in the military district of Siberia Turkestan and Semiretchinsk, and that all the reservists in those districts be called to the colors.

Sheng Must Be the Shanghai Liar.

Berlin, July 23.—The Foreign Office has a cable from the Governor of Shantung, saying that he had received Minister Conger's despatch from Chinese runners, and forwarded it to Washington. The Governor of Shantung, in this telegram, also denies ever having sent a despatch to Sheng, the Administrator of Telegraphs at Shanghai, saying that the Ambassadors had been murdered.

THE LOOTING OF TIEN TSIN.

British Officially Seize a Large Amount of Chinese Treasure.

Tien Tsin, July 15, 7 p.m., via Che Foo, July 19, and Shanghai, July 20.—(Sun cable.)—This day has been devoted entirely to looting the native city and it is impossible to cable a description of the scenes that were enacted there. Millions of taels' worth of property have been taken.

The whole city is filled with an indiscriminate mob of Chinese and soldiers of all nationalities, who are breaking open stores and smashing chests and safes and rushing hither and thither with their arms filled with silks, furs, jewelry, silver bars and money.

Carrying Off Plunder.

The residents of the settlements flocked to the native city yesterday morning after it had been captured by the troops. They impressed coolies with rickshaws and carts and donkeys into service and very soon the roads between the settlements and the city were lined with a long procession of looters carrying off their plunder.

The American and Japanese troops were the only ones who made any attempt to retrain the civilian or soldier looters. The men of both these commande behaved well, the conduct of the Japanese being especially commendable under the circumstances.

Guarded Treasure.

The British sent organized parties from the warships Barfleur, Endymion and Orlando in charge of officers to guard certain treasure. It was known that the Chinese had two official treasuries containing over two million taels. The location of one of these treasuries was known.

Silver Had Been Stolen.

The allied authorities intended to seize the money, but placed a guard in the wrong place yesterday. To-day, when the mistake was discovered, the silver had nearly all been taken away.

The British guard began searching the houses in the settlements and found about 50,000 taels. The search is still going on, and guards were posted around the settlements this morning with instructions to seize all the loot brought in and also to confiscate all civilian loot that may be found in the settlements.

Gen. Dorward, the British commander, says the property seized officially in the native city exceeds in value one million taels. It will be sent to the British War Secretary to be held for such disposition as the nations interested may decide on.

Barrow Filled With Dollars.

The correspondent saw one civilian stopped in the afternoon. He had $30,000 in Mexican silver in a wheelbarrow covered with old silks. Soon afterward a party of British sailormen in charge of an officer came along with a water cart loaded with silver. The officers of the Sikh Regiment have been taking similar parties thru the city, gathering everything of any conceivable value.

Fires Everywhere.

Fires have been started thruout the city and men are fighting in the streets over loot. Revolvers have been drawn and threats of shooting are not uncommon. The Chinamen sometimes offer a show of resistance against being plundered and in these cases are shot. The looters regard the pawnshops as special prizes.

The British officers who are seizing the civilian loot say it is intended to divide it among the soldiers. There is no interference with them by the French, Russians and Japanese.

What will be done to relieve Pekin will be decided to-morrow. The various commanders are to meet and discuss plans for an advance on the Chinese capital.

The city was divided into various districts to-day. The Americans are at the south gate, the British at the north, the French at the west and the Japanese at the east gate.

The Americans, English and French are bringing large trainloads of supplies from Taku.

'E Don't no Where 'e Are.

Washington, July 22.—The Administration is determined to keep aloof from any movement that would unnecessarily entangle the Government of the United States in Chinese affairs. It is the intention of the Administration to withdraw our forces, military and naval, after the Americans in Pekin have been relieved, and wash its hands of Chinese affairs, looking only to the preservation of such privileges as it has a right to retain for Americans.

Marines Start for China.

Washington, July 22.—A brief cablegram was received by Secretary Long to-day from Rear Admiral Kempff at Taku. He announced that the Newark was going over to Nagasaki to be docked and cleaned. Altho he did not say so, it is assumed that he is going with her, as she is his flagship.

Five hundred United States marines started from this city to-day direct for China. They were placed on a special train, bound for San Francisco, where they will cross the Pacific on an army transport.

This is the largest body of marines that has yet been despatched to the east, and the departure was made conspicuous by the presence of Gen. Heywood, the commandent of marines, and the full marine band. Major Dickens commands the detachment.

MINISTERS NOT MOLESTED.

Says the Governor of Shantung, But It May Be Chinese Duplicity.

London, July 22.—(4 a.m.)—In the absence of news from China the papers devote much space to a discussion of the pros and cons of the reliability of the Chinese assertion of the safety of the Pekin Ministers. A similar discussion is being repeated in various forms at the different European capitals.

The Latest News.

The latest news is the despatch from Che Foo of the date of July 20, received in Berlin, saying that the Governor of Shantung had telegraphed all the consuls:

"I have just received authentic news to the effect that all the Ministers are free from molestation and under the protection of the Government."

While these reiterations have been causing some revival of hope, there is too great a distrust of Chinese duplicity for any acceptance of their truth.

Li at Shanghai.

A special from Shanghai announces the arrival of the An Ping, with Li Hung Chang. The consuls, at their previous meeting, agreed that if the Viceroy called they would return the visit, and then allow him to have an escort of 100 men when passing thru the settlements, it being understood that the men must be unarmed.

Li Hung Chang Ignored.

Shanghai, July 22.—Li Hung Chang, who arrived here to-day on the steamer Amping from Hong Kong, was coldly received. The native officials sent an escort of 300 armed troops, but as the French Consul objected to their passing thru the French settlement they were withdrawn, and Earl Li landed under an escort of 12 French police. Once out of French jurisdiction, he was handed over to the Cosmopolitan Settlements police, who escorted him to his place of residence on the Buffingwell-road. The Amping, having munitions of war on board, violated the harbor regulations by entering, and was compelled to leave the limits. The consuls have decided not to call upon Li Hung Chang officially.

Pleads With the Kaiser.

Paris, July 22.—The Berlin correspondent of The Temps says: "It is asserted in Berlin that the Emperor of China has sent a telegram to Emperor William, deploring the assassination of Baron Von Ketteler by the rebels, and declaring that the murderers are being actively sought and will be punished. He also expressed the hope that the relations of China and Germany would not suffer from this state of things."

Corea in Fighting Mood.

Yokohama, July 22.—The Corean Government continues to send troops to the frontier, a collision with intruding Chinese having already occurred.

No Alliance Possible.

The Japanese papers express sympathy with the unfortunate Emperor of China, but are unanimous and emphatic in declaring that an alliance between China and Japan is impossible.

British at Hong Kong.

Hong Kong, July 22.—The second India brigade has been ordered to remain here.

The British first-class battleship Goliath and two Indian transports with troops have arrived off Hong Kong.

NEW MODE OF CHEESE-MAKING.

Carleton Experimenters Have Now Caught the English Palate.

An interesting experiment in the curing of cheese is being carried on at Carp (Carleton county) under the direction of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Dairying. The English palate likes a Canadian cheese of a flavor similar to the English Cheddar, which is cured at 63 degrees Fahrenheit. At Carp a special room has been set apart in the factory, the air of which is drawn into the room through the drains, cooling it so that the temperature of the room is continuously under 65 degrees, and a flavor is given to the cheese cured in it equal to the best English make. Last year similar experiments were carried on, and the unanimous opinion of the Montreal Cheese Board was that cheese so cured was worth half a cent per pound more than cheese from the very same vat cured under ordinary circumstances. In addition, the shrinkage in weight of the cheese in the cooler room is much less. On the basis of that year's output of cheese in Canada the increased value represented by the new method would be about $300,000, or to a small factory it would represent an unusual increase of $40,000 after the initial expense of $350. The general adoption of the new system in Canada will certainly work a revolution in this important industry.

AFFAIRS IN CHINA.

the result is very disastrous indeed, as the emaciated sufferers are ill able to withstand its ravages. Everything, Col. Graves says, that can be done is being done.

ALL FROM DROUTH.

The whole trouble arises from the monsoon, which periodically fails, and involves a greater or lesser failure of the crops. What it must have been before British occupation and relief measures were devised can hardly be imagined. Whole districts were depopulated at a swoop.

Apart from the famine, India is making rapid progress, notably in railway works and extensions, which are being promoted on a large scale.

"Delays are dangerous." Those who have poor, weak, impure blood should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It never disappoints.

MANITOBA CHOPS.

Prospects Said to be Much Better and Orders May be Reversed.

Owing to the prospects of a decreased wheat crop, some Manitoba merchants have cancelled their orders, but the Merchant says it is expected that owing to the increased price of wheat, and the increased acreage in Manitoba and the North-west Territories (where the damage has been slight), many of these orders will yet be repeated, later on. There are two special reasons why a partial failure of the wheat crop may have less effect upon trade than formerly: that the farmers having had good crops for a number of years in succession, are now pretty comfortable financially, and that the country is depending less than ever before on the wheat crop. The wants of Manitoba people are greater than in previous years, and apart from the wheat crop, the purchasing power of the people is greater. Many new settlers have gone into the province with money, and the various enterprises put in operation will do much towards offsetting the reduced yield of wheat. According to the first report of the Department of Agriculture of Manitoba on the crops last month, the total wheat acreage was 1,806,215, an increase of 176,230 acres. Allowing for ten to twelve bushels per acre for this increase, the yield would be over 2,000,000 to be added to last year's crop. One of the districts showing a large increase this year was the eastern district of the province, the increase there being over 50,000 acres. The crop damage in that part of Manitoba was less serious than in the south-west and south-central, and the yield there may be well up to the average. In the North-west Territories there has been a large increase in the acreage over last year. The crop there has suffered but little from drought, and the increased production and advanced price could considerably offset the reduced yield in Manitoba. It is rather too early to make calculations, but a rough estimate gives the farmers of the prairie province about two-thirds the cash receipts for wheat last year, assuming that they only reap "half a crop," or half the yield from the same acreage as last year.

RAINY RIVER DISTRICT.

An Interview Which Tells Interestingly of That District

Mr. Wm. Margach, Government Timber Agent at Rat Portage, was in Toronto the other day and talked to a Globe reporter concerning the public timber interests under his supervision. Mr. Margach said that the lumber trade in the western part of the province was never so active as last season, and the cut of the winter of 1899-1900 was much in excess of that of any previous year. The prospects which Rainy River lumbermen had before them last winter were exceedingly bright, as the demand was active and prices high. Unfortunately, the very dry spring of the present year lowered the waters beyond a point ever known in the previous history of that section, the consequence being that lumbermen were not able to get out more than one-half of their logs from the woods, the remainder being still hung up on the various streams. The demand for lumber is quite as good as was anticipated, but already two of the large mills at Rat Portage owned by the Rat Portage Lumber Company have been obliged to close down.

Mr. Mongach was asked whether great damage had not been done by the fires which were reported to have overrun a large portion of the district last spring. He replied that the fires were widespread, and a good deal of pine timber owned by lumbermen was burned, but not so badly injured as to prevent it being saved if cut during the present season. The "borers" lost no time in getting into timber killed by fire, but a good deal of the pine is of the Norway or red variety, which has greater power of resistence than the white pine, but even the latter if cut promptly will not deteriorate very much.

"What means do you take to prevent fire?" Mr. Margach was asked.

"When fire gets a good hold in a block of pine in a dry season, especially where there has been previous cutting, it is a very difficult manner to put it out, but the remedy lies in prevention, and the Department of Crown Lands, at my suggestion, authorized me to procure whatever assistance I found necessary, in addition to my ordinary staff of rangers, to patrol the district and urge settlers, prospectors, and, in fact, everyone going into the woods to use the utmost precaution during the dry season. Little or no damage has been done to timber on Crown lands, the fire being confined almost wholly to limits owned by lumbermen. Some settlers on the Rainy River were burned out, a few losing their all. One or two families were obliged to take refuge in the river until the fire passed over their holdings." One effect of the dry season and low water, added Mr. Margach, has been to greatly impede navigation, which is still the principle method of travel in the Rainy River District. Above the Sault Rapids the Rainy River is not navigable for any but small steamers, and all freight has to be transferred at that point. This is keeping settlers from coming in, and has also prevented mine-owners from getting in stamping machinery for use in their mines. A lock at the Sault Rapids is very greatly needed.

In Mr. Mongach's opinion there are few, if any, parts of New Ontario which equal the Lake of the Woods and Rainy Lake regions in the quantity of spruce and poplar available for pulp-making purposes. There are numerous water-powers, too, which could be utilized in the manufacture of pulp and paper.

"Have the Indians in the Rainy River quieted down from the recent outbreak?" "There was no outbreak," said Mr. Margach, "except in the newspapers. The Indians from the various reserves congregated in one spot for a grand pow-wow and medicine dance, which is nothing uncommon, and the more timorous settlers construed this into a warlike demonstration. The presence of the squaws and papooses with the Indians at this gathering was sufficient evidence of the peacefulness of their intentions. A detachment of United States militia was forwarded to Koochiching, Minn., in anticipation of trouble, it having been reported to the Washington authorities that American citizens were obliged to take refuge in 'Fort' Frances, on the Canadian side. All is quiet now, however, and the Indians have gone home to their usual occupations."

Half Crazy With Piles.

Mr. Isaac Foster, Erie View, Norfolk Co., Ontario, writes:—"I was troubled with itching piles for about two years and could not sleep at nights. In fact I was half crazy from the terrible itching. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment I purchased a box. After the second application I experienced relief and one box cured me thoroughly and permanently, and that was two years ago. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box. All druggists.

Five Thousand Troops For Cuba.

Washington, July 23.—Gen. Wood, Governor-General of Cuba, had a conference with Secretary of War Root on Saturday, with the result that it was determined to keep a force of about 5,000 men in Cuba for several months yet.

Do You Fear Heart Failure?

No death comes so suddenly and unexpectedly as that caused by heart failure, but the trouble had its beginning months or perhaps years before when the blood became thin and watery and the nerves exhausted. Gradually the waste has become more rapid than the process of repair, the tissues of the heart have become diseased and finally some over exertion or nervous shock has caused the beating to cease and life to depart. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents heart failure and all similar diseases by creating new, rich blood and nerve force, and building up the system.

POTATO BUGS.

A Discovery That Will Surely Interest A. Agriculturists.

"It's a bleak day when bleeding Kansas can't produce something a little ahead," concluded the old man as he buttoned his beard inside of his coat before going out into the wind. "Got all them things in my wagon, Henery?"

"All but the shoe polish, Mr. Davis," said the storekeeper. "We hain't much call for shoe polish in Waubunsee, and we sort of let ourselves run out of polish."

"Hold on a minute, old man," interrupted the drummer from St. Louis. "What's Kansas done since Funston happened?"

"Waal, my boy Webster has kinder dabbled in science, you know, ever since he got that janitorship up at State university, and he writes me that up there they've discovered that our great state has got to grapple with a potato bug that's become poison proof. It warn't so long ago that every farmer could go out in the morning with a bucket of paris green and a light heart and a sprinkler and protect his patch. Every time a bug got a dose of paris green his little hands grew cold, his feet curled around his stomach, his tongue turned black, and he was a dead bug.

"But gradually, says Webster, the constitution of successive generations of green fed bugs have become hardened to the poison till at last the bugs are born with a craving for paris green and cry till they get it. Nowadays a bug wakes up dull and listless, with jumping nerves and a gone feeling in the pit of its striped stomach and hardly life enough to crawl to where the farmer has been sprinkling the morning poison. But one sip makes a new bug of him, and he gallops merrily around the vines, eating where he listeth.

"Webster, however, tells me that by next season it will be fatal to the bugs to stop using paris green now that they have come to lean so on it. It's like a man with the morphine habit—stop the drug, and he is a goner in horrible agony. Some morning I am going to lie in bed till 9 o'clock and let every bug in the patch have a fatal paroxysm."—New Lippincott.

Puffed Up With Pride.

He was a proud little fellow as he strutted around in a new pair of trousers that his mother had made him, and very important he looked as be squared himself in front of his best friend, the corner grocer, and said, "I bet you can't think what my trousers are made of?"

"Broadcloth?" asked the grocer.

"No," replied the little fellow.

"Corduroy, then?" ventured the grocer.

"No."

"Serge?"

"No."

"Well, what are they made of, then?"

"Pa's old ones," triumphantly replied the happy little fellow.—Answers.

Helping the Farmer.

We asked the farmer his opinion of the rural free delivery of mails.

"It is a good thing," said the farmer, having first excused himself from speaking in dialect upon the plea that he had been ordered by his doctor to avoid great exertion. "It is a great accommodation in the busy season of the year to get our green goods circulars uninterruptedly. Under the old system I have known the time when I didn't see a green goods circular for six weeks, during harvest and haying."

The Boys Got In.

The late Dan Rice, the famous circus man, was fond of boys and always wanted to see a lot of them in his audience. He never gave a performance, says the Cleveland Leader, when the nooks and corners were not filled with youngsters who had come in free.

One story of this sort was told by Captain George J. Grammer. At the time of the occurrence Grammer, who lived in Zanesville, O., was standing one afternoon with a crowd of other boys looking longingly into the tent, but not having the price of admission.

It was Mr. Rice's custom to stand at the door until the first grand entry of the circus people, when he would leave. On this occasion he saw the hungry look on the faces of the boys and called them around him. "You want to go in, don't you, boys?"

"Bet your life!" shouted back the youngsters.

"I'll tell you what. All the boys who are back here in ten minutes with clean faces and hands get in."

The words were hardly out of his mouth before there was a dash for the Muskingum river, and in less than seven minutes 200 clean faces and hands came back to the tent. The boys went inside with a rush.

Two Critics.

As my "Bed of Ferns," a large study from nature on Saranac lake, says W. J. Stillman in The Atlantic, was the first thing in which I had attempted to introduce a human interest in the landscape I was naturally inclined to consider it my most important work, and I was dismayed when Ruskin came to see me and in a tone of extreme disgust said, pointing to the dead deer and man: "What do you put that stuff in for? Take it out; it stinks!"

My reverence for Ruskin's opinions was such that I made no hesitation in painting out the central motive of the picture, for which both subject and effect of light had been selected. Unfortunately I habitually used copal varnish as a medium. When Rossetti called again, he asked me, with a look of dismay, what I had done to my picture. I explained to him that on Ruskin's advice I had painted out the figures, and exclaiming, "You have spoiled your picture!" he walked out of the room in a rage.

CONCERNING FREE SPEECH.

The Case of Mr. Wood, of St. Johns, Discussed.

Hamilton Herald, Ind.

Mr. Wood, Collector of Customs at St. John, Quebec, is one of the best abused men in his province at present. He has been denounced in Parliament by several French-Canadian members, even by the Premier. He is being daily reviled by the French press of Quebec. Even the Toronto Globe says he has "fairly laid himself open to very severe censure," and that he has abused the privileges of free speech. Loud clamors are made for his dismissal from office. One would naturally suppose that this man Wood must have been guilty of some offence grave enough to bring disgrace upon the civil service and to stamp him as a man unfit to serve Her Majesty and the Canadian people.

And yet the head and front of his offending is that he has spoken disrespectfully of the Canadian rebels of 1837!

Mr. Wood thinks that the British war in South Africa is justifiable from the British standpoint, and he thinks he is right that the Canadian soldiers should fight the Boers in a cause which he believes to be just. The population of St. John being largely French, there are many citizens of that town who think that Britain is unjustly waging war on the Boers, and that Canadian soldiers should not be helping to fight Britain's battles. Naturally the freely expressed opinion of those people has irritated Mr. Wood. But he appears to have kept his temper pretty well until one day a citizen of the town expressed the hope that the Canadians in South Africa would all be shot, and that not one of them would ever return home. That made Mr. Wood angry, and he told the citizen that the British had hanged several like him in 1837, and that they ought to have hanged more.

The men to whom Mr. Wood referred were men who had been convicted of treason. His remark was equivalent to an accusation of treason against the nice gentleman who had said he hoped that all the two thousand Canadians in South Africa would be killed. If this gentleman felt aggrieved over the insult, he had his remedy. Why didn't he lay an information against Mr. Wood for using abusive language? Most British Canadians would resent being called a traitor. Perhaps this French Canadian citizen of St. John gloried in the charge.

But Mr. Wood's offence is not that he insulted this citizen. That is a personal matter between the two men. His offence is that he spoke disrespectfully of Canadians who rebelled against the Queen's Government sixty-three years ago.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will commit a serious blunder if he heeds the clamor from Quebec and dismisses Mr. Wood. Such an act would be regarded in every English-speaking province as an outrage against justice and common decency. Extreme loyalty is sometimes [illegible], but surely it is not an offence worthy of punishment.
